PREFACE TO THE POEMS.

THE text of the present issue of Lord Byron's Poetical Works is based on that of The Works of Lord Byron, in six volumes, 12mo, which was published by John Murray in 1831. That edition followed the text of the successive issues of plays and poems which appeared in the author's lifetime, and were subject to his own revision, or that of Gifford and other accredited readers. A more or less thorough collation of the printed volumes with the MSS. which were at Moore's disposal, yielded a number of variorum readings which have appeared in subsequent editions published by John Murray. Fresh collations of the text of individual poems with the original MSS. have been made from time to time, with the result that the text of the latest edition (one-vol. 8vo, 1891) includes some emendations, and has been supplemented by additional variants. Textual errors of more or less importance, which had crept into the numerous editions which succeeded the seventeen-volume edition of 1832, were in some instances corrected, but in others passed over For the purposes of the present edition the printed text has been collated with all the MSS which passed through Moore's hands, and, also, for the first time, with MSS of the following plays and poems, viz English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, Childe Harold, Canto IV., Don Juan, Cantos VI-XVI, Werner, The Deformed Transformed, Lara, Parisina, The Prophecy of Dante, The Vision of Judgment, The Age of Bronze, The Island The only works of any importance which have been printed directly from the text of the first edition, without reference to the MSS, are the following, which appeared in The Liberal (1822-23), viz Heaven and Earth, The Blues, and Morgante Maggiore.

A new and, it is believed, an improved punctuation has been adopted In this respect Byron did not profess to prepare his MSS for the press, and the punctuation, for which Gifford is mainly responsible, has been reconsidered with reference solely to the meaning and interpretation of the sentences as they occur.

In the Hours of Idleness and Other Early Poems, the typography of the first four editions, as a rule, has been preserved. A uniform typography in accordance with modern use has been adopted for all poems of later date. Variants, being the readings of one or more MSS or of successive editions, are printed in italics immediately below the text They are marked by Roman numerals Words and lines through which the author has drawn his pen in the MSS or Revises are marked MSS crased

Poems and plays are given, so far as possible, in chronological order Childe Harold and Don Juan, which were written and published in parts, are printed continuously, and minor poems, including the first four satires, have been arranged in groups according to the date of composition Epigrams and jeux d'esprit have been placed together, in chronological order, towards the end of the sixth volume A Bibliography of the poems will immediately precede the Index at the close of the sixth volume

The edition contains at least thirty hitherto unpublished poems, including fifteen stanzas of the unfinished seventeenth canto of Don Juan, and a considerable fragment of the third part of The Deformed Transformed The eleven unpublished poems from MSS. preserved at Newstead, which appear in the first volume, are of slight if any literary value, but they reflect with singular clearness and sincerity the temper and aspirations of the tumultuous and moody stripling to whom "the numbers came," but who wisely abstained from printing them himself

Byron's notes, of which many are published for the first time, and editorial notes, enclosed in brackets, are printed immediately below the variorum readings The editorial notes are designed solely to supply the reader with references to passages in other works illustrative of the text, or to interpret expressions and allusions which lapse of time may have rendered obscure

Much of the knowledge requisite for this purpose is to be found in the articles of the Dictionary of National Biography, to which the fullest acknowledgments are due, and much has been arrived at after long research, involving a minute examination of the literature, the magazines, and often the newspapers of the period

Inasmuch as the poems and plays have been before the public for more than three quarters of a century, it has not been thought necessary to burden the notes with the eulogies and apologies of the great poets and critics who were Byron's contemporaries, and regarded his writings, both for good and evil, for praise and blame, from a different standpoint from ours. Perhaps, even yet, the time has not come for a definite and positive appreciation of his genius. The tide of feeling and opinion must ebb and flow many times before his rank and station among the poets of all time will be finally adjudged. The splendour of his reputation, which dazzled his own countrymen, and, for the first time, attracted the attention of a contemporary European audience to an English writer, has faded, and belongs to history, but the poet's work remains, inviting a more intimate and a more extended scrutiny than it has hitherto received in this country. The reader who cares to make himself acquainted with the method of Byron's workmanship, to unravel his allusions, and to follow the tenour of his verse, will, it is hoped, find some assistance in these volumes

I beg to record my especial thanks to the Earl of Lovelace for the use of MSS. of his grandfather's poems, including unpublished fragments, for permission to reproduce portraits in his possession, and for valuable information and direction in the construction of some of the notes

My grateful acknowledgments are due to Dr Garnett, C B, Dr A. H Murray, Mr R E Graves, and other officials of the British Museum, for invaluable assistance in preparing the notes, and in compiling a bibliography of the poems.

I have also to thank Mr Leslie Stephen and others for important hints and suggestions with regard to the interpretation of some obscure passages in Hints from Horace

In correcting the proofs for the press, I have had the advantage of the skill and knowledge of my friend Mr Frank E Taylor, of Chertsey, to whom my thanks are due

On behalf of the Publisher, I beg to acknowledge with gratitude the kindness of the Lady Dorchester, the Earl of Sutherland, Lord Glenesk and Sir Theodore Martin, K.C., for permission to examine MSS in their possession and of Mrs Chaworth Musters, for permission to reproduce her miniature of Miss Chaworth, and for other favours. He desires also to acknowledge the generous assistance of Mr and Miss Webb, of Newstead Abbey, in permitting the publication of MS poems, and in making transcripts for the press

I need hardly add that, throughout the progress of the work, the advice and direct assistance of Mr John Murray and Mr R. E. Prothero have been always within my reach. They have my cordial thanks

THE only Apology necessary to be adduced, in extenuation of any errors in the following collection, is, that the Author has not yet completed his nineteenth year.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE TO
HOURS OF IDLENESS
AND OTHER EARLY POEMS

THERE were four distinct issues of Byron's Juvenilia. The first collection, entitled Fugitive Pieces, was printed in quarto by S and J Ridge of Newark. Two of the poems, "The Tear" and the "Reply to Some Verses of J M B Pigot, Esq," were signed "BYRON," but the volume itself, which is without a title-page, was anonymous. It numbers sixty-six pages, and consists of thirty-eight distinct pieces. The last piece, "Imitated from Catullus To Anna," is dated November 16, 1806. The whole of this issue, with the exception of two or three copies, was destroyed. An imperfect copy, lacking pp 17-20 and pp 58-66, is preserved at Newstead. A perfect copy, which had been retained by the Rev J T Becher, at whose instance the issue was suppressed, was preserved by his family (see Life, by Karl Elze, 1872, p 450), and is now in the possession of Mr H Buxton Forman, C B. A facsimile reprint of this unique volume, limited to one hundred copies, was issued, for private circulation only, from the Chiswick Press in 1886.

Of the thirty-eight Fugitive Pieces, two poems, viz. "To Caroline" and "To Mary," together with the last six stanzas of the lines, "To Miss E P [To Eliza]," have never been republished in any edition of Byron's Poetical Works.

A second edition, small octavo, of Fugitive Pieces, entitled Poems on Various Occasions, was printed by S and J Ridge of Newark, and distributed in January, 1807. This volume was issued anonymously. It numbers 144 pages, and consists of a reproduction of thirty-six Fugitive Pieces, and of twelve hitherto unprinted poems—forty-eight in all. For references to the distribution of this issue—limited, says Moore, to one hundred copies—see letters to Mr Pigot and the Earl of Clare, dated January 16, February 6, 1807, and undated letters of the same period to Mr William Banks and Mr Falkner (Life, pp 41, 42) The annotated copy of Poems on Various Occasions, referred to in the present edition, is in the British Museum.

Early in the summer (June—July) of 1807, a volume, small octavo, named Hours of Idleness—a title henceforth associated with Byron's early poems—was printed and published by S and J. Ridge of Newark, and was sold by the following London booksellers: Crosby and Co; Longman, Hurst, Rees, and Orme; F and C. Rivington, and J. Mawman. The full title is, Hours of Idleness; a Series of Poems Original and Translated By George Gordon, Lord Byron, a Minor. It numbers 187 pages, and consists of thirty-nine poems. Of these, nineteen belonged to the original Fugitive Pieces, eight had first appeared in Poems on Various Occasions, and twelve were published for the first time. The "Fragment of a Translation from the 9th Book of Virgil's Æneid" (sic), numbering sixteen lines, reappears as "The Episode of Nisus and Euryalus, A Paraphrase from the Æneid, Lib 9," numbering 406 lines.

The final collection, also in small octavo, bearing the title Poems Original and Translated, by George Gordon, Lord Byron, second edition, was printed and published in 1808 by S and J. Ridge of Newark, and sold by the same London booksellers as Hours of Idleness. It numbers 174 pages, and consists of seventeen of the original Fugitive Pieces, four of those first published in Poems on Various Occasions, a reprint of the twelve poems first published in Hours of Idleness, and five poems which now appeared for the first time—thirty-eight poems in all. Neither the title nor the contents of this so-called second edition corresponds exactly with the previous issue.

Of the thirty-eight Fugitive Pieces which constitute the suppressed quarto, only seventeen appear in all three subsequent issues. Of the twelve additions to Poems on Various Occasions, four were excluded from Hours of Idleness, and four more from Poems Original and Translated.

The collection of minor poems entitled Hours of Idleness, which has been included in every edition of Byron's Poetical Works issued by John Murray since 1851, consists of seventy pieces, being the aggregate of the poems published in the three issues, Poems on Various Occasions, Hours of Idleness, and Poems Original and Translated, together with five other poems of the same period derived from other sources.

In the present issue a general heading, "Hours of Idleness, and other Early Poems," has been applied to the entire collection of Early Poems, 1802-1809. The quarto has

The remainder of the series, viz poems first published in Moore's Life and Journals of Lord Byron (1830), poems hitherto unpublished, poems first published in the Works of Lord Byron (1832), and poems contributed to J. C. Hobhouse's Imitations and Translations (1809), have been arranged in chronological order. TO

ENGLISH BARDS, AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

THE MS (MS. M) of the first draft of Byron's "Satire" (see Letter to Pigot, October 26, 1807) is now in Mr Murray's possession. It is written on folio sheets paged 6-25, 28-41, and numbers 360 lines. Mutilations on pages 12, 13, 34, 35 account for the absence of ten additional lines.

After the publication of the January number of The Edinburgh Review for 1808 (containing the critique on Hours of Idleness), which was delayed till the end of February, Byron added a beginning and an ending to the original draft. The MSS of these additions, which number ninety lines, are written on quarto sheets, and have been bound up with the folios. (Lines 1-16 are missing.) The poem, which with these and other additions had run up to 560 lines, was printed in book form (probably by Ridge of Newark), under the title of British Bards, A Satire. "This Poem," writes Byron [MSS M], "was begun in October, 1807, in London, and at different intervals composed from that period till September, 1808, when it was completed at Newstead Abbey—B, 1808." A date, 1808, is affixed to the last line. Only one copy is extant, that which was purchased, in 1867, from the executors of R. C. Dallas by the Trustees of the British Museum. Even this copy has been mutilated. Pages 17, 18, which must have contained the first version of the attack on Jeffrey (see English Bards, p. 332, line 439, note 2) have been torn out, and quarto proof-sheets in smaller type of lines 438-527, "Hail to immortal Jeffrey," etc., together with a quarto proof-sheet, in the same type as British Bards, containing lines 540-559, "Illustrious Holland," etc., have been inserted. Hobhouse's lines (first edition, lines 247-262), which are not in the original draft, are included in British Bards. The insertion of the proofs increased the printed matter to 584 lines. After the completion of this revised version of British Bards, additions continued to be made. Marginal corrections and MS fragments, bound up with British Bards, together with forty-four lines (lines 723-726, 819-858) which do not occur in MS M, make up with the printed matter the 696 lines which were published in March, 1809, under the title of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers. The folio and quarto sheets in Mr Murray's possession (MS M) may be regarded as the MS of British Bards, British Bards (there are a few alterations, eg the substitution of lines 319-326, "Moravians, arise," etc., for the eight lines on Pratt, which are to be found in the folio MS, and are printed in British Bards), with its accompanying MS fragments, as the foundation of the text of the first edition of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers.

Between the first edition, published in March, and the second edition in October, 1809, the difference is even greater than between the first edition and British Bards. The Preface was enlarged, and a postscript affixed to the text of the poem. Hobhouse's lines (first edition, 247-262) were omitted, and the following additional passages inserted, viz (i) lines 1-96, "Still must I hear," etc., (ii) lines 129-142, "Thus saith the Preacher," etc., (iii) lines 363-417, "But if some new-born whim," etc., (iv) lines 638-706, "Or hail at once," etc., (v) lines 765-798, "When some brisk youth," etc., (vi) lines 859-880, "And here let Shee," etc., (vii) lines 949-960, "Yet what avails," etc., (viii) lines 973-980, "There, Clarke," etc., (ix) lines 1011-1070, "Then hapless Britain," etc. These additions number 370 lines, and, together with the 680 lines of the first edition (reduced from 696 by the omission of Hobhouse's contribution), make up the 1050 lines of the second and third editions, and the doubtful fourth edition of 1810. Of these additions, Nos i, ii, iii, iv, vi, viii, ix, exist in MS, and are bound up with the folio MS now in Mr Murray's possession.

The third edition, which is, generally, dated 1810, is a replica of the second edition.

The first issue of the fourth edition, which appeared in 1810, is identical with the second and third editions. A second issue of the fourth edition, dated 1811, must have passed under Byron's own supervision. Lines 723, 724 are added, and lines 725, 726 are materially altered. The fourth edition of 1811 numbers 1052 lines.

The suppressed fifth edition, numbering 1070 lines (the copy in the British Museum has the title-page of the fourth edition, a second copy, in Mr Murray's possession, has no title-page), varies from the fourth edition of 1811 by the addition of lines 97-102 and 528-539, and by some twenty-nine emendations of the text. Eighteen of these emendations were made by Byron in a copy of the fourth edition which belonged to Leigh Hunt. On another copy, in Mr Murray's possession, Byron made nine emendations, of which six are identical with those in the Hunt copy, and three appear for the first time. It was in the latter volume that he inscribed his after-thoughts, which are dated "B 1816."

For a complete collation of the five editions of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, and textual emendations in the two annotated volumes, and for a note on genuine and spurious copies of the first and other editions, see The Bibliography of the Poetical Works of Lord Byron, vol. vi.

He is described by Clarendon (Hist of the Rebellion, 1807, 1 216) as "a person of great affability and dexterity, as well as martial knowledge." He was Governor of Carlisle, and afterwards Governor of Chester. His nephew and heir-at-law, Sir John Byron, of Clayton, K.B. He held successively the posts of Lieutenant of the Tower, Governor of Chester, and, after the expulsion of the Royal Family from England, Governor to the Duke of York. He died childless, and was succeeded by his brother Richard, the second lord, from whom the poet was descended. Five younger brothers, as Richard's monument in the chancel of Hucknall Torkard Church records, "faithfully served King Charles the First in

HUSH'D are the winds, and still the evening gloom,
 Not e'en a zephyr wanders through the grove,
 Whilst I return to view my Margaret's tomb,
 And scatter flowers on the dust I love

1 The author claims the indulgence of the reader more for this piece than, perhaps, any other in the collection, but as it was written at an earlier period than the rest (being composed at the age of fourteen), and his first essay, he preferred submitting it to the indulgence of his friends in its present state, to making either addition or alteration —[4to]

["My first dash into poetry was as early as 1800 It was the ebullition of a passion for my first cousin, Margaret Parker (daughter and granddaughter of the two Admirals Parker), one of the most beautiful of evanescent beings I have long forgotten the verse, but it would be difficult for me to forget her—her dark eyes—her long eye-lashes—her completely Greek cast of face and figure! I was then about twelve—she rather older, perhaps a year She died about a year or two afterwards, in consequence of a fall, which injured her spine, and induced consumption I knew nothing of her illness, being at Harrow and in the country till she was gone Some years after, I made an attempt at an elegy—a very dull one."—Byron Diary, 1821, Life, p. 17]

[Margaret Parker was the sister of Sir Peter Parker, whose death at Baltimore, in 1814, Byron celebrated in the "Elegiac Stanzas," which were first published in the poems attached to the seventh edition of Childe Harold]

Within this narrow cell reclines her clay,
 That clay, where once such animation beam'd,
 The King of Terrors seiz'd her as his prey,
 Not worth, nor beauty, have her life redeem'd

3

Oh ! could that King of Terrors pity feel,
 Or Heaven reverse the dread decree of fate,
 Not here the mourner would his grief reveal,
 Not here the Muse her virtues would relate

But wherefore weep ? Her matchless spirit soars
 Beyond where splendid shines the orb of day,
 And weeping angels lead her to those bowers,
 Where endless pleasures virtuous deeds repay

And shall presumptuous mortals Heaven arraign !
 And, madly, Godlike Providence accuse !
 Ah ! no, far fly from me attempts so vain, —
 I'll ne'er submission to my God refuse

6

Yet is remembrance of those virtues dear,
 Yet fresh the memory of that beauteous face,
 Still they call forth my warm affection's tear,
 Still in my heart retain their wonted place.<sup>1</sup>

 Yet, in my heart, thou keep'st thy seat,<sup>11</sup>
 There, there, thine image still must rest,
 Until that heart shall cease to beat

I

THINK'ST thou I saw thy beauteous eyes,
 Suffus'd in tears, implore to stay,
 And heard unmov'd thy plenteous sighs,
 Which said far more than words can say? <sup>ii</sup>

Though keen the grief thy tears exprest, <sup>iii</sup>
 When love and hope lay both o'erthrown,
 Yet still, my girl, this bleeding breast
 Throbb'd, with deep sorrow, as thine own

3

But, when our cheeks with anguish glow'd,
 When thy sweet lips were join'd to mine,
 The tears that from my eyelids flow'd
 Were lost in those which fell from thine

4

Thou could'st not feel my burning cheek,
Thy gushing tears had quench'd its flame,
 And, as thy tongue essay'd to speak,
 In sighs alone it breath'd my name

5

And yet, my girl, we weep in vain,
 In vain our fate in sighs deplore,
 Remembrance only can remain,
 But that, will make us weep the more

6

Again, thou best belov'd, adieu !
 Ah ! if thou canst, o'ercome regret,
 Nor let thy mind past joys review,
 Our only hope is, to forget !

1

You say you love, and yet your eye
 No symptom of that love conveys,
 You say you love, yet know not why,
 Your cheek no sign of love betrays

2

Ah ! did that breast with ardour glow,
 With me alone it joy could know,
 Or feel with me the listless woe,
 Which racks my heart when far from thee

3

Whene'er we meet my blushes rise,
And mantle through my purpled cheek,
But yet no blush to mine replies,
Nor e'en your eyes your love bespeak

4

Your voice alone declares your flame,
And though so sweet it breathes my name,
Our passions still are not the same ,
Alas ! you cannot love like me

5

For e'en your lip seems steep'd in snow,
And though so oft it meets my kiss,
It burns with no responsive glow,
Nor melts like mine in dewy bliss

6

Ah ! what are words to love like mine,
Though uttered by a voice like thine,
I still in murmurs must repine,
And think that love can ne'er be true,

7

Which meets me with no joyous sign,
Without a sigh which bids adieu ,
How different is my love from thine,
How keen my grief when leaving you

8

Your image fills my anxious breast,
Till day declines adown the West,
And when at night, I sink to rest,
    In dreams your fancied form I view

9

'Tis then your breast, no longer cold,
    With equal ardour seems to burn,
While close your arms around me fold,
    Your lips my kiss with warmth return

10

Ah ! would these joyous moments last ,
Van HOPE ! the gay delusion 's past,
That voice !—ah ! no, 'tis but the blast,
    Which echoes through the neighbouring grove

11

But when awake, your lips I seek,
    And clasp enraptur'd all your charms,
So chill's the pressure of your cheek,
    I fold a statue in my arms

12

If thus, when to my heart embrac'd,
No pleasure in your eyes is trac'd,
You may be prudent, fair, and chaste,
    But ah ! my girl, you do not love

SINCE now the hour is come at last,
When you must quit your anxious lover ,
Since now, our dream of bliss is past,
One pang, my girl, and all is over

2

Alas ! that pang will be severe,
Which bids us part to meet no more ,
Which tears me far from one so dear,
Departing for a distant shore

3

Well ! we have pass'd some happy hours,
And joy will mingle with our tears ,
When thinking on these ancient towers,
The shelter of our infant years ,

4

Where from this Gothic casement's height,
We view'd the lake, the park, the dell,
And still, though tears obstruct our sight,
We lingering look a last farewell,

5

O'er fields through which we us'd to run,
And spend the hours in childish play ,
O'er shades where, when our race was done,
Reposing on my breast you lay ,

6

Whilst I, admiring, too remiss,
Forgot to scare the hovering flies,
Yet envied every fly the kiss,
It dar'd to give your slumbering eyes

7

See still the little painted bark,
In which I row'd you o'er the lake ,
See there, high waving o'er the park,
The elm I clamber'd for your sake

8

These times are past, our joys are gone,
You leave me, leave this happy vale ,
These scenes, I must retrace alone ,
Without thee, what will they avail ?

9

Who can conceive, who has not prov'd,
The anguish of a last embrace ?
When, torn from all you fondly lov'd,
You bid a long adieu to peace

Thus is the deepest of our woes,
 For this these tears our cheeks bedew,
 This is of love the final close,
 Oh, God ! the fondest, last adieu !

EPITAPH ON A BELOVED FRIEND

Ἄνεστης ἔτι τοι θάνατος οὐδὲ γέννησις ἐστίν.

[Plutarch Epitaph (1 p. 7, Græc. J. vol. 4, 1825, p. 302, quoted by Dece. Lærtia.)]

Oh, Friend! for ever lov'd, for ever dear!

What gentler tears have bathed thy honour'd bier?

EPITAPH ON A BELOVED FRIEND

What sighs re-echo'd to thy parting breath,
 Whilst thou wast struggling in the pangs of death !
 Could tears retard the tyrant in his course ,
 Could sighs avert his dart's relentless force ,
 Could youth and virtue claim a short delay,
 Or beauty charm the spectre from his prey ,
 Thou still hadst liv'd to bless my aching sight,
 Thy comrade's honour and thy friend's delight
 If yet thy gentle spirit hover nigh
 The spot where now thy mouldering ashes lie,
 Here wilt thou read, recorded on my heart,
 A grief too deep to trust the sculptor's art.
 No marble marks thy couch of lowly sleep,
 But living statues there are seen to weep ,
 Affliction's semblance bends not o'er thy tomb,
 Affliction's self deplores thy youthful doom
 What though thy sire lament his failing line,
 A father's sorrows cannot equal mine !
 Though none, like thee, his dying hour will cheer,
 Yet other offspring soothe his anguish here

Friend " The motto was prefixed in Hours of Idleness The epigram which Bergk leaves under Plato's name was translated by Shelley (Poems, 1895, iii 361)—

" Thou wert the morning star
     Among the living,
 Ere thy fair light had fled ,
 Now having died, thou art as Hesperus, giving
 New splendour to the dead "

There is an echo of the Greek distich in Byron's exquisite line, " The Morning-Star of Memory "]

But, who with me shall hold thy former place?
 Thine image, what new friendship can efface?
 Ah, none !—a father's tears will cease to flow,
 Time will assuage an infant brother's woe,
 To all, save one, is consolation known,
 While solitary Friendship sighs alone.

WHEN, to their airy hall, my Fathers' voice
 Shall call my spirit, joyful in their choice,
 When, pois'd upon the gale, my form shall ride,
 Or, dark in mist, descend the mountain's side,
 Oh! may my shade behold no sculptur'd urns,
 To mark the spot where earth to earth returns'
 No lengthen'd scroll, no praise-encumber'd stone,<sup>2</sup>
 My epitaph shall be my name alone<sup>3</sup>
 If that with honour fail to crown my clay,<sup>4</sup>
 Oh! may no other fame my deeds repay!
That, only that, shall single out the spot,

OH! when shall the grave hide for ever my sorrow?

Oh! when shall my soul wing her flight from this clay?

The present is hell<sup>1</sup> and the coming to-morrow
 But brings, with new torture, the curse of to-day

2.

From my eye flows no tear, from my lips flow no curses,<sup>1</sup>
 I blast not the fiends who have hurl'd me from bliss
 For poor is the soul which, bewailing, rehearses
 Its querulous grief, when in anguish like this—

Was my eye, 'stead of tears with red fury flakes bright'ning,
 Would my lips breathe a flame which no stream could assuage,
 On our foes should my glance launch in vengeance its lightning,
 With transport my tongue give a loose to its rage

4

But now tears and curses, alike unavailing,
 Would add to the souls of our tyrants delight,
 Could they view us our sad separation bewailing,
 Their merciless hearts would rejoice at the sight

5

Yet, still, though we bend with a feign'd resignation,
 Life beams not for us with one ray that can cheer,
 Love and Hope upon earth bring no more consolation,
 In the grave is our hope, for in life is our fear

Oh ! when, my ador'd, in the tomb will they place me,
Since, in life, love and friendship for ever are fled ?
If again in the mansion of death I embrace thee,
Perhaps they will leave unmolested—the dead

WHEN I hear you express an affection so warm,
Ne'er think, my belov'd, that I do not believe,
For your lip would the soul of suspicion disarm,
And your eye beams a ray which can never deceive

Yet still, this fond bosom regrets, while adoring,
That love, like the leaf, must fall into the sear,
That Age will come on, when Remembrance, deploring,
Contemplates the scenes of her youth, with a tear,

That the time must arrive, when, no longer retaining
Their auburn, those locks must wave thin to the breeze,

'Tis this, my belov'd, which spreads gloom o'er my features,

Though I ne'er shall presume to arraign the decree
Which God has proclaim'd as the fate of his creatures,
In the death which one day will deprive you of me <sup>i</sup>.

5

Mistake not, sweet sceptic, the cause of emotion,<sup>ii</sup>
No doubt can the mind of your lover invade,
He worships each look with such faithful devotion,
A smile can enchant, or a tear can dissuade

But as death, my belov'd, soon or late shall o'ertake us,
And our breasts, which alive with such sympathy glow,
Will sleep in the grave, till the blast shall awake us,
When calling the dead, in Earth's bosom laid low

Oh ! then let us drain, while we may, draughts of pleasure,
Which from passion, like ours, must unceasingly flow,<sup>iii</sup>
Let us pass round the cup of Love's bliss in full measure,
And quaff the contents as our nectar below.

To rivet the fetters of husband and wife,
By our lips, by our hearts, were our vows alone utter'd,
To perform them, in full, would ask more than a life —[4to]

ON A DISTANT VIEW OF THE VILLAGE AND SCHOOL OF HARROW ON THE HILL, 1806.

Oh ! mihi preteritos referat si Jupiter annos <sup>1</sup>—VIRGIL

I

YE scenes of my childhood, whose lov'd recollection
Embitters the present, compar'd with the past,
Where science first dawn'd on the powers of reflection,
And friendships were form'd, too romantic to last, <sup>2</sup>

Where fancy, yet, joys to retrace the resemblance
Of comrades, in friendship and mischief allied, <sup>3</sup>
How welcome to me your ne'er fading remembrance, <sup>4</sup>
Which rests in the bosom, though hope is deny'd !

3

Again I revisit the hills where we sported,
The streams where we swam, and the fields where we fought, <sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> ["My school-friendships were with me passions (for I was always violent), but I do not know that there is one which has endured (to be sure, some have been cut short by death) till now"—Diary, 1821, Life, p 21]

<sup>3</sup> [Byron was at first placed in the house of Mr Henry Drury, but in 1803 was removed to that of Mr Evans "The reason why Lord Byron wishes for the change, arises from the repeated complaints of Mr Henry Drury respecting his inattention to business, and his propensity to make others laugh and disregard their employment as much as himself."—Dr JOSEPH DRURY to Mr JOHN HANSON]

<sup>4</sup> ["At Harrow I fought my way very fairly I think I lost but one battle out of seven"—Diary, 1821, Life, p 21]

The school where, loud warn'd by the bell, we resorted,
To pore o'er the precepts by Pedagogues taught

4

Again I behold where for hours I have ponder'd,
As reclining, at eve, on yon tombstone<sup>1</sup> I lay,
Or round the steep brow of the churchyard I wander'd,
To catch the last gleam of the sun's setting ray

I once more view the room, with spectators surrounded,
Where, as Zanga,<sup>2</sup> I trod on Alonzo o'erthrown,
While, to swell my young pride, such applauses resounded,
I fancied that Mossop<sup>3</sup> himself was outshone

6

Or, as Lear, I pour'd forth the deep imprecation,
By my daughters, of kingdom and reason depriv'd,
Till, fir'd by loud plaudits and self-adulation,
I regarded myself as a Garrick reviv'd<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> [A tomb in the churchyard at Harrow was so well known to be his favourite resting-place, that the boys called it "Byron's Tomb" and here, they say, he used to sit for hours, wrapt up in thought.—Life, p. 26]

<sup>2</sup> [For the display of his declamatory powers, on the speech-days, he selected always the most vehement passages, such as the speech of Zanga over the body of Alonzo, and Lear's address to the storm—Life, p. 20, note, and post, p. 103, var 1]

Ye dreams of my boyhood, how much I regret you !
 Unfaded your memory dwells in my breast ,<sup>1</sup>
 Though sad and deserted, I ne'er can forget you
 Your pleasures may still be in fancy possess

8

To Ida full oft may remembrance restore me,<sup>11</sup>
 While Fate shall the shades of the future unroll !
 Since Darkness o'ershadows the prospect before me,
 More dear is the beam of the past to my soul !

But if, through the course of the years which await me,
 Some new scene of pleasure should open to view,
 I will say, while with rapture the thought shall elate me,
 " Oh ! such were the days which my infancy knew " <sup>1</sup>

 Thus sad and deserted, I ne'er can forget you,
 Though this heart throbs to bursting by anguish possess —* [4to]
Your memory beams through this agoniz'd breast —
[P on V Occasions]

<sup>11</sup> *I thought this poor brain, fever'd even to madness,
 Of tears as of reason for ever was drain'd ,
 But the drops which now flow down this bosom of sadness,
 Convince me the springs have some moisture retain'd*

*Sweet scenes of my childhood ! your blest recollection,
 Has wrung from these eyelids, to weeping long dead,
 In torrents, the tears of my warmest affection,
 The last and the fondest, I ever shall shed —*

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY A COLLEGE EXAMINATION

HIGH in the midst, surrounded by his peers,
 MAGNUS<sup>1</sup> his ample front sublime uprears<sup>4</sup>
 Plac'd on his chair of state, he seems a God,
 While Sopras<sup>2</sup> and Freshmen tremble at his rod
 As all around sit wrapt in speechless gloom.<sup>5</sup>
H's voice, in thunder, shakes the sounding dome:
 Denouncing dire reproach to luckless fools,
 Unskill'd to plod in mathematic rules

Happy the youth in Eucl'd's axioms tried,
 Though little vers'd in any art beside
 Who, scarcely skill'd an English line to pen.<sup>6</sup>
 Scans Attic metres with a critic's ken.

More than the verse on which the critic wrote
 Vain as their honours, heavy as their Ale,<sup>1</sup>
 Sad as their wit, and tedious as their tale, 60
 To friendship dead, though not untaught to feel,
 When Self and Church demand a Bigot zeal
 With eager haste they court the lord of power,<sup>1</sup>
 (Whether 'tis PITT or PETTY<sup>2</sup> rules the hour,)
 To him, with suppliant smiles, they bend the head,
 While distant mitres to their eyes are spread,<sup>11</sup>
 But should a storm o'erwhelm him with disgrace,
 They'd fly to seek the next, who fill'd his place
Such are the men who learning's treasures guard<sup>1</sup>
Such is their practice, such is their reward! 70
 Thus much, at least, we may presume to say—
 The premium can't exceed the price they pay<sup>111</sup>

Porson's Devil's Walk This was a common misapprehension at the time. The Devil's Thoughts was the joint composition of Coleridge and Southey, but it was generally attributed to Porson, who took no trouble to disclaim it. It was originally published in the Morning Post, Sept. 6, 1799, and Stuart, the editor, said that it raised the circulation of the paper for several days after (See Coleridge's Poems (1893), pp 147, 621)]

1 [Lines 59-62 are not in the Quarto They first appeared in Poems Original and Translated]

2 Since this was written, Lord Henry Petty has lost his place, and subsequently (I had almost said consequently) the honour of representing the University. A fact so glaring requires no comment. [Lord Henry Petty, M P for the University of Cambridge, was Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1805, but in 1807 he lost his seat. In 1809 he succeeded his brother as Marquis of Lansdowne. He died in 1863.]

Sweet copy ! far more dear to me,
Lifeless, unfeeling as thou art,
Than all the living forms could be,
Save her who plac'd thee next my heart

6

She plac'd it, sad, with needless fear,
Lest time might shake my wavering soul,
Unconscious that her image there
Held every sense in fast controul

Thro' hours, thro' years, thro' time, 'twill cheer—
My hope, in gloomy moments, raise ,
In life's last conflict 'twill appear,

ON THE DEATH OF MR FOX,<sup>1</sup>

THE FOLLOWING ILLIBERAL IMPROMPTU APPEARED IN THE "MORNING POST."

"OUR Nation's foes lament on Fox's death,
But bless the hour, when PITT resign'd his breath
These feelings wide, let Sense and Truth unclue,
We give the palm, where Justice points its due"

TO WHICH THE AUTHOR OF THESE PIECES SENT THE FOLLOWING REPLY<sup>1</sup> FOR INSERTION IN THE
"MORNING CHRONICLE"

OH, factious viper<sup>i</sup> whose envenom'd tooth
Would mangle, still, the dead, perverting truth,<sup>ii</sup>
What, though our "nation's foes" lament the fate,
With generous feeling, of the good and great,
Shall dastard tongues essay to blast the name<sup>iii</sup>
Of him, whose meed exists in endless fame?
When PITT expir'd in plenitude of power,
Though ill success obscur'd his dying hour,

<sup>ii</sup> Would mangle, still, the dead, in spite of truth —[4to]

Of him, whose virtues claim eternal fame?* —[4to]

<sup>1</sup> [The stanza on the death of Fox appeared in the Morning Post, September 26, 1806]

Pity her dewy wings before him spread,
 For noble spirits "war not with the dead."
 His friends in tears, a last sad requiem gave,
 As all his errors slumber'd in the grave,<sup>i</sup>
 He sunk, an Atlas bending 'neath the weight<sup>ii</sup>
 Of cares o'erwhelming our conflicting state
 When, lo! a Hercules, in Fox, appear'd,
 Who for a time the ruin'd fabric rear'd
 He, too, is fall'n, who Britain's loss supplied,<sup>iii</sup>
 With him, our fast reviving hopes have died,
 Not one great people, only, raise his urn,
 All Europe's far-extended regions mourn
 "These feelings wide, let Sense and Truth unclue,
 To give the palm where Justice points its due,"<sup>iv</sup>
 Yet, let not canker'd Calumny assail,<sup>v</sup>
 Or round her statesman wind her gloomy veil.
 Fox! o'er whose corse a mourning world must weep,
 Whose dear remains in honour'd marble sleep,
 For whom, at last, e'en hostile nations groan,
 While friends and foes, alike, his talents own —<sup>vi</sup>

i And all his errors —[4to]

ii He died, an Atlas bending 'neath the weight
 Of cares oppressing our unhappy state
 But lo! another Hercules appeared —[4to]

iii He too is dead who still our England propp'd
 With him our fast reviving hopes have dropp'd —[4to]

iv And give the palm —[4to]

v But let not canker'd Calumny assail
 And round —[4to]

vi And friends and foes —[4to]

Fox <sup>1</sup> shall, in Britain's future annals, shine,
 Nor e'en to PITT, the patriot's palm resign,
 Which Envy, wearing Candour's sacred mask,
 For PITT, and PITT alone, has dar'd to ask <sup>1</sup>

[SOUTHWELL, Oct, 1806] <sup>1</sup>

TO A LADY WHO PRESENTED TO THE AUTHOR
 A LOCK OF HAIR BRAIDED WITH HIS OWN,
 AND APPOINTED A NIGHT IN DECEMBER TO MEET HIM IN THE GARDEN <sup>2</sup>

THESE locks, which fondly thus entwine,
 In firmer chains our hearts confine,
 Than all th' unmeaning protestations
 Which swell with nonsense, love orations
 Our love is fix'd, I think we've prov'd it,
 Nor time, nor place, nor art have mov'd it,
 Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
 With groundless jealousy repine,
 With silly whims, and fancies frantic,
 Merely to make our love romantic?
 Why should you weep, like Lydia Languish,
 And fret with self-created anguish?

1 ——— would dare to ask —[4to]

1 [This MS is preserved at Newstead]

2 [These lines are addressed to the same Mary referred to in the lines beginning, "This faint resemblance of thy charms" (Vide ante, p 32)]

Or doom the lover you have chosen,
On winter nights to sigh half frozen ,
In leafless shades, to sue for pardon,
Only because the scene's a garden ?
For gardens seem, by one consent,
(Since Shakespeare set the precedent ,
Since Juliet first declar'd her passion)
To form the place of assignation
Oh ! would some modern muse inspire,
And seat her by a sea-coal fire ,
Or had the bard at Christmas written,
And laid the scene of love in Britain ,
He surely, in commiseration,
Had chang'd the place of declaration
In Italy, I've no objection,
Warm nights are proper for reflection ,
But here our climate is so rigid,
That love itself, is rather frigid
Think on our chilly situation,
And curb this rage for imitation
Then let us meet, as oft we've done,
Beneath the influence of the sun ,
Or, if at midnight I must meet you,
Within your mansion let me greet you <sup>1</sup>
There, we can love for hours together,
Much better, in such snowy weather,
Than plac'd in all th' Arcadian groves,

1 Oh ! let me in your chamber greet you —[4to]

That ever witness'd rural loves ,
Then, if my passion fail to please,<sup>1</sup>
 Next night I'll be content to freeze ,
 No more I'll give a loose to laughter,
 But curse my fate, for ever after <sup>1</sup>

TO A BEAUTIFUL QUAKER <sup>2</sup>

SWEET girl ! though only once we met,
 That meeting I shall ne'er forget ,

<sup>1</sup> In the above little piece the author has been accused by some candid readers of introducing the name of a lady [Julia Leacroft] from whom he was some hundred miles distant at the time this was written , and poor Juliet, who has slept so long in "the tomb of all the Capulets," has been converted, with a trifling alteration of her name, into an English damsel, walking in a garden of their own creation, during the month of December, in a village where the author never passed a winter. Such has been the candour of some ingenious critics. We would advise these liberal commentators on taste and arbiters of decorum to read Shakespeare

Having heard that a very severe and indelicate censure has been passed on the above poem, I beg leave to reply in a quotation from an admired work, Carr's Stranger in France —"As we were contemplating a painting on a large scale, in which, among other figures, is the uncovered whole length of a warrior, a prudish-looking lady, who seemed to have touched the age of desperation, after having attentively surveyed it through her glass, observed to her party that there was a great deal of indecorum in that picture. Madame S shrewdly whispered in my ear 'that the indecorum was in the remark.'"—[Ed 1803, cap xvi p 171. Compare the note on verses addressed "To a Knot of Un-generous Critics," p 213 ]

And though we ne'er may meet again,
Remembrance will thy form retain ;
I would not say, " I love," but still,
My senses struggle with my will
In vain to drive thee from my breast,
My thoughts are more and more repress ,
In vain I check the rising sighs,
Another to the last replies
Perhaps, this is not love, but yet,
Our meeting I can ne'er forget

What, though we never silence broke,
Our eyes a sweeter language spoke ,
The tongue in flattering falsehood deals,
And tells a tale it never feels
Deceit, the guilty lips impart,
And hush the mandates of the heart ,
But soul's interpreters, the eyes,
Spurn such restraint, and scorn disguise
As thus our glances oft convers'd,
And all our bosoms felt rehears'd,
No spirit, from within, reprov'd us,
Say rather, " 'twas the spirit mov'd us "
Though, what they utter'd, I repress,
Yet I conceive thou'lt partly guess ,
For as on thee, my memory ponders,
Perchance to me, thine also wanders
This, for myself, at least, I'll say,

Thy form appears through night, through day
 Awake, with it my fancy teems,
 In sleep, it smiles in fleeting dreams.
 The vision charms the hours away
 And bids me curse Aurora's ray
 For breaking slumbers of delight,
 Which make me wish for endless night
 Since, oh ! whate'er my future fate,
 Shall joy or woe my steps await
 Tempted by love, by storms beset.
 Thine image, I can ne'er forget

Alas ! again no more we meet,
 No more our former looks repeat,
 Then, let me breathe this parting prayer,
 The dictate of my bosom's care.
 " May Heaven so guard my lovely quaker,
 That anguish never can o'ertake her -
 That peace and virtue ne'er forsake her,
 But bliss be aye her heart's partaker !
 Oh ! may the happy mortal, fated
 To be, by dearest ties, related,
 For her, each hour, new joys discover.<sup>1</sup>
 And lose the husband in the lover '

1. The Quarto inserts the following lines —

*" No jealous passion's al' true,
 No envy that pure heart's perfume
 For he that revels in such charms,
 Can never seek another's arms*

11. — new joy discover — [410]

May that fair bosom never know
 What 'tis to feel the restless woe,
 Which stings the soul, with vain regret,
 Of him, who never can forget ! ”

TO LESBIA <sup>1 1</sup>

I

LESBIA ! since far from you I've rang'd,<sup>i</sup>
 Our souls with fond affection glow not,
 You say, 'tis I, not you, have chang'd,
 I'd tell you why,—but yet I know not

2

Your polish'd brow no cares have crost,
 And Lesbia ! we are not much older,<sup>ii</sup>
 Since, trembling, first my heart I lost,
 Or told my love, with hope grown bolder

3

Sixteen was then our utmost age,
 Two years have lingering pass'd away, love !
 And now new thoughts our minds engage,
 At least, I feel disposed to stray, love !

4.

'Tis I that am alone to blame,
I, that am guilty of love's treason,
 Since your sweet breast is still the same,
 Caprice must be my only reason

5.

I do not, love ! suspect your truth,
 With jealous doubt my bosom heaves not
 Warm was the passion of my youth,
 One trace of dark deceit it leaves not.

6

No, no, my flame was not pretended
 For, oh ! I lov'd you most sincerely
 And though our dream at last is ended
 My bosom still esteems you dearly

7.

No more we meet in yonder bowers
 Absence has made me prone to roving,
 But older, firmer hearts than ours
 Have found monotony in loving

Your cheek's soft bloom is unimpair'd,
 New beauties, still, are daily bright'ning
 Your eye, for conquest beams prepar'd,<sup>i</sup>
 The forge of love's resistless lightning

i. Perfected by sun's to fire for nothing —[410]

ii. Your eye for conquest comes prepared —[410]

9.

Arm'd thus, to make their bosoms bleed,
 Many will throng, to sigh like me, love !
 More constant they may prove, indeed ,
 Fonder, alas ! they ne'er can be, love !

[1806]

TO WOMAN

WOMAN ! experience might have told me <sup>i</sup>
 That all must love thee, who behold thee
 Surely experience might have taught
 Thy firmest promises are nought , <sup>ii</sup>
 But, plac'd in all thy charms before me,
 All I forget, but to adore thee
 Oh memory ! thou choicest blessing,
 When join'd with hope, when still possessing , <sup>iii</sup>
 But how much curst by every lover
 When hope is fled, and passion's over
 Woman, that fair and fond deceiver,
 How prompt are striplings to believe her !
 How throbs the pulse, when first we view
 The eye that rolls in glossy blue,

i Surely, experience —[4to]

ii A woman's promises are naught —[4to]

iii Here follows, in the Quarto, an additional couplet —
Thou whisperest, as our hearts are beating,
" What oft we've done, we're still repeating "

Or sparkles black, or mildly throws
 A beam from under hazel brows '
 How quick we credit every oath
 And hear her plight the willing troth !
 Fondly we hope twill last for ay
 When lo ! she changes in a day.
 This record will for ever stand,<sup>1</sup>
 "Woman thy vows are trac'd in sand."<sup>2</sup>

i. Las Rimas de Jor. de Montem.
That Woman's vows are trac'd in sand —[40]

1. The last line is almost a literal translation from a Spanish proverb

[The last line is not "almost a literal translation from a Spanish proverb" but an adaptation of part of a stanza from the Diary of Jorge de Montemayor—

Miró el Amor. lo que ordena
 Que os viene a hazer creer
 Cosas dichas por muger
 Y escriptas en el arena.

Souney in his Letters from Spain, 1797, pp. 87-91. gives a specimen of the Diary and renders the lines in question thus—

And Love beheld us from his secret stand,
 And mark'd his triumph laughing to behold me.
 To see me trust a woman's word,
 To see me credit what a woman told me."

Byron too at this time had little or no knowledge of Spanish literature, seems to have been struck with Southey's paraphrase, and compressed the quatrain into an epigram.]

AN OCCASIONAL PROLOGUE,

DELIVERED BY THE AUTHOR PREVIOUS TO THE PERFORMANCE OF "THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE" AT A PRIVATE THEATRE.<sup>1</sup>

SINCE the refinement of this polish'd age
Has swept immoral raillery from the stage ,
Since taste has now expung'd licentious wit,
Which stamp'd disgrace on all an author writ ,
Since, now, to please with purer scenes we seek,
Nor dare to call the blush from Beauty's cheek ,
Oh ! let the modest Muse some pity claim,
And meet indulgence—though she find not fame
Still, not for her alone, we wish respect,<sup>1</sup>
Others appear more conscious of defect
To-night no vet'ran Roscu you behold,
In all the arts of scenic action old ,

1 ["I enacted Penruddock, in The Wheel of Fortune, and Tristram Fickle, in the farce of The Weathercock, for three nights, in some private theatricals at Southwell, in 1806, with great applause. The occasional prologue for our volunteer play was also of my composition"—Diary, Life, p. 38 The prologue was written by him, between stages, on his way from Harrogate. On getting into the carriage at Chesterfield, he said to his companion, "Now, Pigot, I'll spin a prologue for our play," and before they reached Mansfield he had completed his task,—interrupting only once his rhyming reverie, to ask the proper pronunciation of the French word debut, and, on being told it, exclaiming, "Aye, that will do for rhyme to 'new'"—Life, p. 39 "The Prologue was spoken by G. Wylde, Esq"—Note by Miss E. Pigot]

No COOKE, no KEMBLE, can salute you here,

 Here, then, our almost unfledg'd wings we try,
 Clip not our pinions, ere the birds can fly<sup>i</sup>
 Failing in this our first attempt to soar,
 Drooping, alas ! we fall to rise no more
 Not one poor trembler, only, fear betrays,
 Who hopes, yet almost dreads to meet your praise,
 But all our Dramatis Personæ wait,
 In fond suspense this crisis of their fate
 No venal views our progress can retard,
 Your generous plaudits are our sole reward,
 For these, each Hero all his power displays,<sup>i</sup>
 Each timid Heroine shrinks before your gaze
 Surely the last will some protection find ?<sup>ii</sup>
 None, to the softer sex, can prove unkind
 While Youth and Beauty form the female shield,<sup>iii</sup>
 The sternest Censor to the fair must yield<sup>iv</sup>
 Yet, should our feeble efforts nought avail,
 Should, after all, our best endeavours fail,
 Still, let some mercy in your bosoms live,
 And, if you can't applaud, at least forgive

'Tis surely enough upon earth to be vex'd,
 With wives who eternal confusion are spreading .
 " But in Heaven " (so runs the Evangelists' Text)
 " We neither have giving in marriage, or wedding "

7

From this we suppose, (as indeed well we may,)
 That should Saints after death, with their spouses put
 And wives, as in life, aim at absolute sway, [up more,
 All Heaven would ring with the conjugal uproar

8

Distraction and Discord would follow in course,
 Nor MATTHEW, nor MARK, nor ST PAUL, can deny it,

The only expedient is general divorce,
To prevent universal disturbance and riot

9

But though husband and wife, shall at length be disjoin'd,
Yet woman and man ne'er were meant to dis sever,
Our chains once dissolv'd, and our hearts unconfin'd,
We'll love without bonds, but we'll love you for ever.

10

Though souls are denied you by fools and by rakes,
Should you own it yourselves, I would even then doubt
Your nature so much of celestial partakes, [you,
The Garden of Eden would wither without you

THE TEAR

O lachrymarum fons, tenero sacros
Ducentium ortus ex animo , quater
Felix ' in imo qui scatentem
Pectore te, pia Nympha, sensit <sup>1</sup>
GRAY, Alcibi Fragment

WHEN Friendship or Love
Our sympathies move ,
When Truth, in a glance, should appear,

1 [The motto was prefixed in Hours of Idleness ]

The lips may beguile,
With a dimple or smile,
But the test of affection's a Tear

2

Too oft is a smile
But the hypocrite's wile,
To mask detestation, or fear,
Give me the soft sigh,
Whilst the soul-telling eye
Is dimm'd, for a time, with a Tear

3

Mild Charity's glow,
To us mortals below,
Shows the soul from barbarity clear,
Compassion will melt,
Where this virtue is felt,
And its dew is diffused in a Tear

4

The man, doom'd to sail
With the blast of the gale,
Through billows Atlantic to steer,
As he bends o'er the wave
Which may soon be his grave,
The green sparkles bright with a Tear.

The Soldier braves death
 For a fanciful wreath
 In Glory's romantic career,
 But he raises the foe
 When in battle laid low,
 And bathes every wound with a Tear

If, with high-bounding pride,<sup>1</sup>
 He return to his bride!
 Renouncing the gore-crimson'd spear,
 All his toils are repaid
 When, embracing the maid,
 From her eyelid he kisses the Tear

7

Sweet scene of my youth !<sup>1</sup>
 Seat of Friendship and Truth,
 Where Love chas'd each fast-fleeting year,
 Loth to leave thee, I mourn'd,
 For a last look I turn'd,
 But thy spire was scarce seen through a Tear

<sup>1</sup> *When with high bounding pride,
 He returns—* —[4to]

8

Though my vows I can pour,
 To my Mary no more,<sup>1</sup>
 My Mary, to Love once so dear,
 In the shade of her bow'r,
 I remember the hour,
 She rewarded those vows with a Tear

9

By another posset,
 May she live ever blest !
 Her name still my heart must revere
 With a sigh I resign,
 What I once thought was mine,
 And forgive her deceit with a Tear

10

Ye friends of my heart,
 Ere from you I depart,
 This hope to my breast is most near
 If again we shall meet,
 In this rural retreat,
 May we meet, as we part, with a Tear

11

When my soul wings her flight
 To the regions of night,
 And my corse shall recline on its bier,<sup>1</sup>

1 And my body shall sleep on its bier —[4to P on V Occasions

1 [Miss Chaworth was married in 1805]

As ye pass by the tomb,
 Where my ashes consume,
 Oh ! moisten their dust with a Tear

12

May no marble bestow
 The splendour of woe,
 Which the children of Vanity rear,
 No fiction of fame
 Shall blazon my name,
 All I ask, all I wish, is a Tear

REPLY TO SOME VERSES OF J M B PIGOT, ESQ, ON THE CRUELTY OF HIS MISTRESS<sup>1</sup>

I

WHY, Pigot, complain
 Of this damsel's disdain,
 Why thus in despair do you fret?
 For months you may try,
 Yet, believe me, a sigh<sup>11</sup>
 Will never obtain a coquette

2.

Would you teach her to love?<sup>1</sup>
 For a time seem to rove,
 At first she may frown in a fit,
 But leave her awhile,
 She shortly will smile,
 And then you may kiss your coquette.

3.

For such are the airs
 Of these fanciful fairs,
 They think all our homage a debt
 Yet a partial neglect<sup>1</sup>
 Soon takes an effect,
 And humbles the proudest coquette.

4

Dissemble your pain,
 And lengthen your chain,
 And seem her hauteur to regret,<sup>11</sup>
 If again you shall sigh,
 She no more will deny,
 That yours is the rosy coquette.

If still, from false pride,<sup>1</sup>
 Your pangs she deride,
 This whimsical virgin forget,
 Some other admire,
 Who will melt with your fire,
 And laugh at the little coquette

6

For me, I adore
 Some twenty or more,
 And love them most dearly, but yet,
 Though my heart they enthrall,
 I'd abandon them all,
 Did they act like your blooming coquette

7

No longer repine,
 Adopt this design,<sup>11</sup>
 And break through her slight-woven net!
 Away with despair,
 No longer forbear
 To fly from the captious coquette

8.

Then quit her, my friend !
 Your bosom defend,
 Ere quite with her snares you're beset
 Lest your deep-wounded heart,
 When incens'd by the smart,
 Should lead you to cuisse the coquette

Since your beautiful maid,
Your flame has repaid,
No more I your folly regret ,
She's now most divine,
And I bow at the shrine,
Of this quickly reformed coquette

Yet still, I must own,<sup>1</sup>
I should never have known,

THE CORNELIAN <sup>1</sup>

I.

No specious splendour of this stone
Endears it to my memory ever,
With lustre only once it shone,
And blushes modest as the giver <sup>1</sup>

Some, who can sneer at friendship's ties,
Have, for my weakness, oft reprov'd me,
Yet still the simple gift I prize,
For I am sure, the giver lov'd me

3

He offer'd it with downcast look,
As fearful that I might refuse it,
I told him, when the gift I took,
My only fear should be, to lose it

<sup>1</sup> [The cornelian was a present from his friend Edleston, a Cambridge chorister, afterwards a clerk in a mercantile house in London. Edleston died of consumption, May 11, 1811 (See letter from Byron to Miss Pigot, October 28, 1811). Their acquaintance began by Byron saving him from drowning (MS note by the Rev. W. Harness)]

4

This pledge attentively I view'd,
And sparkling as I held it near,
Methought one drop the stone bedew'd,
And, ever since, I've lov'd a tear.

5.

Still, to adorn his humble youth,
Nor wealth nor birth their treasures yield,
But he, who seeks the flowers of truth,
Must quit the garden, for the field

6

'Tis not the plant uprear'd in sloth,
Which beauty shews, and sheds perfume,
The flowers, which yield the most of both,
In Nature's wild luxuriance bloom

7

Had Fortune aided Nature's carc,
For once forgetting to be blind,
His would have been an ample share,
If well proportioned to his mind

8

But had the Goddess clearly seen,
His form had fix'd her fickle breast,
Her countless hoards would his have been,
And none remain'd to give the rest.

TO M——<sup>1</sup>

I

OH<sup>1</sup> did those eyes, instead of fire,
With bright, but mild affection shine
Though they might kindle less desire,
Love, more than mortal, would be thine.

For thou art form'd so heavenly fair,
Howe'er those orbs may wildly beam,
We must admire, but still despair,
That fatal glance forbids esteem

When Nature stamp'd thy beauteous birth,
So much perfection in thee shone,
She fear'd that, too divine for earth,
The skies might claim thee for their own

Therefore, to guard her dearest work,
Lest angels might dispute the prize,
She bade a secret lightning lurk,
Within those once celestial eyes.

5.

These might the boldest Sylph appall,
 When gleaming with meridian blaze ,
 Thy beauty must enrapture all ,
 But who can dare thine ardent gaze ?

6

'Tis said that Berenice's hair,
 In stars adorns the vault of heaven ,
 But they would ne'er permit thee there,
Thou wouldst so far outshine the seven

7

For did those eyes as planets roll,
 Thy sister-lights would scarce appear
 E'en suns, which systems now controul,
 Would twinkle dimly through their sphere <sup>1</sup>

Friday, November 7, 1806

"Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
 Having some business, do intreat her eyes
 To twinkle in their spheres till they return"
 SHAKESPEARE,

[AS THE AUTHOR WAS DISCHARGING HIS PISTOLS IN A GARDEN, TWO LADIES PASSING NEAR THE SPOT WERE ALARMED BY THE SOUND OF A BULLET HISSING NEAR THEM, TO ONE OF WHOM THE FOLLOWING STANZAS WERE ADDRESSED THE NEXT MORNING ]<sup>2</sup>

I

DOUBTLESS, sweet girl ! the hissing lead,
 Wafting destruction o'er thy charms<sup>1</sup>
 And hurtling o'er<sup>3</sup> thy lovely head,
 Has fill'd that breast with fond alarms

2

Surely some envious Demon's force,
 Vex'd to behold such beauty here,
 Impell'd the bullet's viewless course,
 Diverted from its first career

<sup>2</sup> [The occurrence took place at Southwell, and the beautiful lady to whom the lines were addressed was Miss Houson, who is also commemorated in the verses "To a Vain Lady" and "To Anne" She was the daughter of the Rev. Henry Houson of Southwell, and married the Rev Luke Jackson She died on Christmas Day, 1821, and her monument may be seen in Hucknall Torkard Church ]

" Iron-sleet of arrowy shower
 Hurtles in the darken'd air "

Yes ! in that nearly fatal hour,
 The ball obey'd some hell-born guide ,
 But Heaven, with interposing power,
 In pity turn'd the death aside

Yet, as perchance one trembling tear
 Upon that thrilling bosom fell ,
 Which I, th' unconscious cause of fear,
 Extracted from its glistening cell ,—

Say, what dire penance can atone
 For such an outrage, done to thee ?
 Arraign'd before thy beauty's throne,
 What punishment wilt thou decree ?

Might I perform the Judge's part,
 The sentence I should scarce deplore ,
 It only would restore a heart,
 Which but belong'd to thee before

The least atonement I can make
 Is to become no longer free ,
 Henceforth, I breathe but for thy sake,
 Thou shalt be all in all to me

8

But thou, perhaps, may'st now reject
Such expiation of my guilt,
Come then—some other mode elect?
Let it be death—or what thou wilt.

9.

Choose, then, relentless! and I swear
Nought shall thy dread decree prevent,
Yet hold—one little word forbear!
Let it be aught but banishment

AD LESBIAM

EQUAL to Jove that youth must be—
Greater than Jove he seems to me—
Who, free from Jealousy's alarms,
Securely views thy matchless charms,
That cheek, which ever dimpling glows,
That mouth, from whence such music flows,
To him, alike, are always known,
Reserv'd for him, and him alone
Ah! Lesbia! though 'tis death to me,
I cannot choose but look on thee

But, at the sight, my senses fly,
I needs must gaze, but, gazing, die ,
Whilst trembling with a thousand fears,
Parch'd to the throat my tongue adheres,
My pulse beats quick, my breath heaves short,
My limbs deny their slight support ,
Cold dews my pallid face o'erspread,
With deadly languor droops my head,
My ears with tingling echoes ring,
And Life itself is on the wing ,
My eyes refuse the cheering light,
Their orbs are veil'd in starless night
Such pangs my nature sinks beneath,
And feels a temporary death

TRANSLATION OF THE EPITAPH ON VIRGIL
AND TIBULLUS, BY DOMITIUS MARSUS

He who, sublime, in epic numbers roll'd,
And he who struck the softer lyre of Love,
By Death's unequal<sup>1</sup> hand alike controul'd,
'Fit comrades in Elysian regions move !

1 The hand of Death is said to be unjust or unequal, as Virgil was considerably older than Tibullus at his decease

• SULPICIA AD CERINTHEM (LIB. QUART.)

CRUEL Cerinthus ! does the fell disease -
Which racks my breast your fickle bosom please ?
Alas ! I wish'd but to o'ercome the pain
That I might live for Love and you again ;
But, now, I scarcely shall bewail my fate :
By Death alone I can avoid your hate.

LUGETE VENERES CUPIDINESQUE (CARM. III) =

Ye Cupids, droop each little head,
Nor let your wings with joy be spread.
My Lesbia's favourite bird is dead,
Whom dearer than her eyes she lov'd =
For he was gentle, and so true.
Obedient to her call he flew,
No fear no wild alarm he knew.
But lightly o'er her bosom mov'd

And softly fluttering here and there,
 He never sought to cleave the air,
 He chirrup'd oft, and, free from care,<sup>i</sup>
     Tun'd to her ear his grateful strain.
 Now having pass'd the gloomy bourn,<sup>ii</sup>
 From whence he never can return,
 His death, and Lesbia's grief I mourn,
     Who sighs, alas ! but sighs in vain

Oh ! curst be thou, devouring grave !
 Whose jaws eternal victims crave,
 From whom no earthly power can save,
     For thou hast ta'en the bird away
 From thee my Lesbia's eyes o'erflow,
 Her swollen cheeks with weeping glow ,
 Thou art the cause of all her woe,
     Receptacle of life's decay

 Nor then my soul should sated be,
 Still would I kiss and cling to thee
 Nought should my kiss from thine dissever,
 Still would we kiss and kiss for ever,
 E'en though the numbers did exceed<sup>1</sup>
 The yellow harvest's countless seed,
 To part would be a vain endeavour
 Could I desist?—ah! never—never

TO M S G

I

WHENE'ER I view those lips of thine,
 Their hue invites my fervent kiss,
 Yet, I forego that bliss divine,
 Alas! it were—unhallow'd bliss

2

Whene'er I dream of that pure breast,
 How could I dwell upon its snows!
 Yet, is the daring wish repress,
 For that,—would banish its repose

3

A glance from thy soul-searching eye
Can raise with hope, depress with fear ,
Yet, I conceal my love,—and why ?
I would not force a painful tear

4

I ne'er have told my love, yet thou
Hast seen my ardent flame too well ,
And shall I plead my passion now,
To make thy bosom's heaven a hell ?

5

No ! for thou never canst be mine,
United by the priest's decree
By any ties but those divine,
Mine, my belov'd, thou ne'er shalt be

6

Then let the secret fire consume,
Let it consume, thou shalt not know
With joy I court a certain doom,
Rather than spread its guilty glow

7

I will not ease my tortur'd heart,
By driving dove-ey'd peace from thine ,
Rather than such a sting impart,
Each thought presumptuous I resign

8.

Yes ! yield those lips, for which I'd brave
 More than I here shall dare to tell,
 Thy innocence and mine to save,—
 I bid thee now a last farewell

9

Yes ! yield that breast, to seek despair
 And hope no more thy soft embrace,
 Which to obtain, my soul would dare,
 All, all reproach, but thy disgrace

10

At least from guilt shalt thou be free,
 No matron shall thy shame reprove,
 Though cureless pangs may prey on me,
 No martyr shalt thou be to love

STANZAS TO A LADY, WITH THE POEMS OF CAMOENS<sup>1</sup>

I

THIS votive pledge of fond esteem,
 Perhaps, dear girl ! for me thou'lt prize,
 It sings of Love's enchanting dream,
 A theme we never can despise

2

Who blames it but the envious fool,
The old and disappointed maid ?
Or pupil of the prudish school,
In single sorrow doom'd to fade ?

3.

Then read, dear Girl ! with feeling read,
For thou wilt ne'er be one of those ,
To thee, in vain, I shall not plead
In pity for the Poet's woes

4.

He was, in sooth, a genuine Bard ,
His was no faint, fictitious flame
Like his, may Love be thy reward,
But not thy hapless fate the same

TO M S G<sup>1</sup>

WHEN I dream that you love me, you'll surely forgive ,
Extend not your anger to sleep ,
For in visions alone your affection can live,—
I rise, and it leaves me to weep

1 [“G G B to E P.”—MS Newstead]

2

Then, Morpheus ! envelop my faculties fast,
Shed o'er me your languor benign :
Should the dream of to-night but resemble the last,
What rapture celestial is mine !

3

They tell us that slumber, the sister of death,
Mortality's emblem is given ,
To fate how I long to resign my frail breath
If this be a foretaste of Heaven !

4

Ah ! frown not, sweet Lady, unbend your soft brow,
Nor deem me too happy in this
If I sin in my dream I atone for it now
Thus doom'd, out to gaze upon bliss

5

Though in visions, sweet Lady, perhaps you may smile,
Oh ! think not my penance deficient !
When dreams of your presence my slumbers beguile,
To awake, will be torture sufficient.

I

THE man of firm and noble soul
No factious clamours can controul,
No threat'ning tyrant's darkling brow
Can swerve him from his just intent
Gales the warring waves which plough,
By Auster on the billows spent,
To curb the Adriatic main,
Would awe his fix'd determined mind in vain

Hurling his lightnings from above,
With all his terrors there unfurl'd,
He would, unmov'd, unaw'd, behold,
The flames of an expiring world,
Again in crashing chaos roll'd,
In vast promiscuous ruin hurl'd,
Might light his glorious funeral pile
Still dauntless 'midst the wreck of earth he'd smile

CHILDISH RECOLLECTIONS<sup>1</sup>

"I cannot but remember such things were,
And were most dear to me."

Martine<sup>2</sup>

["That were most precious to me."—Martine, act iv. sc. 3.]

WHEN slow Disease, with all her host of Pains,<sup>1</sup>

Chills the warm tide, which flows along the veins—

1. Hence! thou uncaring song, of varied loves,
Which youth commends, maturer age reproves;
Which every rhyming bard repeats by rote,
By thousands echo'd to the self-same note!
Tired of the dull, unceasing, captious strain,
My soul is panting to be free again.
Farewell! ye nymphs, propitious to my verse,
Some other Dancer, will your charms rehearse,
Some other poet has pangs, in hope of bliss,
Or dwells in rapture on your nectar'd kiss.
Those beauties, grateful to my ardent sight
No more entrance my senses in delight,
Those bosoms, form'd of amaranth snow,
Alas are tasteless and unfeeling now.
These to some happier lover, I resign,
The memory of those joys alone is mine.
Censure no more shall brand my humble name,
The child of passion and the foil of fame
Wearied of love, of life, and aw'd with spleen,
I rest a perfect Timon, not mendacious,
World! I renounce thee! all my hopes o'ercast!
One sigh I give thee, but that sigh's the last.
Friends, foes, and jealous, now alike, alike!
Would I could add remembrance of you, too!
Yet though the future, dark and cheerless glooms,
The curse of memory, hovering in my dreams,
Defects with glowing pencil all those years,
Ere yet, my cup, enormous, fill'd with tears,
Still rules my senses with tyrannic sway,
The past confounding with the present day.

Alas! in vain I check the maddening thought
It still recurs, unlook'd for and unsought!

My soul to Fancy's, &c., &c., as at line 29—

[P. on V. Occasions, p. 109, ff.]

1 [The words, "that schoolboy thing," etc. (see letter to H Drury, Jan 8, 1808), evidently apply, not as Moore intimates, to this period, but to the lines "On a Change of Masters," etc., July, 1805 (see letter to W Bankes, March 6, 1807).]

2 [The motto was prefixed in Hours of Idleness.]

When Health, affrighted, spreads her rosy wing,
And flies with every changing gale of spring,
Not to the aching frame alone confin'd,
Unyielding pangs assail the drooping mind
What grisly forms, the spectre-train of woe,
Bid shuddering Nature shrink beneath the blow,
With Resignation wage relentless strife,
While Hope retires appall'd, and clings to life 10
Yet less the pang when, through the tedious hour,
Remembrance sheds around her genial power,
Calls back the vanish'd days to rapture given,
When Love was bliss, and Beauty form'd our heaven,
Or, dear to youth, portrays each childish scene,
Those fairy bowers, where all in turn have been
As when, through clouds that pour the summer storm,
The orb of day unveils his distant form,
Gilds with faint beams the crystal dew of rain
And dimly twinkles o'er the watery plain, 20
Thus, while the future dark and cheerless gleams,
The Sun of Memory, glowing through my dreams,
Though sunk the radiance of his former blaze,
To scenes far distant points his paler rays,
Still rules my senses with unbounded sway,
The past confounding with the present day

Oft does my heart indulge the rising thought,
Which still recurs, unlook'd for and unsought,
My soul to Fancy's fond suggestion yields,

And roams romantic o'er her airy fields 30
 Scenes of my youth, develop'd, crowd to view,
 To which I long have bade a last adieu !
 Seats of delight, inspiring youthful themes,
 Friends lost to me, for aye, except in dreams,
 Some, who in marble prematurely sleep,
 Whose forms I now remember, but to weep,
 Some, who yet urge the same scholastic course
 Of early science, future fame the source,
 Who, still contending in the studious race,
 In quick rotation, fill the senior place ! 40
 These, with a thousand visions, now unite,
 To dazzle, though they please, my aching sight.<sup>1</sup>

IDA ! blest spot, where Science holds her reign,
 How joyous, once, I join'd thy youthful train !
 Bright, in idea, gleams thy lofty spire,
 Again, I mingle with thy playful quire,
 Our tricks of mischief,<sup>2</sup> every childish game,
 Unchang'd by time or distance, seem the same,

<sup>2</sup> [Newton Hanson relates that on one occasion he accompanied his father to Harrow on Speech Day to see his brother Hargreaves Hanson and Byron "On our arrival at Harrow, we set out in search of Hargreaves and Byron, but the latter was not at his tutor's. Three or four lads, hearing my father's inquiries, set off at full speed to find him. They soon discovered him, and, laughing most heartily, called out, 'Hallo, Byron! here's a gentleman wants you.' And what do you think? He had got on Drury's hat. I can still remember the arch cock of Byron's eye at the hat and then at my father, and the fun and merriment it caused him and

And check each impulse with prudential rein ,            60

And who, when Fortune's warning voice is heard,
 Would lose his opening prospects for a word?
 Although, against that word, he has been rebel,
 And Truth, indignant, all his bosom swell

Away with themes like this! not mine the task
 From flattering friends to tear the hateful mask:
 Let keener bards delight in Satire's sting.
 My Fancy soars not on Detraction's wing. So
 Once, and but once, she smit'd a deadly blow,
 To hurl Defiance on a secret Foe;
 But when that foe, from feeling or from shame,
 The cause unknown, yet still to me the same,
 Would'd by some friendly hint, perchance, retire,
 With this submission all her rage expired,
 From dreaded fangs that feeble Foe to save,
 She hush'd her young resentment, and forgave.
 Oh, if my Muse a Pedant's portrait drew
 POMPONIUS' virtues are but known to few.
 I never fear'd the young usurper's rod,
 And he who wields must, sometimes, feel the rod,
 If since on Granta's failings, known to all

Who share the converse of a college hall,
 She sometimes trifled in a lighter strain,
 'Tis past, and thus she will not sin again,
 Soon must her early song for ever cease,
 And, all may rail, when I shall rest in peace

Here, first remember'd be the joyous band,
 Who hail'd me chief,<sup>1</sup> obedient to command, 100
 Who join'd with me, in every boyish sport,
 Their first adviser, and their last resort,
 Nor shrunk beneath the upstart pedant's frown,<sup>1</sup>
 Or all the sable glories of his gown,<sup>11</sup>
 Who, thus, transplanted from his father's school,
 Unfit to govern, ignorant of rule—
 Succeeded him, whom all unite to praise,
 The dear preceptor of my early days,
 PROBUS,<sup>2</sup> the pride of science, and the boast—
 To IDA now, alas! for ever lost! 110

1 Nor shrunk before.—[Hours of Idleness]

11 *Careless to soothe the pedant's furious frown,
 Scarcely respecting his majestic gown,
 By which, in vain, he gain'd a borrow'd grace,
 Adding new terror to his sneering face—*

1 [On the retirement of Dr Drury, three candidates for the vacant chair presented themselves—Messrs. Drury, Evans, and Butler. On the first movement to which this contest gave rise in the school, young Wildman was at the head of the party for Mark Drury, while Byron held himself aloof from any. Anxious, however, to have him as an ally, one of the Drury faction said to Wildman, "Byron, I know, will not join, because he does not choose to act second to any one, but, by giving up the leadership to him, you may at once secure him." This Wildman did, and Byron took the command.—Life, p. 29.]

No more his mention shall my verse degrade,—
To him my tribute is already paid<sup>1</sup>

High, through those elms with hoary branches crown'd<sup>2</sup>
Fair IDA's bower adorns the landscape round,
There Science, from her favour'd seat, surveys
The vale where rural Nature claims her praise,
To her awhile resigns her youthful train,
Who move in joy, and dance along the plain,

1 This alludes to a character printed in a former private edition [P on V Occasions] for the perusal of some friends, which, with many other pieces, is withheld from the present volume. To draw the attention of the public to insignificance would be deservedly reprobated, and another reason, though not of equal consequence, may be given in the following couplet —

"Satire or sense, alas! can Sporus feel?
Who breaks a Butterfly upon a wheel?"

Prologue to the Satires POPE

[Hours of Idleness, p 154, note] [(See the lines "On a Change of Masters at a Great Public School," ant., p 16)]

The following lines, attached to the Newstead MS draft of "Childish Recollections," are aimed at Pomposus —

"Just half a Pedagogue, and half a Fop,
Not formed to grace the pulpit, but the Shop,
The Counter, not the Desk, should be his place,
Who deals out precepts, as if derling Lace,
Servile in mind, from Elevation proud,
In argument, less sensible than loud,
Through half the continent, the Coxcomb's been,
And stuns you with the Wonders he has seen
'How in Pompeii's vault he found the page,
Of some long lost, and long lamented Sage,
And doubtless he the Letters would have trac'd,
Had they not been by age and dust effac'd
This single specimen will serve to shew,
The weighty lessons of this reverend Beau,
Bombast in vain would want of Genius cloke,
For feeble fires evaporate in smoke,
A Boy, o'er Boys he holds a trembling reign,
More fit than they to seek some School again"]

2 [Lines 121-243 were added in Hours of Idleness]

Here mingling view the names of Sire and Son,
 The one long grav'd, the other just begun
 These shall survive alike when Son and Sire,
 Beneath one common stroke of fate expire,<sup>1</sup>
 Perhaps, their last memorial these alone,
 Denied, in death, a monumental stone, 160
 Whilst to the gale in mournful cadence wave
 The sighing weeds, that hide their nameless grave
 And, here, my name, and many an early friend's,
 Along the wall in lengthen'd line extends.
 Though, still, our deeds amuse the youthful race,
 Who tread our steps, and fill our former place,
 Who young obeyed their lords in silent awe,
 Whose nod commanded, and whose voice was law,
 And now, in turn, possess the reins of power,
 To rule, the little Tyrants of an hour, 170
 Though sometimes, with the Tales of ancient day,
 They pass the dreary Winter's eve away,
 "And, thus, our former rulers stemm'd the tide,
 And, thus, they dealt the combat, side by side,
 Just in this place, the mouldering walls they scaled,
 Nor bolts, nor bars, against their strength avail'd,"<sup>2</sup>

1 [During a rebellion at Harrow, the poet prevented the school-room from being burnt down, by pointing out to the boys the names of their fathers and grandfathers on the walls—Medwin's Conversations (1824), p. 85]

2 [Byron elsewhere thus describes his usual course of life while at Harrow "always cricketing, rebelling, rowing, and in all manner of mischiefs" One day he tore down the gratings from the window of the hall, and when asked by Dr Butler his reason for the outrage, coolly answered, "because they darkened the room"—Life, p. 29]

The woods of IDA danc'd before my eyes ,
I saw the sprightly wand'ers pour along,
I saw, and join'd again the joyous throng ,
Panting, again I trac'd her lofty grove,
And Friendship's feelings triumph'd over Love.

Yet, why should I alone with such delight
Retrace the circuit of my former flight ? 210
Is there no cause beyond the common claim,
Endear'd to all in childhood's very name ?
Ah ! sure some stronger impulse vibrates here,
Which whispers friendship will be doubly dear
To one, who thus for kindred hearts must roam,
And seek abroad, the love denied at home
Those hearts, dear IDA, have I found in thee,
A home, a world, a paradise to me
Stern Death forbade my orphan youth to share
The tender guidance of a Father's care , 220
Can Rank, or e'en a Guardian's name supply
The love, which glistens in a Father's eye ?
For this, can Wealth, or Title's sound atone,
Made, by a Parent's early loss, my own ?
What Brother springs a Brother's love to seek ?
What Sister's gentle kiss has prest my cheek ?
For me, how dull the vacant moments rise,
To no fond bosom link'd by kindred ties !
Oft, in the progress of some fleeting dream,
Fraternal smiles, collected round me seem , 230

While still the visions to my heart are prest,
 The voice of Love will murmur in my rest
 I hear—I wake—and in the sound rejoice !
 I hear again,—but, ah ! no Brother's voice
 A Hermit, 'midst of crowds, I fain must stray
 Alone, though thousand pilgrims fill the way ,
 While these a thousand kindred wreaths entwine,
 I cannot call one single blossom mine
 What then remains? in solitude to groan,
 To mix in friendship, or to sigh alone? 240
 Thus, must I cling to some endearing hand,
 And none more dear, than IDA's social band

Alonzo <sup>1</sup> best and dearest of my friends,<sup>1</sup>
 Thy name ennobles him, who thus commends
 From this fond tribute thou canst gain no praise,
 The praise is his, who now that tribute pays

In Hours of Idleness "Joannes" became "Alonzo," and the same lines were employed to celebrate the memory of his friend the Hon John Wingfield, of the Coldstream Guards, brother to Richard, fourth Viscount Powerscourt.  Our sports, our studies, and our souls were one Together we impell'd the flying ball,
 Together waited in our tutor's hall,
 Together join'd in cricket's manly toil,
 Or shar'd the produce of the river's spoil, 260

 In Danger's path, though not untaught to feel
 Still, I remember, in the factious strife,
 The rustic's musket aim'd against my life <sup>1</sup>
 High pois'd in air the massy weapon hung,
 A cry of horror burst from every tongue
 Whilst I, in combat with another foe,
 Fought on, unconscious of th' impending blow,
 Your arm, brave Boy, arrested his career—
 Forward you sprung, insensible to fear, 28
 Disarm'd, and baffled by your conquering hand,

 Thy softer soul was form'd for love alone,
 To ruder passions and to hate unknown,
 Thy mind, in union with thy beauteous form,
 Was gentle, but unfit to stem the storm,
 That face, an index of celestial worth,
 Proclaim'd a heart abstracted from the earth
 Oft, when depress'd with sad, foreboding gloom,
 I sat reclin'd upon our favourite tomb,
 I've seen those sympathetic eyes o'erflow
 With kind compassion for thy comrade's woe,
 Or, when less mournful subjects form'd our themes,
 We tried a thousand fond romantic schemes,
 Oft hast thou sworn, in friendship's soothing tone,
 Whatever wish was mine, must be thine own
 The next can boast to lead in senates fit,
 A Spartan firmness, with Athenian wit,
 Tho' yet, in embryo, these perfections shine,
 Clarus! thy father's fame will soon be thine —*

A remonstrance which Lord Clare addressed to him at school, was found among his papers (as were most of the notes of his early favourites), and on the back of it was an endorsement which is a fresh testimony of his affection — “This and another letter were written at Harrow, by my then and, I hope, ever beloved friend, Lord Clare, when we were both schoolboys, and sent to my study in consequence of some childish misunderstanding,—the only one which ever arose between us. It was of short duration, and I retain this note solely for the purpose of submitting it to his perusal, that we may smile over the recollection of the insignificance of our first and last quarrel.” See, also, Byron’s account of his accidental meeting with Lord Clare in Italy in 1821, as recorded in Detached Thoughts, Nov 5, 1821, in letters to Moore, March 1 and June 8, 1822, and Mme. Guiccioli’s description of his emotion on seeing Clare (My Recollections of Lord Byron, ed 1869, p 156) ]

LACUS! thy father's fame<sup>1</sup> will soon be thine
 Where Learning nurtures the superior mind,
 What may we hope, from genius thus refin'd,
 When Time, at length, matures thy growing years,
 How wilt thou tower, above thy fellow peers!

 From ancient lineage, not unworthy, sprung
 What, though one sad dissension bade us part,
 That name is yet embalm'd within my heart,
 Yet, at the mention, does that heart rebound,
 And palpitate, responsive to the sound,
 Envy dissolved our ties, and not our will
 We once were friends,—I'll think, we are so still
 A form unmatched in Nature's partial mould,
 A heart untainted, we, in thee, behold 310

of my forefathers, in Charles I's time, married into their family." The allusion in the text to their subsequent quarrel, receives further light from a letter which the poet addressed to Lord Clive under date, February 6, 1807 (See, too, lines "To George, Earl Delawarr," p 126) The first Lord Byron was twice married. His first wife was Cecilie, widow of Sir Francis Bindlose, and daughter of Thomas, third Lord Delawarr. He died childless, and was succeeded by his brother Richard, the poet's ancestor. His younger brother, Sir Robert Byron, married Lucy, another daughter of the third Lord Delawarr.]

With scarce one speck, to cloud the pleasing scene
 No vice degrades that purest soul serene
 On the same day, our studious race begun,
 On the same day, our studious race was run,   330
 Thus, side by side, we pass'd our first career,
 Thus, side by side, we strove for many a year,
 At last, concluded our scholastic life,
 We neither conquer'd in the classic strife
 As Speakers,<sup>1</sup> each supports an equal name,<sup>1</sup>
 And crowds allow to both a partial fame
 To soothe a youthful Rival's early pride,
 Though Cleon's candour would the palm divide,

 Justice awards it to my Friend alone   340

 Remembrance hails you with her warmest tear<sup>1</sup>
 Drooping, she bends o'er pensive Fancy's urn,
 To trace the hours, which never can return,

When PROBUS' praise repaid my lyric song,
 Or plac'd me higher in the studious throng,      350
 Or when my first harangue receiv'd applause,<sup>1</sup>
 His sage instruction the primeval cause,
 What gratitude, to him, my soul possest,
 While hope of dawning honours fill'd my breast !<sup>1</sup>

- 1 *When, yet a novice in the mimic art,
 I feign'd the transports of a vengeful heart,
 When, as the Royal Slave, I trod the stage,
 To vent in Zanga, more than mortal rage,
 The praise of Probus, made me feel more proud,
 Than all the plaudits of the list'ning crowd
 Ah ! vain endeavour in this childish strain
 To soothe the woes of which I thus complain !
 What can avail this fruitless loss of time,
 To measure sorrow, in a jingling rhyme !
 No social solace from a friend, is near,
 And heartless strangers drop no feeling tear
 I seek not joy in Woman's sparkling eye,
 The smiles of Beauty cannot check the sigh
 Adieu, thou world ! thy pleasure's still a dream,
 Thy virtue, but a visionary theme,
 Thy years of vice, on years of folly roll,
 Till grinning death assigns the destin'd goal,*

1 ["My qualities were much more oratorical than poetical, and Dr Drury, my grand patron, had a great notion that I should turn out an orator from my fluency, my turbulence, my voice, my copiousness of declamation, and my action. I remember that my first declamation astonished Dr Drury into some unwonted (for he was economical of such) and sudden compliments, before the declaimers at our first rehearsal"—Byron Diary "I certainly was much pleased with Lord Byron's attitude, gesture, and delivery, as well as with his composition. To my surprise, he suddenly diverged from the written composition, with a boldness and rapidity sufficient to alarm me, lest he should fail in memory as to the conclusion. I questioned him, why he had altered his declamation? He declared he had made no alteration, and did not know, in speaking, that he had deviated from it one letter. I believed him, and from a knowledge of his temperament, am convinced that he was hurried on to expressions and colourings more striking than what his pen had expressed"—DR DRURY, Life, p 20]

For all my humble fame, to him alone,
 The praise is due, who made that fame my own
 Oh I could I soar above these feeble lays,
 These young effusions of my early days,
 To him my Muse her noblest strain would give,
 The song might perish, but the theme might live.<sup>1</sup> 360
 Yet, why for him the needless verse essay?
 His honour'd name requires no vain display

*Where all are hast'ning to the dread abode,
 To meet the judgment of a righteous God,
 Mix'd in the concourse of the restless throng,
 A river, rushing, swift of mirth, I glide along,
 A wretched, wretched, gloomy thing,
 Curs'd by reflection's deep corroding sting,
 But not that mortal sting, which stabs with r,
 The dark avenger of unguilt'd sin,
 The silent shaft, which goads the guilty wretch
 Extended on a rack's infuriating stretch—
 Conscience that stings, that sheets to iron supple—
 His sword the rack, from which he ne'er can rise
 For me, to shatter my jelly, or my fear,
 One cheerful comfort still is cherish'd here,
 No dread internal, haunts my fears of rest,
 No dreams of injured innocence is fest,
 Of love, of peace, of almost all bereft,
 Conscience, my last but welcome guest, is left
 Slander's imperson'd breath, may blast my name,
 Envy delights to blight the buds of fame
 Deceit may chill the current of my blood,
 And freeze affection's warm impassion'd flood,
 Presaging horror, darken every sense,
 Even here will conscience be my best defence,
 My bosom feels no "worm" which ne'er can die "
 Not crimes I mourn, but happiness gone by
 Thus crawling on with riaz, a reptile vile,
 My heart is bitter, though my cheek may smile,
 No more with former bliss, my heart is glad,
 Hope yields to anguish and my soul is sad,
 From fond regret, no future joy can save,
 Remembrance slumbers only in the grave*

1 The song might perish, but the theme must live —
 [Hours of Idleness]

By every son of grateful IDA blest,
It finds an echo in each youthful breast,
A fame beyond the glories of the proud,
Or all the plaudits of the venal crowd

IDA ! not yet exhausted is the theme,
Nor clos'd the progress of my youthful dream
How many a friend deserves the grateful strain !
What scenes of childhood still unsung remain !
Yet let me hush this echo of the past,
This parting song, the dearest and the last ,
And brood in secret o'er those hours of joy,
To me a silent and a sweet employ,
While, future hope and fear alike unknown,
I think with pleasure on the past alone ,
Yes, to the past alone, my heart confine,
And chase the phantom of what once was mine

370

IDA ! still o'er thy hills in joy preside,
And proudly steer through Time's eventful tide
Still may thy blooming Sons thy name revere,
Smile in thy bower, but quit thee with a tear, —
That tear, perhaps, the fondest which will flow,
O'er their last scene of happiness below
Tell me, ye hoary few, who glide along,
The feeble Veterans of some former throng,
Whose friends, like Autumn leaves by tempests whirl'd,
Are swept for ever from this busy world ,

380

Revolve the fleeting moments of your youth,
 While Care has yet withheld her venom'd tooth,<sup>1</sup> 390
 Say, if Remembrance days like these endears,
 Beyond the rapture of succeeding years?
 Say, can Ambition's fever'd dream bestow
 So sweet a balm to soothe your hours of woe?
 Can Treasures hoarded for some thankless Son,
 Can Royal Smiles, or Wreaths by slaughter won,
 Can Stars or Ermine, Man's maturer Toys,
 (For glittering bubbles are not left to Boys,)
 Recall one scene so much belov'd to view,
 As those where Youth her garland twin'd for you? 400
 Ah, no! amid the gloomy calm of age
 You turn with faltering hand life's varied page,
 Peruse the record of your days on earth,
 Unsullied only where it marks your birth,
 Still, lingering, pause above each chequer'd leaf,
 And blot with Tears the sable lines of Grief,
 Where Passion o'er the theme her mantle threw,
 Or weeping Virtue sigh'd a faint adieu,
 But bless the scroll which fairer words adorn,
 Trac'd by the rosy finger of the Morn, 41
 When Friendship bow'd before the shrine of truth,
 And Love, without his pinion,<sup>1</sup> smil'd on Youth

ANSWER TO A BEAUTIFUL POEM, WRITTEN BY MONTGOMERY, AUTHOR OF "THE WANDERER OF SWITZERLAND," ETC.,
ENTITLED "THE COMMON LOT"<sup>1</sup>

I

MONTGOMERY ! true, the common lot
Of mortals lies in Lethe's wave ,
Yet some shall never be forgot,
Some shall exist beyond the grave

2

" Unknown the region of his birth,"
The hero<sup>2</sup> rolls the tide of war ,
Yet not unknown his martial worth,
Which glares a meteor from afar

3

His joy or grief, his weal or woe,
Perchance may 'scape the page of fame ,
Yet nations, now unborn, will know
The record of his deathless name

1 [Montgomery (James), 1771-1854, poet and hymn-writer, published Prison Amusements (1797), The Ocean, a Poem (1805), The Wanderer of Switzerland, and other Poems (1806), The West Indies, and other Poems (1810), Songs of Zion (1822), The Christian Psalmist (1825), The Pelican Island, and other Poems (1827), etc (vide post, English Bards, etc, line 418, and note) ]

2 No particular hero is here alluded to. The exploits of Bayard, Nemours, Edward the Black Prince, and, in more modern times, the fame of Marlborough, Frederick the Great, Count Saxe, Charles of Sweden, etc., are familiar to every historical reader, but the exact places of their birth are known to a very small proportion of their admirers

The Patriot's and the Poet's frame
Must share the common tomb of all ·
Their glory will not sleep the same ,
That will arise, though Empires fall

5.

The lustre of a Beauty's eye
Assumes the ghastly stare of death ,
The fair, the brave, the good must die,
And sink the yawning grave beneath

6

Once more, the speaking eye revives,
Still beaming through the lover's strain ,
For Petrarch's Laura still survives
She died, but ne'er will die again

7

The rolling seasons pass away,
And Time, untiring, waves his wing ,
Whilst honour's laurels ne'er decay,
But bloom in fresh, unfading spring

8

All, all must sleep in grim repose,
Collected in the silent tomb ,
The old, the young, with friends and foes,
Fest'ring alike in shrouds, consume

9

The mouldering marble lasts its day,
 Yet falls at length an useless fane,
 To Ruin's ruthless fangs a prey,
 The wrecks of pillar'd Pride remain

10

What, though the sculpture be destroy'd,
 From dark Oblivion meant to guard,
 A bright renown shall be enjoy'd,
 By those, whose virtues claim reward

11

Then do not say the common lot
 Of all lies deep in Lethe's wave,
 Some few who ne'er will be forgot
 Shall burst the bondage of the grave

LOVE'S LAST ADIEU

'Αελ δ' αελ με φεύγει —[PSEUD] ANACREON, [Εἰς χρυσὸν]

I

THE roses of Love glad the garden of life,
 Though nurtur'd 'mid weeds dropping pestilent dew,
 Till Time crops the leaves with unmerciful knife,
 Or prunes them for ever, in Love's last adieu !

2

In vain, with endearments, we soothe the sad heart,
In vain do we vow for an age to be true,
'The chance of an hour may command us to part,
Or Death disunite us, in Love's last adieu !

3

Still Hope, breathing peace, through the grief-swollen breast,<sup>1</sup>
Will whisper, "Our meeting we yet may renew "
With this dream of deceit, half our sorrow's repress,
Nor taste we the poison, of Love's last adieu !

4.

Oh ! mark you yon pair, in the sunshine of youth,
Love twin'd round their childhood his flow'rs as they grew ,
They flourish awhile, in the season of truth,
Till chill'd by the winter of Love's last adieu !

5

Sweet lady ! why thus doth a tear steal its way,
Down a cheek which outrivals thy bosom in hue ?
Yet why do I ask ?—to distraction a prey,
Thy reason has perish'd, with Love's last adieu !

6

Oh ! who is yon Misanthrope, shunning mankind ?
From cities to caves of the forest he flew

There, raving, he howls his complaint to the wind,
The mountains reverberate Love's last adieu !

7

Now Hate rules a heart which in Love's easy chains,
Once Passion's tumultuous blandishments knew,
Despair now inflames the dark tide of his veins,
He ponders, in frenzy, on Love's last adieu !

8

How he envies the wretch, with a soul wrapt in steel !
His pleasures are scarce, yet his troubles are few,
Who laughs at the pang that he never can feel,
And dreads not the anguish of Love's last adieu !

9

Youth flies, life decays, even hope is o'ercast,
No more, with Love's former devotion, we sue
He spreads his young wing, he retires with the blast,
The shroud of affection is Love's last adieu !

10

In this life of probation, for rapture divine,
Astrea<sup>1</sup> declares that some penance is due,
From him, who has worshipp'd at Love's gentle shrine,
The atonement is ample, in Love's last adieu !

II.

Who kneels to the God, on his altar of light
 Must myrtle and cypress alternately strew
 His myrtle, an emblem of purest delight,
 His cypress, the garland of Love's last adieu<sup>1</sup>

 THE AUTHOR TO MIX MORE WITH SOCIETY

I

DEAR BECHER, you tell me to mix with mankind,
 I cannot deny such a precept is wise,
 But retirement accords with the tone of my mind
 I will not descend to a world I despise

<sup>1</sup> [The Rev John Thomas Becher (1770–1848) was Vicar of Rumpton and Midsomer Norton, Notts, and made the acquaintance of Byron when he was living at Southwell. To him was submitted an early copy of the Quarto, and on his remonstrance at the tone of some of the verses, the whole edition (save one or two copies) was burnt. Becher assisted in the revision of P on V Occasions, published in 1807. He was in 1818 appointed Prebendary of Southwell, and, all his life, took an active interest and prominent part in the administration of the poor laws and the welfare of the poor. (See Byron's letters to him of February 26 and March 28, 1808)]

Did the Senate or Camp my exertions require,
 Ambition might prompt me, at once, to go forth,
 When Infancy's years of probation expire,
 Perchance, I may strive to distinguish my birth.

3

The fire, in the cavern of Etna, conceal'd,
 Still mantles unseen in its secret recess,
 At length, in a volume terrific, reveal'd,
 No torrent can quench it, no bounds can repress

4

Oh ! thus, the desire, in my bosom, for fame<sup>1</sup>
 Bids me live, but to hope for Posterty's praise
 Could I soar with the Phoenix on pinions of flame,
 With him I would wish to expire in the blaze

5

For the life of a Fox, of a Chatham the death,
 What censure, what danger, what woe would I brave !
 Their lives did not end, when they yielded their breath,
 Their glory illumines the gloom of their grave<sup>11</sup>

Yet why should I mingle in Fashion's full herd ?
 Why crouch to her leaders, or cringe to her rules ?
 Why bend to the proud, or applaud the absurd ?
 Why search for delight, in the friendship of fools ?

I have tasted the sweets, and the bitters, of love,
 In friendship I early was taught to believe,
 My passion the matrons of prudence reprove,
 I have found that a friend may profess, yet deceive

8

To me what is wealth?—it may pass in an hour,
 If Tyrants prevail, or if Fortune should frown
 To me what is title?—the phantom of power,
 To me what is fashion?—I seek but renown

9

Deceit is a stranger, as yet, to my soul,
 I, still, am unpractised to varnish the truth
 Then, why should I live in a hateful controul?
 Why waste, upon folly, the days of my youth?

1806

ANSWER TO SOME ELEGANT VERSES SENT BY A FRIEND TO THE AUTHOR, COMPLAIN-
 ING THAT ONE OF HIS DESCRIPTIONS
 WAS RATHER TOO WARMLY DRAWN

“But if any old Lady, Knight, Priest, or Physician,
 Should condemn me for printing a second edition,
 If good Madam Squantum my work should abuse,
 May I venture to give her a smack of my muse?”

ANSTEX'S New Bath Guide, p 169

CANDOUR compels me, BECHER! to commend
 The verse, which blends the censor with the friend.

Your strong yet just reproof extorts applause
 From me, the heedless and imprudent cause,<sup>1</sup>
 For this wild error, which pervades my strain,<sup>11</sup>
 I sue for pardon,—must I sue in vain?
 The wise sometimes from Wisdom's ways depart,
 Can youth then hush the dictates of the heart?
 Precepts of prudence curb, but can't controul,
 The fierce emotions of the flowing soul
 When Love's delirium haunts the glowing mind,
 Limping Decorum lingers far behind,
 Vainly the dotard mends her prudish pace,
 Outstript and vanquish'd in the mental chase
 The young, the old, have worn the chains of love,
 Let those, they ne'er confined, my lay reprove,
 Let those, whose souls condemn the pleasing power,
 Their censures on the hapless victim shower
 Oh! how I hate the nerveless, frigid song,
 The ceaseless echo of the rhyming throng,
 Whose labour'd lines, in chilling numbers flow,
 To paint a pang the author ne'er can know!
 The artless Helicon, I boast, is youth,—
 My Lyre, the Heart—my Muse, the simple Truth
 Far be't from me the "virgin's mind" to "taunt"
 Seduction's dread is here no slight restraint
 The maid whose virgin breast is void of guile,
 Whose wishes dimple in a modest smile,

1 — the heedless and unworthy cause — [P on V. Occasions]

11 For this sole error — [P on V. Occasions]

Whose downcast eye disdains the wanton leer,
 Firm in her virtue's strength, yet not severe,
 She, whom a conscious grace shall thus refine,
 Will ne'er be "tainted" by a strain of mine.
 But, for the nymph whose premature desires
 Torment her bosom with unholy fires,
 No net to snare her willing heart is spread,
 She would have fallen, though she ne'er had read.
 For me, I fain would please the chosen few,
 Whose souls, to feeling and to nature true,
 Will spare the childish verse, and not destroy
 The light effusions of a heedless boy.<sup>1</sup>
 I seek not glory from the senseless crowd,
 Of fancied laurels, I shall ne'er be proud,
 Their warmest plaudits I would scarcely prize,
 Their sneers or censures, I alike despise

ELEGY ON NEWSTEAD ABBEY.<sup>1</sup>

"It is the voice of years, that are gone ! they roll before me, with all their deeds"—OSSIAN<sup>2</sup>

I

NEWSTEAD ! fast-falling, once-resplendent dome !

Religion's shrine ! repentant HENRY'S<sup>2</sup> pride !

Of Warriors, Monks, and Dames the cloister'd tomb,
Whose pensive shades around thy ruins glide,

2.

Hail to thy pile ! more honour'd in thy fall,
Than modern mansions, in their pillar'd state ,
Proudly majestic frowns thy vaulted hall,
Scowling defiance on the blasts of fate

3

No mail-clad Serfs,<sup>1</sup> obedient to their Lord,
In grim array, the crimson cross<sup>2</sup> demand ,
Or gay assemble round the festive board,
Their chief's retainers, an immortal band

4

Else might inspiring Fancy's magic eye
Retrace their progress, through the lapse of time ,
Marking each ardent youth, ordain'd to die,
A votive pilgrim, in Judea's clime

5

But not from thee, dark pile ! departs the Chief ,
His feudal realm in other regions lay
In thee the wounded conscience courts relief,
Retiring from the garish blaze of day

6.

Yes! in thy gloomy cells and shades profound,
 The monk abjur'd a world, he ne'er could view
 Or blood-stain'd Guilt repenting, solace found,
 Or Innocence, from stern Oppression, flew

7

A Monarch bade thee from that wild arise,
 Where Sherwood's outlaws, once, were wont to prowl,
 And Superstition's crimes, of various dyes,
 Sought shelter in the Priest's protecting cowl

8

Where, now, the grass exhales a murky dew,
 The humid pall of life-extinguish'd clay,
 In sainted fame, the sacred Fathers grew,
 Nor raised their pious voices, but to pray

9

Where, now, the bats their wavering wings extend,
 Soon as the gloaming<sup>1</sup> spreads her waning shade,<sup>1</sup>
 The choir did, oft, their mingling vespers blend,
 Or matin orisons to Mary<sup>2</sup> paid

 [P or V Occasions]

<sup>1</sup> As "gloaming," the Scottish word for twilight, is far more poetical, and has been recommended by many eminent literary men, particularly by Dr Moore in his Letters to Burns, I have ventured to use it on account of its harmony

Hark ! how the hall, resounding to the strain,
Shakes with the martial music's novel din !
The heralds of a warrior's haughty reign,
High crested banners wave thy walls within.

1 Lord Byron and his brother Sir William held high commands in the royal army. The former was general-in-chief in Ireland, lieutenant of the Tower, and governor to James, Duke of York, afterwards the unhappy James II, the latter had a principal share in many actions [Vide ante, p. 3, note 1]

<sup>1</sup> This is an historical fact. A violent tempest occurred immediately subsequent to the death or interment of Cromwell, which occasioned many disputes between his partisans and the cavaliers both interpreted the circumstance into divine interposition, but whether as approbation or condemnation, we leave to the casuists of that age to decide. I have made such use of the occurrence as suited the subject of my poem.

TO GEORGE, EARL DELAWARR<sup>1</sup>

I

OH<sup>1</sup> yes, I will own we were dear to each other,
 The friendships of childhood, though fleeting, are true,
 The love which you felt was the love of a brother,
 Nor less the affection I cherish'd for you

2

But Friendship can vary her gentle dominion,
 The attachment of years, in a moment expires
 Like Love, too, she moves on a swift-waving pinion,
 But glows not, like Love, with unquenchable fires

3

Full oft have we wander'd through Ida together,
 And blest were the scenes of our youth, I allow
 In the spring of our life, how serene is the weather<sup>1</sup>
 But Winter's rude tempests are gathering now

4.

No more with Affection shall Memory blending,
 The wonted delights of our childhood retrace
 When Pride steels the bosom, the heart is unbending,
 And what would be Justice appears a disgrace

Poems O and Translated]

5.

However, dear George, for I still must esteem you—<sup>1</sup>
The few, whom I love, I can never upbraid,
The chance, which has lost, may in future redeem you,
Repentance will cancel the vow you have made

6.

I will not complain, and though chill'd is affection,
With me no corroding resentment shall live
My bosom is calm'd by the simple reflection,
That both may be wrong, and that both should forgive

7.

You knew, that my soul, that my heart, my existence,
If danger demanded, were wholly your own,
You knew me unalter'd, by years or by distance,
Devoted to love and to friendship alone

8

You knew,—but away with the vain retrospection !
The bond of affection no longer endures,
Too late you may droop o'er the fond recollection,
And sigh for the friend, who was formerly yours

<sup>1</sup> However, dear S— —[Hours of Idleness

9

For the present, we part,—I will hope not for ever,<sup>1</sup>
 For time and regret will restore you at last.
 To forget our dissension we both should endeavour,
 I ask no atonement, but days like the past

DAMÆTAS<sup>2</sup>

In law an infant,<sup>3</sup> and in years a boy,
 In mind a slave to every vicious joy,
 From every sense of shame and virtue wean'd,
 In lies an adept, in deceit a fiend,
 Vers'd in hypocrisy, while yet a child,
 Fickle as wind, of inclinations wild,
 Woman his dupe, his heedless friend a tool,
 Old in the world, though scarcely broke from school,
 Damætas ran through all the maze of sin,
 And found the goal, when others just begin

<sup>2</sup> [Moore appears to have regarded these lines as applying to Byron himself. It is, however, very unlikely that, with all his passion for painting himself in the darkest colours, he would have written himself down "a hypocrite." Damætas is, probably, a satirical sketch of a friend or acquaintance. (Compare the solemn denunciation of Lord Falkland in English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, lines 668-686.)]

<sup>3</sup> In law, every person is an infant who has not attained the age of twenty-one.

Ev'n still conflicting passions shake his soul,
 And bid him drain the dregs of Pleasure's bowl,
 But, pall'd with vice, he breaks his former chain,
 And what was once his bliss appears his bane

TO MARION<sup>1</sup>

MARION ! why that pensive brow ?<sup>1</sup>
 What disgust to life hast thou ?
 Change that discontented air ,
 Frowns become not one so fair
 'Tis not Love disturbs thy rest,
 Love's a stranger to thy breast
He, in dimpling smiles, appears,
 Or mourns in sweetly timid tears ,
 Or bends the languid eyelid down,
 But shuns the cold forbidding frown
 Then resume thy former fire,
 Some will love, and all admire !
 While that icy aspect chills us,
 Nought but cool Indifference thrills us
 Would'st thou wand'ring hearts beguile,
 Smile, at least, or seem to smile ,

 Were form'd for better things than sneering
 Of soothing compliments divested,
 Advice at least's disinterested,
 Such is my artless song to thee,
 From all the flow of Flatt'ry free,
 Counsel like mine is as a brother's,
My heart is given to some others,
 That is to say, unskill'd to cozen,
 It shares itself among a dozen

Marion, adieu ! oh, pr'ythee slight not
 This warning, though it may delight not,

To those who think remonstrance teasing,
 At once I'll tell thee our opinion,
 Concerning Woman's soft Dominion
 Howe'er we gaze, with admiration,
 On eyes of blue or lips carnation,
 Howe'er the flowing locks attract us,
 Howe'er those beauties may distract us,
 Still fickle, we are prone to rove,
These cannot fix our souls to love,
 It is not too severe a stricture,
 To say they form a pretty picture,
 But would'st thou see the secret chain,
 Which binds us in your humble train,
 To hail you Queens of all Creation,
 Know, in a word, 'tis Animation

BYRON, January 10, 1807

OSCAR OF ALVA <sup>1</sup>

I

How sweetly shines, through azure skies,
 The lamp of Heaven on Lora's shore,
 Where Alva's hoary turrets rise,
 And hear the din of arms no more <sup>1</sup>

2.

But often has yon rolling moon,
 On Alva's casques of silver play'd,
 And view'd, at midnight's silent noon,
 Her chiefs in gleaming mail array'd

3

And, on the crimson'd rocks beneath,
 Which scowl o'er ocean's sullen flow,
 Pale in the scatter'd ranks of death,
 She saw the gasping warrior low,<sup>1</sup>

4

While many an eye, which ne'er again<sup>11</sup>
 Could mark the rising orb of day,
 Turn'd feebly from the gory plain,
 Beheld in death her fading ray.

5

Once, to those eyes the lamp of Love,
 They blest her dear propitious light,
 But, now, she glimmer'd from above,
 A sad, funereal torch of night.

6

Faded is Alva's noble race,
 And grey her towers are seen afar,
 No more her heroes urge the chase,
 Or roll the crimson tide of war

<sup>11</sup> *When many an eye which ne'er again
 Could view — — [Hours of Idleness]*

7.

But, who was last of Alva's clan ?

Why grows the moss on Alva's stone ?

Her towers resound no steps of man,

They echo to the gale alone

8

And, when that gale is fierce and high,

A sound is heard in yonder hall ,

It rises hoarsely through the sky,

And vibrates o'er the mould'ring wall

9

Yes, when the eddying tempest sighs,

It shakes the shield of Oscar brave ,

But, there, no more his banners rise,

No more his plumes of sable wave

10

Fair shone the sun on Oscar's birth,

When Angus hail'd his eldest born ,

The vassals round their chieftain's hearth

Crowd to applaud the happy morn

11

They feast upon the mountain deer,

The Pibroch rais'd its piercing note,<sup>1</sup>

To gladden more their Highland cheer,

The strains in martial numbers float

12

And they who heard the war-notes wild,
Hop'd that, one day, the Pibroch's strain
Should play before the Hero's child,
While he should lead the Tartan train

13.

Another year is quickly past,
And Angus hails another son,
His natal day is like the last,
Nor soon the jocund feast was done

14

Taught by their sire to bend the bow,
On Alva's dusky hills of wind,
The boys in childhood chas'd the roe,
And left their hounds in speed behind

15

But ere their years of youth are o'er,
They mingle in the ranks of war,
They lightly wheel the bright claymore,
And send the whistling arrow far

16

Dark was the flow of Oscar's hair,
Wildly it stream'd along the gale,
But Allan's locks were bright and fair,
And pensive seem'd his cheek, and pale

17

But Oscar own'd a hero's soul,
His dark eye shone through beams of truth,
Allan had early learn'd controul,
And smooth his words had been from youth

18.

Both, both were brave, the Saxon spear
Was shiver'd oft beneath their steel,
And Oscar's bosom scorn'd to fear,
But Oscar's bosom knew to feel,

19

While Allan's soul belied his form,
Unworthy with such charms to dwell
Keen as the lightning of the storm,
On foes his deadly vengeance fell

20

From high Southannon's distant tower
Arrived a young and noble dame,
With Kenneth's lands to form her dower,
Glenalvon's blue-eyed daughter came,

21

And Oscar claim'd the beauteous bride,
And Angus on his Oscar smil'd
It soothed the father's feudal pride
Thus to obtain Glenalvon's child

22

Hark ! to the Pibroch's pleasing note,
Hark ! to the swelling nuptial song,
In joyous strains the voices float,
And, still, the choral peal prolong

23

See how the Heroes' blood-red plumes
Assembled wave in Alva's hall ,
Each youth his varied plaid assumes,
Attending on their chieftain's call

24

It is not war their aid demands,
The Pibroch plays the song of peace ,
To Oscar's nuptials throng the bands
Nor yet the sounds of pleasure cease

25

But where is Oscar ? sure 'tis late
Is this a bridegroom's ardent flame ?
While thronging guests and ladies wait,
Nor Oscar nor his brother came

26

At length young Allan join'd the bride ,
" Why comes not Oscar ? " Angus said
" Is he not here ? " the Youth replied ,
" With me he rov'd not o'er the glade

27

“Perchance, forgetful of the day,
’Tis his to chase the bounding roe,
Or Ocean’s waves prolong his stay,
Yet, Oscar’s bark is seldom slow”

28

“Oh, no!” the anguish’d Sire rejoin’d,
“Nor chase, nor wave, my Boy delay,
Would he to Mora seem unkind?
Would aught to her impede his way?”

29

“Oh, search, ye Chiefs! oh, search around!
Allan, with these, through Alva fly,
Till Oscar, till my son is found,
Haste, haste, nor dare attempt reply”

30

All is confusion—through the vale,
The name of Oscar hoarsely rings,
It rises on the murm’ring gale,
Till night expands her dusky wings

31

It breaks the stillness of the night,
But echoes through her shades in vain,
It sounds through morning’s misty light,
But Oscar comes not o’er the plain.

32

Three days, three sleepless nights the Chief
For Oscar search'd each mountain cave,
Then hope is lost, in boundless grief,
His locks in grey-torn ringlets wave.

33.

"Oscar ! my son !—thou God of Heav'n,
Restore the prop of sinking age !
Or, if that hope no more is given,
Yield his assassin to my rage

34.

"Yes, on some desert rocky shore
My Oscar's whiten'd bones must lie
Then grant, thou God ! I ask no more.
With him his frantic Sure may die !

35

"Yet, he may live,—away, despair !
Be calm my soul ! he yet may live
T' arraign my fate, my voice forbear !
O God ! my impious prayer forgive

36

"What, if he live for me no more,
I sink forgotten in the dust.
The hope of Alva's age is o'er - Alas ! can pangs like these be just ?"

37

Thus did the hapless Parent mourn,
Till Time, who soothes severest woe,
Had bade serenity return,
And made the tear-drop cease to flow

38

For, still, some latent hope surviv'd
That Oscar might once more appear,
His hope now droop'd and now revived,
Till Time had told a tedious year

39

Days roll'd along, the orb of light
Again had run his destined race
No Oscar bless'd his father's sight,
And sorrow left a fainter trace

40

For youthful Allan still remain'd,
And, now, his father's only joy
And Mora's heart was quickly gain'd,
For beauty crown'd the fair-hair'd boy

41

She thought that Oscar low was laid,
And Allan's face was wondrous fair,
If Oscar liv'd, some other maid
Had claim'd his faithless bosom's care

42

And Angus said, if one year more
In fruitless hope was pass'd away,
His fondest scruples should be o'er,
And he would name their nuptial day

43.

Slow roll'd the moons, but blest at last
Arriv'd the dearly destin'd morn
The year of anxious trembling past,
What smiles the lovers' cheeks adorn !

44

Hark to the Pibroch's pleasing note !
Hark to the swelling nuptial song !
In joyous strains the voices float,
And, still, the choral peal prolong

45

Again the clan, in festive crowd,
Throng through the gate of Alva's hall,
The sounds of mirth re-echo loud,
And all their former joy recall

46

But who is he, whose darken'd brow
Glooms in the midst of general mirth ?
Before his eyes' far fiercer glow
The blue flames curdle o'er the hearth

47.

Dark is the robe which wraps his form,
And tall his plume of gory red ,
His voice is like the rising storm,
But light and trackless is his tread

48

'Tis noon of night, the pledge goes round,
The bridegroom's health is deeply quaff'd ,
With shouts the vaulted roofs resound,
And all combine to hail the draught

49

Sudden the stranger-chief arose,
And all the clamorous crowd are hush'd ,
And Angus' cheek with wonder glows,
And Mora's tender bosom blush'd

50

" Old man ! " he cried, " this pledge is done,
Thou saw'st 'twas truly drunk by me ,
It hail'd the nuptials of thy son
Now will I claim a pledge from thee

51

" While all around is mirth and joy,
To bless thy Allan's happy lot,
Say, hadst thou ne'er another boy ?
Say, why should Oscar be forgot ? "

52.

“ Alas ’ ’ the hapless Sire replied,
The big tear starting as he spoke,
“ When Oscar left my hall, or died,
This aged heart was almost broke

53.

‘ Thrice has the earth revolv’d her course
Since Oscar’s form has bless’d my sight
And Allan is my last resource,
Since martial Oscar’s death, or flight.”

54.

“ ’Tis well,” replied the stranger stern
And fiercely flash’d his rolling eye,
Thy Oscar’s fate, I fain would learn,
Perhaps the Hero did not die.

55.

‘ Perchance, if those, whom most he lov’d,
Would call, thy Oscar might return ;
Perchance, the chief has only rov’d
For him thy Beltane, yet, may burn <sup>1</sup>

56

· Fill high the bowl the table round.
We will not claim the pledge by stealth
With wine let every cup be crown’d ,
Pledge me departed Oscar’s health.’

57.

“ With all my soul,” old Angus said,
And fill'd his goblet to the brim
“ Here's to my boy ! alive or dead,
I ne'er shall find a son like him ”

58

“ Bravely, old man, this health has sped ,
But why does Allan trembling stand ?
Come, drink remembrance of the dead,
And raise thy cup with firmer hand ”

59

The crimson glow of Allan's face
Was turn'd at once to ghastly hue ,
The drops of death each other chace,
Adown in agonizing dew

60

Thrice did he raise the goblet high,
And thrice his lips refused to taste ,
For thrice he caught the stranger's eye
On his with deadly fury plac'd

61

“ And is it thus a brother hails
A brother's fond remembrance here ?
If thus affection's strength prevails,
What might we not expect from fear ? ”

62

Roused by the sneer, he rais'd the bowl,
"Would Oscar now could share our mirth!"
Internal fear appall'd his soul,<sup>1</sup>
He said, and dash'd the cup to earth

63

"'Tis he! I hear my murderer's voice!"
Loud shrieks a darkly gleaming Form
"A murderer's voice!" the roof replies,
And deeply swells the bursting storm

64

The tapers wink, the chieftains shrink,
The stranger's gone,—amidst the crew,
A Form was seen, in tartan green,
And tall the shade terrific grew

65

His waist was bound with a broad belt round,
His plume of sable stream'd on high,
But his breast was bare, with the red wounds there,
And fix'd was the glare of his glassy eye

66

And thrice he smil'd, with his eye so wild
On Angus bending low the knee,
And thrice he frown'd, on a Chief on the ground,
Whom shivering crowds with horror see

67

The bolts loud roll from pole to pole,
And thunders through the welkin ring,
And the gleaming form, through the mist of the storm,
Was borne on high by the whirlwind's wing.

68

Cold was the feast, the revel ceas'd
Who lies upon the stony floor?
Oblivion press'd old Angus' breast,<sup>1</sup>
At length his life-pulse throbs once more

69

" Away, away ! let the leech essay
To pour the light on Allan's eyes "
His sand is done,—his race is run ,
Oh ! never more shall Allan rise !

70

But Oscar's breast is cold as clay,
His locks are lifted by the gale ,
And Allan's barbèd arrow lay
With him in dark Glentanar's vale

71

And whence the dreadful stranger came,
Or who, no mortal wight can tell ,
But no one doubts the form of flame,
For Alva's sons knew Oscar well

77

What minstrel grey, what hoary bard,
 Shall Allan's deeds on harp-strings raise?
 The song is glory's chief reward,
 But who can strike a murd'rer's praise?

78

Unstrung, untouch'd, the harp must stand,
 No minstrel dare the theme awake;
 Guilt would benumb his palsied hand,
 His harp in shuddering chords would break

79

No lyre of fame, no hallow'd verse,
 Shall sound his glories high in air
 A dying father's bitter curse,
 A brother's death-groan echoes there

ODE I

TO HIS LYRE.

I WISH to tune my quivering lyre,<sup>1</sup>
 To deeds of fame, and notes of fire,

To echo, from its rising swell,
 How heroes fought and nations fell,
 When Atreus' sons advanc'd to war,
 Or Tyrian Cadmus rov'd afar,
 But still, to martial strains unknown,
 My lyre recurs to Love alone.
 Fir'd with the hope of future fame,<sup>l</sup>
 I seek some nobler Hero's name,
 The dying chords are strung anew,
 To war, to war, my harp is due :
 With glowing strings, the Epic strain
 To Jove's great son I raise again,
 Alcides and his glorious deeds,
 Beneath whose arm the Hydra bleeds,
 All, all in vain, my wayward lyre
 Wakes silver notes of soft Desire
 Adieu, ye Chiefs renown'd in arms !
 Adieu the clang of War's alarms !<sup>ll</sup>
 To other deeds my soul is strung,
 And sweeter notes shall now be sung,
 My harp shall all its powers reveal,
 To tell the tale my heart must feel,
 Love, Love alone, my lyre shall claim,
 In songs of bliss and sighs of flame

*The chords resumed a second strain,
 To Jove's great son I strike again
 Alcides and his glorious deeds,
 Beneath whose arm the Hydra bleeds —[MS Newcastle ]
 The Trumpet's blast with these accords
 To sound the clash of hostile swords—
 Be mine the softer, sweeter care
 To soothe the young and virgin Fair —[MS Newcastle ]*

ODE 3

'Twas now the hour when Night had driven
 Her car half round yon sable heaven ,
 Boötes, only, seem'd to roll <sup>1</sup>
 His Arctic charge around the Pole ,
 While mortals, lost in gentle sleep,
 Forgot to smile, or ceas'd to weep
 At this lone hour the Paphian boy,
 Descending from the realms of joy,
 Quick to my gate directs his course,
 And knocks with all his little force ,
 My visions fled, alarm'd I rose,—
 “What stranger breaks my blest repose ?”
 “Alas !” replies the wily child
 In faltering accents sweetly mild ,
 “A hapless Infant here I roam,
 Far from my dear maternal home
 Oh ! shield me from the wintry blast <sup>1</sup>
 The nightly storm is pouring fast.
 No prowling robber lingers here ,
 A wandering baby who can fear ?”

<sup>1</sup> The Newstead MS inserts—

*No Moon in silver robe was seen
 Nor d'en c trembling star between*

I heard his seeming artless tale,<sup>1</sup>
 I heard his sighs upon the gale
 My breast was never pity's foe,
 But felt for all the baby's woe.
 I drew the bar, and by the light
 Young Love, the infant, met my sight,
 His bow across his shoulders flung,
 And thence his fatal quiver hung
 (Ah ! little did I think the dart
 Would rankle soon within my heart)
 With care I tend my weary guest,
 His little fingers chill my breast,
 His glossy curls, his azure wing,
 Which droop with nightly showers, I wring,
 His shivering limbs the embers warm,
 And now reviving from the storm,
 Scarce had he felt his wonted glow,
 Than swift he seized his slender bow —
 "I fain would know, my gentle host,"
 He cried, "if this its strength has lost,

- 1 *Touched with the seeming artless tale
 Compassion's tears o'er doubt prevail,
 Methought I viewed him, cold and damp,
 I trimmed anew my dying lamp,
 Drew back the bar—and by the light
 A finioned Infant met my sight,
 His bow across his shoulders slung,
 And hence a gilded quiver hung,
 With care I tend my weary guest,
 His shivering hands by mine are pressed
 My hearth I load with embers warm
 To dry the dew drops of the storm
 Drenched by the rain of yonder sky
 The strings are weak—but let us try —[MS. Newcastle]*

I fear, relax'd with midnight dew,
 The strings their former aid refuse "
 With poison tipt, his arrow flies,
 Deep in my tortur'd heart it lies
 Then loud the joyous Urchin laugh'd —
 " My bow can still impel the shaft
 'Tis firmly fix'd, thy sighs reveal it ,
 Say, courteous host, canst thou not feel it ? "

THE EPISODE OF NISUS AND EURYALUS<sup>1</sup>

A PARAPHRASE FROM THE "ÆNEID," LIB 9

NISUS, the guardian of the portal, stood,
 Eager to gild his arms with hostile blood ,
 Well skill'd, in fight, the quivering lance to wield,
 Or pour his arrows thro' th' embattled field
 From Ida torn, he left his sylvan cave,<sup>1</sup>
 And sought a foreign home, a distant grave

- 1 *Him Ida sent, a hunter, now no more,
 To combat foes, upon a foreign shore,
 Near him, the loveliest of the Trojan band,
 Did fair Euryalus, his comrade, stand ,
 Few are the seasons of his youthful life,
 As yet a novice in the martial strife
 The Gods to him unwonted gifts impart,
 A female's beauty, with a hero's heart —* [ P on V Occasions ]
*From Ida torn he left his native grove,
 Through distant climes, and trackless seas to rove —*
[ Hours of Idleness ]

1 [Lines 1-18 were first published in P on V Occasions, under the title of "Fragment of a Translation from the 9th Book of Virgil's Æneid"]

To watch the movements of the Daunian host,
 With him Euryalus sustains the post,
 No lovelier mien adorn'd the ranks of Troy,
 And beardless bloom yet grac'd the gallant boy 10
 Though few the seasons of his youthful life,
 As yet a novice in the martial strife,
 'Twas his, with beauty, Valour's gifts to share—
 A soul heroic, as his form was fair
 These burn with one pure flame of generous love
 In peace, in war, united still they move,
 Friendship and Glory form their joint reward
 And now, combin'd they hold their nightly guard<sup>1</sup>

"What God," exclaim'd the first, "instils this fire?
 Or, in itself a God, what great desire? 20
 My lab'ring soul, with anxious thought oppress'd,
 Abhors this station of inglorious rest;
 The love of fame with this can ill accord,
 Be't mine to seek for glory with my sword
 See'st thou yon camp, with torches twinkling dim,
 Where drunken slumbers wrap each lazy limb?
 Where confidence and ease the watch disdain,
 And drowsy Silence holds her sable reign?
 Then hear my thought.—In deep and sullen grief
 Our troops and leaders mourn their absent chief 30

1 And now combin'd, the massy gate they guard —
 — they hold the nightly guard — [P on V Occasions]
 [Hours of Idleness]

Now could the gifts and promised prize be thine,
(The deed, the danger, and the fame be mine,)
‘Were this decreed, beneath yon rising mound,
Methinks, an easy path, perchance, were found,
Which past, I speed my way to Pallas’ walls,
And lead Æneas from Evander’s halls”

With equal ardour fir’d, and warlike joy,
His glowing friend address’d the Dardan boy —
“ These deeds, my Nisus, shalt thou dare alone?
Must all the fame, the peril, be thine own? 40
Am I by thee despis’d, and left afar,
As one unfit to share the toils of war?
Not thus his son the great Opheltes taught
Not thus my sire in Argive combats fought,
Not thus, when Ilion fell by heavenly hate,
I track’d Æneas through the walks of fate
Thou know’st my deeds, my breast devoid of fear,
And hostile life-drops dim my gory spear
Here is a soul with hope immortal burns,
And life, ignoble life, for Glory spurns<sup>1</sup> 50
Fame, fame is cheaply earn’d by fleeting breath
The price of honour, is the sleep of death.”

Then Nisus —“ Calm thy bosom’s fond alarms<sup>11</sup>
Thy heart beats fiercely to the din of arms

<sup>1</sup> And Love, and Life alike the glory spurned —[MS Newstead ]

<sup>11</sup> *Then Nisus, “ Ah, my friend—why thus suspect
Thy youthful breast admits of no defect ”*—[MS Newstead ]

More dear thy worth, and valour than my own,
 I swear by him, who fills Olympus' throne !
 So may I triumph, as I speak the truth,
 And clasp again the comrade of my youth !
 But should I fall,—and he, who dares advance
 Through hostile legions, must abide by chance,— 60
 If some Rutulian arm, with adverse blow,
 Should lay the friend, who ever lov'd thee, low,
 Live thou—such beauties I would fain preserve—
 Thy budding years a lengthen'd term deserve,
 When humbled in the dust, let some one be,
 Whose gentle eyes will shed one tear for me,
 Whose manly arm may snatch me back by force,
 Or wealth redeem, from foes, my captive corse,
 Or, if my destiny these last deny,
 If, in the spoiler's power, my ashes lie, 70
 Thy pious care may raise a simple tomb,
 To mark thy love, and signalise my doom
 Why should thy doating wretched mother weep
 Her only boy, reclin'd in endless sleep ?
 Who, for thy sake, the tempest's fury dar'd,
 Who, for thy sake, war's deadly peril shar'd,
 Who brav'd what woman never brav'd before,
 And left her native, for the Latian shore "

" In vain you damp the ardour of my soul,"
 Replied Euryalus, " it scorns controul, 80
 Hence, let us haste !"—their brother guards arose,

Rous'd by their call, nor court again repose ,
 The pair, buoy'd up on Hope's exulting wing,
 Their stations leave, and speed to seek the king

Now, o'er the earth a solemn stillness ran,
 And lull'd alike the cares of brute and man ,
 Save where the Dardan leaders, nightly, hold
 Alternate converse, and their plans unfold
 On one great point the council are agreed,
 An instant message to their prince decreed , 90
 Each lean'd upon the lance he well could wield,
 And pois'd with easy arm his ancient shield ,
 When Nisus and his friend their leave request,
 To offer something to their high behest.
 With anxious tremors, yet unaw'd by fear,<sup>1</sup>
 The faithful pair before the throne appear ,
 Iulus greets them , at his kind command,
 The elder, first, address'd the hoary band

"With patience" (thus Hyrtacides began)
 "Attend, nor judge, from youth, our humble plan 100
 Where yonder beacons half-expiring beam,
 Our slumbering foes of future conquest dream,<sup>11</sup>
 Nor heed that we a secret path have trac'd,
 Between the ocean and the portal plac'd ,
 Beneath the covert of the blackening smoke,
 Whose shade, securely, our design will cloak !

1 Trembling with assidenee not awed by fear —[MS Newcastle ]

11 The van. Rutulians lost in slumber dream —[MS Newcastle ]

If you, ye Chiefs, and Fortune will allow,
 We'll bend our course to yonder mountain's brow,
 Where Pallas' walls, at distance, meet the sight,
 Seen o'er the glade, when not obscur'd by night 110
 Then shall Æneas in his pride return,
 While hostile matrons raise their offspring's urn,
 And Latian spoils, and purpled heaps of dead
 Shall mark the havoc of our Hero's tread,
 Such is our purpose, not unknown the way,
 Where yonder torrent's devious waters stray,
 Oft have we seen, when hunting by the stream,
 The distant spires above the valleys gleam "

Mature in years, for sober wisdom fam'd,
 Mov'd by the speech, Alethes here exclaim'd,— 120
 "Ye parent gods! who rule the fate of Troy,
 Still dwells the Dardan spirit in the boy,
 When minds, like these, in striplings thus ye raise,
 Yours is the godlike act, be yours the praise,
 In gallant youth, my fainting hopes revive,
 And Ilion's wonted glories still survive "
 Then in his warm embrace the boys he press'd,
 And, quivering, strain'd them to his aged breast
 With tears the burning cheek of each bedew'd
 And, sobbing, thus his first discourse renew'd -- 130
 "What gift, my countrymen, what martial prize,
 Can we bestow, which you may not despise?
 Our Duties the first best boon have given—

Internal virtues are the gift of Heaven
What poor rewards can bless your deeds on earth,
Doubtless await such young, exalted worth ,
Æneas and Ascanius shall combine
To yield applause far, far surpassing mine "

Iulus then —“ By all the powers above !
By those Penates, who my country love ! 140
By hoary Vesta's sacred Fane, I swear,
My hopes are all in you, ye generous pair !
Restore my father, to my grateful sight,
And all my sorrows, yield to one delight
Nisus ! two silver goblets are thine own,
Sav'd from Arisba's stately domes o'erthrown ,
My sire secured them on that fatal day,
Nor left such bowls an Argive robber's prey
Two massy tripods, also, shall be thine,
Two talents polish'd from the glittering mine 150
An ancient cup, which Tyrian Dido gave,
While yet our vessels press'd the Punic wave
But when the hostile chiefs at length bow down,
When great Æneas wears Hesperia's crown,
The casque, the buckler, and the fiery steed
Which Turnus guides with more than mortal speed,
Are thine , no envious lot shall then be cast,
I pledge my word, irrevocably past
Nay more, twelve slaves, and twice six captive dames,
To soothe thy softer hours with amorous flames, 160

And all the realms, which now the Latins sway,
 'The labours of to-night shall well repay
 But thou, my generous youth, whose tender years
 Are near my own, whose worth my heart reveres,
 Henceforth, affection, sweetly thus begun,
 Shall join our bosoms and our souls in one,
 Without thy aid, no glory shall be mine,
 Without thy dear advice, no great design,
 Alike, through life, esteem'd, thou godlike boy,
 In war my bulwark, and in peace my joy " 170

To him Euryalus — " No day shall shame
 The rising glories which from this I claim
 Fortune may favour, or the skies may frown,
 But valour, spite of fate, obtains renown
 Yet, ere from hence our eager steps depart,
 One boon I beg, the nearest to my heart
 My mother, sprung from Priam's royal line,
 Like thine ennobled, hardly less divine,
 Nor Troy nor king Acestes' realms restrain
 Her feeble age from dangers of the main , 180
 Alone she came, all selfish fears above,<sup>1</sup>
 A bright example of maternal love
 Unknown, the secret enterprise I brave,
 Lest grief should bend my parent to the grave ,
 From this alone no fond adieus I seek,
 No fainting mother's lips have press'd my cheek ,

1 Hither she came — — [Hours of Idleness ]

By gloomy Night and thy right hand I vow,
 Her parting tears would shake my purpose now <sup>l</sup>
 "Do thou, my prince, her failing age sustain,
 In thee her much-lov'd child may live again,      190
 Her dying hours with pious conduct bless,
 Assist her wants, relieve her fond distress
 So dear a hope must all my soul enflame,"<sup>ll</sup>
 To rise in glory, or to fall in fame "
 Struck with a filial care so deeply felt,
 In tears at once the Trojan warriors melt,
 Faster than all, Iulus' eyes o'erflow!
 Such love was his, and such had been his woe
 "All thou hast ask'd, receive," the Prince replied,
 "Nor this alone, but many a gift beside      200
 To cheer thy mother's years shall be my aim,
 Creusa's<sup>1</sup> style but wanting to the dame,
 Fortune an adverse wayward course may run,
 But bless'd thy mother in so dear a son
 Now, by my life <sup>l</sup>—my Sire's most sacred oath—
 To thee I pledge my full, my firmest troth,
 All the rewards which once to thee were vow'd,<sup>lii</sup>
 If thou should'st fall, on her shall be bestow'd."
 Thus spoke the weeping Prince, then forth to view
 A gleaming falchion from the sheath he drew,      210

<sup>1</sup> Her falling tears — —[MS Newstead]

<sup>l</sup> The mother of Iulus, lost on the night when Troy was taken

Lycaon's utmost skill had grac'd the steel,
 For friends to envy and for foes to feel
 A tawny hide, the Moorish lion's spoil,<sup>1</sup>
 Slain 'midst the forest in the hunter's toil,
 Mnestheus to guard the elder youth bestows,<sup>11</sup>
 And old Alethes' casque defends his brows;
 Arm'd, thence they go, while all th' assembl'd train,
 To aid their cause, implore the gods in vain.<sup>12</sup>
 More than a boy, in wisdom and in grace,
 Iulus holds amidst the chiefs his place 220
 His prayer he sends, but what can prayers avail,
 Lost in the murmurs of the sighing gale?<sup>13</sup>

The trench is pass'd, and favour'd by the night,
 Through sleeping foes, they wheel their wary flight
 When shall the sleep of many a foe be o'er?
 Alas! some slumber, who shall wake no more!
 Chariots and bridles, mix'd with arms, are seen,
 And flowing flasks, and scatter'd troops between Bacchus and Mars, to rule the camp, combine,
 A mingled Chaos this of war and wine 230
 "Now," cries the first, "for deeds of blood prepare,
 With me the conquest and the labour share
 Here lies our path, lest any hand arise,

- 1 A tawny skin the furious lion's spoil —[MS Newstead]

Watch thou, while many a dreaming chieftain dies,
 I'll carve our passage, through the heedless foe,
 And clear thy road, with many a deadly blow"
 His whispering accents then the youth repress'd,
 And pierced proud Rhamnes through his panting breast
 Stretch'd at his ease, th', incautious king repos'd,
 Debauch, and not fatigue, his eyes had clos'd, 240
 To Turnus dear, a prophet and a prince,
 His omens more than augur's skill evince,
 But he, who thus foretold the fate of all,
 Could not avert his own untimely fall
 Next Remus' armour-bearer, hapless, fell,
 And three unhappy slaves the carnage swell,
 The charioteer along his courser's sides
 Expires, the steel his sever'd neck divides,
 And, last, his Lord is number'd with the dead
 Bounding convulsive, flies the gasping head, 250
 From the swol'n veins the blackening torrents pour,
 Stain'd is the couch and earth with clotting gore
 Young Lamyrus and Lamus next expire,
 And gay Serranus, fill'd with youthful fire,
 Half the long night in childish games was pass'd,<sup>1</sup>
 Lull'd by the potent grape, he slept at last
 Ah! happier far, had he the morn survey'd,
 And, till Aurora's dawn, his skill display'd<sup>2</sup>

In slaughter'd folds, the keepers lost in sleep,<sup>i</sup>
 His hungry fangs a lion thus may steep, 260
 Mid the sad flock, at dead of night he prowls,
 With murder glutted, and in carnage rolls
 Insatiate still, through teeming herds he roams,<sup>ii</sup>
 In seas of gore, the lordly tyrant foams

Nor less the other's deadly vengeance came,
 But falls on feeble crowds without a name,
 His wound unconscious Fadius scarce can feel,
 Yet wakeful Rhæsus sees the threatening steel
 His coward breast behind a jar he hides,
 And vainly, in the weak defence confides, 270
 Full in his heart, the falchion search'd his veins
 The reeking weapon bears alternate stains
 Through wine and blood, commingling as they flow,
 One feeble spirit seeks the shades below
 Now where Messapus dwelt they bend their way,
 Whose fires emit a faint and trembling ray,
 There, unconfin'd, behold each grazing steed,
 Unwatch'd, unheeded, on the herbage feed<sup>iii</sup>
 Brave Nisus here arrests his comrade's arm
 Too flush'd with carnage, and with conquest warm 280
 "Hence let us haste, the dangerous path is pass'd,

Full foes enough, to-night, have breath'd their last
Soon will the Day those Eastern clouds adorn ,
Now let us speed, nor tempt the rising morn "

What silver arms, with various art emboss'd,
What bowls and mantles, in confusion toss'd,
They leave regardless ! yet one glittering prize
Attracts the younger Hero's wandering eyes ,
The gilded harness Rhamnes' coursers felt,
The gems which stud the monarch's golden belt      290
This from the pallid corse was quickly torn,
Once by a line of former chieftains worn
Th' exulting boy the studded girdle wears,
Messapus' helm his head, in triumph, bears ,
Then from the tents their cautious steps they bend,
To seek the vale, where safer paths extend

Just at this hour, a band of Latian horse
To Turnus' camp pursue their destin'd course
While the slow foot their tardy march delay,
The knights, impatient, spur along the way      300
Three hundred mail-clad men, by Volscens led,
To Turnus with their master's promise sped
Now they approach the trench, and view the walls,
When, on the left, a light reflection falls ,
The plunder'd helmet, through the waning night,
Sheds forth a silver radiance, glancing bright ,
Volscens, with question loud, the pair alarms —

"Stand, Stragglers ! stand ! why early thus in arms?
 From whence? to whom?"—He meets with no reply .
 Trusting the covert of the night, they fly 310
 The thicket's depth, with hurried pace, they tread,
 While round the wood the hostile squadron spread.

With brakes entangled, scarce a path between,
 Dreary and dark appears the sylvan scene .
 Euryalus his heavy spoils impede,
 The boughs and winding turns his steps mislead
 But Nisus scours along the forest's maze,
 To where Latinus' steeds in safety graze,
 Then backward o'er the plain his eyes extend
 On every side they seek his absent friend. 320
 "O God ! my boy," he cries, "of me bereft,"
 In what impending perils art thou left ! '
 Listening he runs—above the waving trees,
 Tumultuous voices swell the passing breeze,
 The war-cry rises, thundering hoofs around
 Wake the dark echoes of the trembling ground
 Again he turns—of footsteps hears the noise—
 The sound elates—the sight his hope destroys
 The hapless boy a ruffian train surround,<sup>1</sup>
 While lengthening shades his weary way confound 330
 Him, with loud shouts, the furious knights pursue,

1 — of thee bereft
 In what dire perils is thy brother left —[MS Newstead]

2 Then his lov'd boy the ruffian band surround
 Entangled in the tufted Forest ground —[MS Newstead]

Struggling in vain, a captive to the crew.<sup>1</sup>

What can his friend 'gainst thronging numbers dare?

* Ah ! must he rush, his comrade's fate to share?

What force, what aid, what stratagem essay,

Back to redeem the Latian spoiler's prey?

His life a votive ransom nobly give,

Or die with him, for whom he wish'd to live?

Poising with strength his lifted lance on high,

On Luna's orb he cast his frenzied eye — 340

" Goddess serene, transcending every star !<sup>11</sup>

Queen of the sky, whose beams are seen afar !

By night Heaven owns thy sway, by day the grove,

When, as chaste Dian, here thou deign'st to rove ,

If e'er myself, or Sire, have sought to grace

Thine altars, with the produce of the chase,

Speed, speed my dart to pierce yon vaunting crowd,

To free my friend, and scatter far the proud "

Thus having said, the hissing dart he flung ,

Through parted shades the hurtling weapon sung , 350

The thirsty point in Sulmo's entrails lay,

Transfix'd his heart, and stretch'd him on the clay

He sobs, he dies,—the troop in wild amaze,

Unconscious whence the death, with horror gaze

While pale they stare, thro' Tagus' temples riven,

A second shaft, with equal force is driven

Fierce Volscens rolls around his lowering eyes ,

Veil'd by the night, secure the Trojan lies<sup>1</sup>
 Burning with wrath, he view'd his soldiers fall
 "Thou youth accurst, thy life shall pay for all!" 360
 Quick from the sheath his flaming glaive he drew,
 And, raging, on the boy defenceless flew.
 Nisus, no more the blackening shade conceals,
 Forth, forth he starts, and all his love reveals,
 Aghast, confus'd, his fears to madness rise,
 And pour these accents, shrieking as he flies,
 "Me, me,—your vengeance hurl on me alone,
 Here sheathe the steel, my blood is all your own,
 Ye starry Spheres! thou conscious Heaven! attest!
 He could not—durst not—lo! the guile confest! 370
 All, all was mine,—his early fate suspend.

- 1 *No object meets them but the earth and skies
 He burns for vengeance, rising in his wrath—
 Then you, accursed, thy life shall pay for both,
 Then from the sheath his flaming brand he drew,
 And on the raging boy defenceless flew
 Nisus no more the blackening shade conceals,
 Forth forth he rushed and all his love reveals
 Pale and confused his fear to madness grows,
 And thus in accents mild he greets his Foes
 "On me, on me, direct your impious steel,
 Let me and me alone your vengeance feel—
 Let not a stripling's blood by Chiefs be spill,
 Be mine the Death, as mine was all the guilt
 By Heaven and Hell, the powers of Earth and Air
 Yon guiltless stripling neither could nor dare
 Spare him, oh! spare by all the Gods above,
 A hapless boy whose only crime was Love"
 He prayed in vain, the fierce assassin's sword
 Pierced the fair side, the snowy bosom gored,
 Drooping to earth inclines his lovely head,
 O'er his fair curls, the purpling stream is spread
 As some sweet lily, by the ploughshare broke
 Languid in Death, sinks down beneath the stroke,
 Or, as some poppy, bending with the shower,
 Gently declining falls a waning flower —[MS. Not stand]*

He only lov'd, too well, his hapless friend
Spare, spare, ye Chiefs ! from him your rage remove ,
His fault was friendship, all his crime was love "
He pray'd in vain , the dark assassin's sword
Pierced the fair side, the snowy bosom gor'd ,
Lowly to earth inclines his plume-clad crest,
And sanguine torrents mantle o'er his breast
As some young rose whose blossom scents the air,
Languid in death, expires beneath the share ,       380
Or crimson poppy, sinking with the shower,
Declining gently, falls a fading flower ,
Thus, sweetly drooping, bends his lovely head,
And lingering Beauty hovers round the dead

But fiery Nisus stems the battle's tide,
Revenge his leader, and Despair his guide ,<sup>1</sup>
Volscens he seeks amidst the gathering host,
Volscens must soon appease his comrade's ghost ,
Steel, flashing, pours on steel, foe crowds on foe ,
Rage nerves his arm, Fate gleams in every blow ,       390
In vain beneath unnumber'd wounds he bleeds,
Nor wounds, nor death, distracted Nisus heeds ,
In viewless circles wheel'd his falchion flies,
Nor quits the hero's grasp till Volscens dies ,
Deep in his throat its end the weapon found,
The tyrant's soul fled groaning through the wound <sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The assassin's soul —[MS Newstead ]

Thus Nisus all his fond affection prov'd—
 Dying, revenged the fate of him he lov'd,
 Then on his bosom sought his wonted place,<sup>1</sup>
 And death was heavenly, in his friend's embrace! 400

Celestial pair! if aught my verse can claim,
 Wafted on Time's broad pinion, yours is fame!<sup>11</sup>
 Ages on ages shall your fate admire,
 No future day shall see your names expire,
 While stands the Capitol, immortal dome!
 And vanquish'd millions hail their Empress, Rome!

TRANSLATION FROM THE "MEDEA" OF EURIPIDES [Ll 627-660]

I

WHEN fierce conflicting passions urge
 The breast, where love is wont to glow,
 What mind can stem the stormy surge
 Which rolls the tide of human woe?

<sup>1</sup> *Then on his breast he sought his wonted place,
 And Death was lovely in his Friend's embrace —[MS Newstead]*
<sup>1</sup> [The Greek heading does not appear in Hours of Idleness or Poems O and T]

- . The hope of praise, the dread of shame,
Can rouse the tortur'd breast no more,
- The wild desire, the guilty flame,
Absorbs each wish it felt before

2

- But if affection gently thrills
The soul, by purer dreams possess,
- The pleasing balm of mortal ills
In love can soothe the aching breast
If thus thou comest in disguise,<sup>1</sup>
Fair Venus ! from thy native heaven,
What heart, unfeeling, would despise
The sweetest boon the Gods have given ?

3

- But, never from thy golden bow,
May I beneath the shaft expire !
Whose creeping venom, sure and slow,
Awakes an all-consuming fire
Ye racking doubts ! ye jealous fears !
With others wage internal war,
Repentance ! source of future tears,
From me be ever distant far !

4

- May no distracting thoughts destroy
The holy calm of sacred love !

1 If thus thou com'st in gentle guise —[Hours of Idleness]

May all the hours be winged with joy,
 Which hover faithful hearts above '
 Fair Venus ' on thy myrtle shrine
 May I with some fond lover sigh '
 Whose heart may mingle pure with mine
 With me to live, with me to die !

5

My native soul ' belov'd before,
 Now dearer, as my peaceful home,
 Ne'er may I quit thy rocky shore,
 A hapless banish'd wretch to roam '
 This very day, this very hour,
 May I resign this fleeting breath '
 Nor quit my silent humble bower .
 A doom, to me, far worse than death.

6

Have I not heard the exile's sign
 And seen the exile's silent tear
 Through distant climes condemn'd to fly,
 A pensive, weary wanderer here ?
 Ah ' hapless dame ' ! no sire bewails,
 No friend thy wretched fate deplores
 No kindred voice with rapture hails
 Thy steps within a stranger's doors

1 Medea, who accompanied Jason to Corinth, was deserted by him for the daughter of Creon, king of that city. The chorus from which this is taken, here addresses Medea: though a considerable liberty is taken with the original by expanding the idea, as also in some other parts of the translation.

7

Perish the fiend ! whose iron heart
 To fair affection's truth unknown,
 Bids her he fondly lov'd depart,
 Unpitied, helpless, and alone ,
 Who ne'er unlocks with silver key,<sup>1</sup>
 The milder treasures of his soul ,
 May such a friend be far from me,
 And Ocean's storms between us roll !

AWAY, ye gay landscapes, ye gardens of roses !
 In you let the minions of luxury rove ,
 Restore me the rocks, where the snow-flake reposes,
 Though still they are sacred to freedom and love
 Yet, Caledonia, belov'd are thy mountains,
 Round their white summits though elements war

<sup>2</sup> Lachin y Gair, or, as it is pronounced in the Erse, Loch na Gair, towers proudly pre-eminent in the Northern Highlands, near Invercauld. One of our modern tourists mentions it as the highest mountain, perhaps, in Great Britain. Be this as it may, it is certainly one of the most sublime and picturesque amongst our "Caledonian Alps." Its appearance is of a dusky hue, but the summit is the seat of eternal snows. Near Lachin y Gair I spent some of the early part of my life, the recollection of which has given birth to the following stanzas. [Prefixed to the poem in Hours of Idleness and Poems Old and New]

Though cataracts foam 'stead of smooth-flowing fountains,
I sigh for the valley of dark Loch na Garr.

2

Ah ! there my young footsteps in infancy, wander'd
My cap was the bonnet, my cloak was the plaid,<sup>1</sup>
On chieftains, long perish'd, my memory ponder'd,
As daily I strode through the pine-cover'd glade,
I sought not my home, till the day's dying glory
Gave place to the rays of the bright polar star,
For fancy was cheer'd, by traditional story,
Disclos'd by the natives of dark Loch na Garr

3

"Shades of the dead ! have I not heard your voices
Rise on the night-rolling breath of the gale ?"
Surely, the soul of the hero rejoices,
And rides on the wind, o'er his own Highland vale !
Round Loch na Garr, while the stormy mist gathers,
Winter presides in his cold icy car
Clouds, there, encircle the forms of my Fathers,
They dwell in the tempests of dark Loch na Garr

4

"Ill starr'd,<sup>2</sup> though brave, did no visions foreboding
Tell you that fate had forsaken your cause ?"

<sup>1</sup> This word is erroneously pronounced plad, the proper pronunciation (according to the Scotch) is shown by the orthography

Ah ! were you destined to die at Culloden,<sup>1</sup>
 Victory crown'd not your fall with applause
 Still were you happy, in death's earthy slumber,
 You rest with your clan, in the caves of Braemar,<sup>2</sup>
 The Pibroch<sup>3</sup> resounds, to the piper's loud number,
 Your deeds, on the echoes of dark Loch na Garr

5

Years have roll'd on, Loch na Garr, since I left you,
 Years must elapse, ere I tread you again
 Nature of verdure and flowers has bereft you,
 Yet still are you dearer than Albion's plain
 England ! thy beauties are tame and domestic,
 To one who has rov'd on the mountains afar
 Oh ! for the crags that are wild and majestic,
 The steep, frowning glories of dark Loch na Garr<sup>4</sup>

many of whom fought for the unfortunate Prince Charles, better known by the name of the Pretender. This branch was nearly allied by blood, as well as attachment, to the Sturts. George, the second Earl of Huntley, married the Princess Annabella Stuart, daughter of James I of Scotland. By her he left four sons: the third, Sir William Gordon, I have the honour to claim as one of my progenitors.

TO ROMANCE

I

PARENT of golden dreams, Romance !
Auspicious Queen of childish joys,
Who lead'st along, in airy dance,
Thy votive train of girls and boys ,
At length, in spells no longer bound,
I break the fetters of my youth ,
No more I tread thy mystic round,
But leave thy realms for those of Truth

2

And yet 'tis hard to quit the dreams
Which haunt the unsuspecting soul,
Where every nymph a goddess seems,<sup>1</sup>
Whose eyes through rays immortal roll ,
While Fancy holds her boundless reign,
And all assume a varied hue ,
When Virgins seem no longer vain,
And even Woman's smiles are true.

3

And must we own thee, but a name,
And from thy hall of clouds descend ?

1 Where every girl — — [MS Newstead ]

Nor find a Sylph in every dame,

A Pylades <sup>1</sup> in every friend?

• But leave, at once, thy realms of air!

To mungling bands of fairy elves,

Confess that woman's false as fair,

And friends have feeling for—themselves?

4

With shame, I own, I've felt thy sway,

Repentant, now thy reign is o'er,

No more thy precepts I obey,

No more on fancied pinions soar,

Fond fool! to love a sparkling eye,

And think that eye to truth was dear,

To trust a passing wanton's sigh,

And melt beneath a wanton's tear!

5

Romance! disgusted with deceit,

Far from thy motley court I fly,

Where Affectation holds her seat,

And sickly Sensibility,

<sup>1</sup> *But quit at once thy realms of air
Thy mungling — — [MS Newcastle]*

1 It is hardly necessary to add, that Pylades was the companion of Orestes, and a partner in one of those friendships which, with those of Achilles and Patroclus, Nisus and Euryalus, Damon and Pythias, have been handed down to posterity as remarkable instances of attachments, which in all probability never existed beyond the imagination of the poet, or the page of an historian, or modern novelist.

Whose silly tears can never flow
 For any pangs excepting thine,
 Who turns aside from real woe,
 To steep in dew thy gaudy shrine

6

Now join with sable Sympathy,
 With cypress crown'd, array'd in weeds,
 Who heaves with thee her simple sigh,
 Whose breast for every bosom bleeds,
 And call thy sylvan female choir,
 To mourn a Swain for ever gone,
 Who once could glow with equal fire,
 But bends not now before thy throne.

7

Ye genial Nymphs, whose ready tears<sup>1</sup>
 On all occasions swiftly flow,
 Whose bosoms heave with fancied fears,
 With fancied flames and phrenzy glow
 Say, will you mourn my absent name,
 Apostate from your gentle train?
 An infant Bard, at least, may claim
 From you a sympathetic strain

8

Adieu, fond race! a long adieu!
 The hour of fate is hovering nigh,

1 Auspicious cards — — [MS Newstead]

E'en now the gulf appears in view,

Where unlamented you must lie <sup>1</sup>

• Oblivion's blackening lake is seen,

Convuls'd by gales you cannot weather,

Where you, and eke your gentle queen,

Alas ! must perish altogether

THE DEATH OF CALMAR AND ORLA <sup>1</sup>

AN IMITATION OF MACPHERSON'S "OSSIAN" <sup>2</sup>

DEAR are the days of youth ! Age dwells on their remembrance through the mist of time In the twilight he recalls the sunny hours of morn He lifts his spear with trembling hand "Not thus feebly did I raise the steel before my fathers !" Past is the race of heroes ! But their fame rises on the harp , their souls ride on the wings of the wind , they hear the sound through the sighs of the storm, and rejoice in their hall of clouds Such is Calmar The grey stone marks his narrow house He looks down from eddying tempests he rolls his form in the whirlwind, and hovers on the blast of the mountain

i Where you are doomed in death to lie —[MS Newstead]

1. [The MS is preserved at Newstead.]

2 It may be necessary to observe, that the story, though considerably varied in the catastrophe, is taken from "Nisus and Euryalus," of which episode a translation is already given in the present volume [see pp 151-168]

In Morven dwelt the Chief, a beam of war to Fingal
 His steps in the field were marked in blood Lochlin's sons had fled before his angry spear,<sup>1</sup> but mild was the eye of Calmar, soft was the flow of his yellow locks they streamed like the meteor of the night No maid was the sigh of his soul his thoughts were given to friendship,—to dark-haired Orla, destroyer of heroes!
 Equal were their swords in battle, but fierce was the pride of Orla —gentle alone to Calmar Together they dwelt in the cave of Oithona

From Lochlin, Swaran bounded o'er the blue waves Erin's sons fell beneath his might Fingal roused his chiefs to combat<sup>11</sup> Their ships cover the ocean<sup>1</sup> Their hosts throng on the green hills They come to the aid of Erin

Night rose in clouds Darkness veils the armies But the blazing oaks gleam through the valley<sup>11</sup> The sons of Lochlin slept their dreams were of blood. They lift the spear in thought, and Fingal flies Not so the Host of Morven To watch was the post of Orla Calmar stood by his side Their spears were in their hands Fingal called his chiefs they stood around
 The king was in the midst. Grey were his locks, but strong was the arm of the king Age withered not his powers "Sons of Morven," said the hero, "to-morrow we meet the foe But where is Cuthullin, the shield of

<sup>1</sup> Erin's sons — —[MS Newcastle]

Erin? He rests in the halls of Tura, he knows not of our coming. Who will speed through Lochlin, to the hero, and call the chief to arms? The path is by the swords of foes, but many are my heroes. They are thunderbolts of war. Speak, ye chiefs! Who will arise?"

"Son of Trenmor! mine be the deed," said dark-haired Orla, "and mine alone. What is death to me? I love the sleep of the mighty, but little is the danger. The sons of Lochlin dream. I will seek car-borne Cuthullin. If I fall, raise the song of bards, and lay me by the stream of Lubar"—"And shalt thou fall alone?" said fair-haired Calmar. "Wilt thou leave thy friend afar? Chief of Oithona! not feeble is my arm in fight. Could I see thee die, and not lift the spear? No, Orla! ours has been the chase of the roebuck, and the feast of shells, ours be the path of danger. Ours has been the cave of Oithona, ours be the narrow dwelling on the banks of Lubar"—"Calmar," said the chief of Oithona, "why should thy yellow locks be darkened in the dust of Erin? Let me fall alone. My father dwells in his hall of air. He will rejoice in his boy, but the blue-eyed Mora spreads the feast for her Son in Morven. She listens to the steps of the hunter on the heath, and thinks it is the tread of Calmar. Let her not say, 'Calmar has fallen by the steel of Lochlin. He died with gloomy Orla, the chief of the dark brow.' Why should tears dim the azure eye of Mora? Why should her voice curse Orla, the destroyer of Calmar? Live Calmar! Live to raise my stone of moss, live to revenge me in the blood of Lochlin Join the song of bards above my grave. Sweet will be the song of Death to Orla, from the voice of Calmar My ghost shall smile on the notes of Praise." "Orla," said the son of Mora, "could I raise the song of Death to my friend? Could I give his fame to the winds? No, my heart would speak in sighs faint and broken are the sounds of sorrow Orla! our souls shall hear the song together One cloud shall be ours on high the bards will mingle the names of Orla and Calmar "

They quit the circle of the Chiefs Their steps are to the Host of Lochlin The dying blaze of oak dim-twinkles through the night The northern star points the path to Tura Swaran, the King, rests on his lonely hill Here the troops are mixed they frown in sleep, their shields beneath their heads Their swords gleam, at distance in heaps The fires are faint, their embers fail in smoke All is hushed, but the gale sighs on the rocks above Lightly wheel the Heroes through the slumbering band. Half the journey is past, when Mathon, resting on his shield, meets the eye of Orla It rolls in flame, and glistens through the shade His spear is raised on high "Why dost thou bend thy brow, chief of Oithona?" said fair-haired Calmar "we are in the midst of foes Is this a time for delay?" "It is a time for vengeance," said Orla of the gloomy brow "Mathon of Lochlin sleeps seest thou his spear? Its point is dim with the gore of my father

The blood of Mathon shall reek on mine but shall I slay him sleeping, Son of Mora? No! he shall feel his wound my fame shall not soar on the blood of slumber Rise, Mathon, rise! The Son of Conna calls, thy life is his, rise to combat" Mathon starts from sleep but did he rise alone? No the gathering Chiefs bound on the plain "Fly! Calmar, fly!" said dark-haired Orla
"Mathon is mine I shall die in joy but Lochlin crowds around Fly through the shade of night." Orla turns The helm of Mathon is cleft, his shield falls from his arm he shudders in his blood<sup>1</sup> He rolls by the side of the blazing oak Strumon sees him fall his wrath rises his weapon glitters on the head of Orla but a spear pierced his eye His brain gushes through the wound, and foams on the spear of Calmar As roll the waves of the Ocean on two mighty barks of the North, so pour the men of Lochlin on the Chiefs As, breaking the surge in foam, proudly steer the barks of the North, so rise the Chiefs of Morven on the scattered crests of Lochlin The din of arms came to the ear of Fingal. He strikes his shield, his sons throng around, the people pour along the heath Ryno bounds in joy Ossian stalks in his arms Oscar shakes the spear The eagle wing of Fillan floats on the wind Dreadful is the clang of death! many are the Widows of Lochlin
Morven prevails in its strength

1 He trembles in his blood He rolls convulsed —[MS Newstead]

Morn glimmers on the hills no living foe is seen, but the sleepers are many; grim they lie on Erin. The breeze of Ocean lifts their locks, yet they do not awake
 The hawks scream above their prey

Whose yellow locks wave o'er the breast of a chief?
 Bright as the gold of the stranger, they mingle with the dark hair of his friend 'Tis Calmar he lies on the bosom of Orla Theirs is one stream of blood Fierce is the look of the gloomy Orla He breathes not, but his eye is still a flame It glares in death unclosed
 His hand is grasped in Calmar's, but Calmar lives! he lives, though low "Rise," said the king, "rise, son of Mora 'tis mine to heal the wounds of Heroes Calmar may yet bound on the hills of Morven"<sup>1</sup>

"Never more shall Calmar chase the deer of Morven with Orla," said the Hero "What were the chase to me alone? Who would share the spoils of battle with Calmar? Orla is at rest! Rough was thy soul, Orla!
 yet soft to me as the dew of morn It glared on others in lightning to me a silver beam of night Bear my sword to blue-eyed Mora, let it hang in my empty hall
 It is not pure from blood but it could not save Orla
 Lay me with my friend raise the song when I am dark!"

They are laid by the stream of Lubar Four grey stones mark the dwelling of Orla and Calmar When Swaran was bound, our sails rose on the blue waves

1 — the mountain of Morven — [MS Newcastle]

The winds gave our barks to Morven —the bards raised the song

“What Form rises on the roar of clouds? Whose dark Ghost gleams on the red streams of tempests? His voice rolls on the thunder ’Tis Orla, the brown Chief of Oithona He was unmatched in war Peace to thy soul, Orla ! thy fame will not perish Nor thine, Calmar ! Lovely wast thou, son of blue-eyed Mora , but not harmless was thy sword It hangs in thy cave The Ghosts of Lochlin shriek around its steel Hear thy praise, Calmar ! It dwells on the voice of the mighty Thy name shakes on the echoes of Morven Then raise thy fair locks, son of Mora Spread them on the arch of the rainbow, and smile through the tears of the storm <sup>1</sup>

1 I fear Laing's late edition has completely overthrown every hope that Macpherson's Ossian might prove the translation of a series of poems complete in themselves, but, while the imposture is discovered, the merit of the work remains undisputed, though not without faults—particularly, in some parts, turgid and bombastic diction—The present humble imitation will be pardoned by the admirers of the original as an attempt, however inferior, which evinces an attachment to their favourite author [Malcolm Laing (1762–1818) published, in 1802, a History of Scotland, etc., with a dissertation “on the supposed authenticity of Ossian's Poems,” and, in 1805, a work entitled The Poems of Ossian, etc., containing the Poetical Works of James Macpherson, Esq., in Prose and Rhyme, with Notes and Illustrations]

TO EDWARD NOEL LONG, ESQ.<sup>1</sup>

"Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico"—HORACE.

DEAR LONG, in this sequester'd scene,<sup>1</sup>
 While all around in slumber lie,
 The joyous days, which ours have been
 Come rolling fresh on Fancy's eye:
 Thus, if, amidst the gathering storm,
 While clouds the darken'd noon deform,
 Yon heaven assumes a varied glow,
 I hail the sky's celestial bow,
 Which spreads the sign of future peace,
 And bids the war of tempests cease
 Ah! though the present brings but pain
 I think those days may come again.

 11. Dear L. — — [Hours of Idleness Poems O and T]

1 [The MS of these verses is at Newstead. Long was with Byron at Harrow, and was the only one of his intimate friends who went up at the same time as he did to Cambridge, where both were noted for feats of swimming and diving. Long entered the Guards, and served in the expedition to Copenhagen. He was drowned early in 1809, when on his way to join the army in the Peninsula, the transport in which he sailed being run down in the night by another of the convoy. "Long's father," says Byron, 'wrote to me to write his son's epitaph. I promised—but I had not the heart to complete it. He was such a good, amiable being as rarely remains long in this world, with talent and accomplishments, too, to make him the more regretted.'—Diary, 1821, Life, p. 32. See also memorandum (Life, p. 31, col. ii.)]

Or if, in melancholy mood,
Some lurking envious fear intrude,<sup>1</sup>
To check my bosom's fondest thought,
And interrupt the golden dream,
I crush the fiend with malice fraught,
And, still, indulge my wonted theme
Although we ne'er again can trace,
In Granta's vale, the pedant's lore,
Nor through the groves of Ida chase
Our raptured visions, as before,
Though Youth has flown on rosy pinion,
And Manhood claims his stern dominion,
Age will not every hope destroy,
But yield some hours of sober joy

Yes, I will hope that Time's broad wing
Will shed around some dews of spring
But, if his scythe must sweep the flowers
Which bloom among the fairy bowers,
Where smiling Youth delights to dwell,
And hearts with early rapture swell,
If frowning Age, with cold controul,
Confines the current of the soul,
Congeals the tear of Pity's eye,
Or checks the sympathetic sigh,
Or hears, unmov'd, Misfortune's groan
And bids me feel for self alone,

<sup>1</sup> Some daring envious —[MS Newstead]

On! may my bosom never learn
To soothe its wonted heedless flow,<sup>1</sup>
Sull, still despise the censor stern
But ne'er forget another's woe.
Yes, as you knew me in the days,
O'er which Remembrance yet delays,<sup>2</sup>
Still may I rove untutor'd, wild
And even in age, at heart a child.<sup>3</sup>

Though, now, on airy visions borne,
To you my soul is still the same.
Oft has it been my fate to mourn,<sup>4</sup>
And all my former joys are tame.
But, hence! ye hours of sable hue!
Your frowns are gone, my sorrows o'er:
By every bliss my childhood knew,
I'll think upon your shade no more.
Thus, when the whirlwind's rage is past,
And caves their sullen roar enclose,<sup>5</sup>
We heed no more the wintry blast,
When hush'd by zephyr to repose.

Full often has my infant Muse,
 Attun'd to love her languid lyre,
 But, now, without a theme to choose,
 The strains in stolen sighs expire
 My youthful nymphs, alas! are flown,<sup>1</sup>
 E—— is a wife, and C—— a mother,
 And Carolina sighs alone,
 And Mary's given to another,
 And Cora's eye, which roll'd on me,
 Can now no more my love recall—
 In truth, dear LONG, 'twas time to flee—<sup>1c</sup>
 For Cora's eye will shine on all
 And though the Sun, with genial rays,
 His beams alike to all displays,
 And every lady's eye's a sun,
 These last should be confin'd to one.
 The soul's meridian don't become her,<sup>11</sup>
 Whose Sun displays a general summer!
 Thus faint is every former flame,
 And Passion's self is now a name,<sup>1r v</sup>
 As, when the ebbing flames are low,
 The aid which once improv'd their light,
 And bade them burn with fiercer glow,
 Now quenches all their sparks in night,

TO A LADY<sup>1</sup>

1.

OH ! had my Fate been join'd with thine,<sup>1</sup>
As once this pledge appear'd a token,
These follies had not, then, been mine,
For, then, my peace had not been broken

2

To thee, these early faults I owe,
To thee, the wise and old reproving
They know my sins, but do not know
'Twas thine to break the bonds of loving

3

For once my soul, like thine, was pure,
And all its rising fires could smother,
But, now, thy vows no more endure,
Bestow'd by thee upon another<sup>1</sup>

I was serious, she was volatile she liked me as a younger brother, and treated and laughed at me as a boy, she, however, gave me her picture, and that was something to make verses upon Had I married her, perhaps, the whole tenour of my life would have been different"—Medwin's Conversations, 1824, p 81]

Yes, once the rural Scene was sweet,
For Nature seem'd to smile before thee,
And once my Breast abhor'd deceit,—
For then it beat but to adore thee.

10

But, now, I seek for other joys—
To think, would drive my soul to madness,
In thoughtless throngs, and empty noise,
I conquer half my Bosom's sadness

11

Yet, even in these, a thought will steal,
In spite of every vain endeavour,
And fiends might pity what I feel—
To know that thou art lost for ever

WHEN I ROVED A YOUNG HIGHLANDER<sup>1</sup>

I

WHEN I rov'd a young Highlander o'er the dark heath,
And climb'd thy steep summit, oh Morven of snow !<sup>1</sup>

1. Song —[Poems O and T]

1 Morven, a lofty mountain in Aberdeenshire. "Gorma of snow" is an expression frequently to be found in Ossian

One image, alone, on my bosom impress'd,
I lov'd my bleak regions, nor panted for new,
And few were my wants, for my wishes were bless'd,
And pure were my thoughts, for my soul was with you

3

I arose with the dawn, with my dog as my guide,
From mountain to mountain I bounded along,
I breasted<sup>1</sup> the billows of Dee's<sup>2</sup> rushing tide,
And heard at a distance the Highlander's song
At eve, on my heath-cover'd couch of repose,
No dreams, save of Mary, were spread to my view,
And warm to the skies my devotions arose,
For the first of my prayers was a blessing on you

4

I left my bleak home, and my visions are gone,
The mountains are vanish'd, my youth is no more,
As the last of my race, I must wither alone,
And delight but in days, I have witness'd before
Ah! splendour has rais'd, but embitter'd my lot,
More dear were the scenes which my infancy knew Though my hopes may have fail'd, yet they are not forgot,
Though cold is my heart, still it lingers with you

1 "Breasting the lofty surge" (Shakespeare)

2 The Dee is a beautiful river, which rises near Mar Lodge, and falls into the sea at New Aberdeen.

5.

When I see some dark hill point its crest to the sky,
 I think of the rocks that o'ershadow Colbleen;<sup>1</sup>
 When I see the soft blue of a love-speaking eye,
 I think of those eyes that endear'd the rude scene,
 When I see some light-waving locks I behold,
 When, haply, so like my Mary's in hue,
 That faintly resemble the flowing ringlets of gold,
 I think on the long flowing locks of beauty, and you
 The locks that were sacred to beauty, and you

6.

Yet the day may arrive, when the mountains once more
 Shall rise to my sight, in their mantles of snow,
 But while these soar above me, unchang'd as before,
 Will Mary be there to receive me?—ah, no!
 Adieu, then, ye hills, where my childhood was bred!
 Thou sweet flowing Dee, to thy waters adieu!
 No home in the forest shall shelter my head,—
 Ah! Mary, what home could be mine, but with you?

1 Colbleen is a mountain near the verge of the Highlands, not far from the ruins of Dee Castle.

2 In looking over my papers to select a few additional poems for this second edition, I found the above lines, which

Whom, still, affection taught me to defend,
 And made me less a tyrant than a friend,
 * Though the harsh custom of our youthful band
 Bade thee obey, and gave me to command,<sup>1</sup>
 Thee, on whose head a few short years will shower
 The gift of riches, and the pride of power,
 E'en now a name illustrious is thine own,
 Renown'd in rank, not far beneath the throne 10
 Yet, Dorset, let not this seduce thy soul<sup>1</sup>
 To shun fair science, or evade controul,
 Though passive tutors,<sup>2</sup> fearful to dispraise
 The titled child, whose future breath may raise,
 View ducal errors with indulgent eyes,
 And wink at faults they tremble to chastise.

I had totally forgotten, composed in the summer of 1805, a short time previous to my departure from H[arrow] They were addressed to a young schoolfellow of high rank, who had been my frequent companion in some rumbles through the neighbouring country however, he never saw the lines, and most probably never will As, on a re-perusal, I found them not worse than some other pieces in the collection, I have now published them, for the first time, after a slight revision [The foregoing note was prefixed to the poem in Poems O and T George John Frederick, 4th Duke of Dorset, born 1793, was killed by a fall from his horse when hunting, in 1815, while on a visit to his step-father the Earl of Whitworth, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland (See Byron's letter to Moore, Feb 22, 1815)]

1 At every public school the junior boys are completely subservient to the upper forms till they attain a seat in the higher classes. From this state of probation, very properly, no rank is exempt, but after a certain period, they command in turn those who succeed.

2 Allow me to disclaim any personal illusions, even the most distant. I merely mention generally what is too often the weakness of preceptors

When youthful parasites, who bend the knee
To wealth, their golden idol, not to thee,—
And even in simple boyhood's opening dawn
Some slaves are found to flatter and to fawn,—
When these declare, "that pomp alone should wait
On one by birth predestin'd to be great,
That books were only meant for drudging fools,
That gallant spirits scorn the common rules,"
Believe them not,—they point the path to shame,
And seek to blast the honours of thy name.
Turn to the few in Ida's early throng,
Whose souls disdain not to condemn the wrong,
Or if, amidst the comrades of thy youth,
None dare to raise the sterner voice of truth,
Ask thine own heart—'twill bid thee, boy, forbear!
For well I know that virtue lingers there.

Yes! I have mark'd thee many a passing day,
But now new scenes invite me far away,
Yes! I have mark'd within that generous mind
A soul, if well matur'd, to bless mankind,
Ah! though myself, by nature haughty, wild,
Whom Indiscretion hail'd her favourite child,
Though every error stamps me for her own,
And dooms my fall, I fain would fall alone,
Though my proud heart no precept, now, can tame,
I love the virtues which I cannot claim.

'Tis not enough, with other sons of power,
'To gleam the lambent meteor of an hour

To swell some peerage page in feeble pride,
With long-drawn names that grace no page beside,
'Then share with titled crowds the common lot—

While nought divides thee from the vulgar dead,
Except the dull cold stone that hides thy head, 50

That well-emblazon'd but neglected scroll,
Where Lords, unhonour'd, in the tomb may find
One spot, to leave a worthless name behind
There sleep, unnotic'd as the gloomy vaults
That veil their dust, their follies, and their faults,
A race, with old armorial lists o'erspread,
In records destin'd never to be read
Fain would I view thee, with prophetic eyes,
Exalted more among the good and wise, 60

1 Charles Sackville, Earl of Dorset [1637-1706], esteemed the most accomplished man of his day, was alike distinguished in the voluptuous court of Charles II. and the gloomy one of William III. He behaved with great gallantry in the sea-fight with the Dutch in 1665, on the day previous to which he composed his celebrated song [To all, or Ladies now at Land]. His character has been drawn in the highest colours by Dryden, Pope, Prior, and Congreve. See Anderson's British Poets, 1793. vi. 107. 108

To these adieu ! nor let me linger o'er
 Scenes hail'd, as exiles hail their native shore,
 Receding slowly, through the dark-blue deep,
 Beheld by eyes that mourn, yet cannot weep 90

Dorset, farewell ! I will not ask one part<sup>1</sup>
 Of sad remembrance in so young a heart,
 The coming morrow from thy youthful mind
 Will sweep my name, nor leave a trace behind
 And, yet, perhaps, in some maturer year,
 Since chance has thrown us in the self-same sphere,
 Since the same senate, nay, the same debate,
 May one day claim our suffrage for the state,
 We hence may meet, and pass each other by
 With faint regard, or cold and distant eye. 100
 For me, in future, neither friend nor foe,
 A stranger to thyself, thy weal or woe—
 With thee no more again I hope to trace
 The recollection of our early race,
 No more, as once, in social hours rejoice,
 Or hear, unless in crowds, thy well-known voice,
 Still, if the wishes of a heart untaught
 To veil those feelings, which, perchance, it ought,
 If these,—but let me cease the lengthen'd strain,—
 Oh ! if these wishes are not breath'd in vain, 110

TO THE EARL OF CLARE<sup>1</sup>

Tu semper amoris
 Sis memor, et cari comitis ne abscedat imago
 VAL. FLAC Argonaut. iv 36

I

FRIEND of my youth ! when young we rov'd,
 Like striplings, mutually belov'd,
 With Friendship's purest glow ;
 The bliss, which wing'd those rosy hours,
 Was such as Pleasure seldom showers
 On mortals here below.

2

The recollection seems, alone,
 Dearer than all the joys I've known,
 When distant far from you
 Though pain, 'tis still a pleasing pain,
 To trace those days and hours again,
 And sigh again, adieu !

3

My pensive mem'ry lingers o'er,
 Those scenes to be enjoy'd no more,
 Those scenes regretted ever,
 The measure of our youth is full,
 Life's evening dream is dark and dull,
 And we may meet—ah ! never !

4

As when one parent spring supplies
Two streams, which from one fountain rise,
    Together join'd in vain ,
How soon, diverging from their source,
Each, murmuring, seeks another course,
    Till mingled in the Main !

5

Our vital streams of weal or woe,
Though near, alas ! distinctly flow,
    Nor mingle as before
Now swift or slow, now black or clear,
Till Death's unfathom'd gulph appear,
    And both shall quit the shore

6

Our souls, my Friend ! which once supplied
One wish, nor breathed a thought beside,
    Now flow in different channels
Disdaining humbler rural sports,
'Tis yours to mix in polish'd courts,
    And shine in Fashion's annals ,

7

'Tis mine to waste on love my time,
Or vent my reveries in rhyme,
    Without the aid of Reason ,

For Sense and Reason (critics know it)
 Have quitted every amorous Poet.
 Nor left a thought to seize on.

8

Poor LITTLE! sweet, melodious hard'
 Of late esteem'd it monstrous hard
 That he, who sang before all:
 He was the lore of love expanded.
 By dire Reviewers should be branded.
 As void of wit and moral.

And yet, while Beauty's praise is thine,
 Harmonious favourite of the Nine
 Regime not at thy lot.
 Thy soothing lays may still be read,
 When Persecution's arm is dead.
 And critics are forgot.

10

Still I must yield those worthless men
 Who censure, with unsparring spirit.
 Bad rhymer, and those who write them

1. These stanzas were written soon after the appearance of a severe critique in a northern review, on a new publication of the British Anacreon. [BUTCH refers to the article in the Edinburgh Review, of July, 1807, on "Epist. Odes, and other Poems by Thomas Little, Esq."] ]

 A very harden'd sinner

12

Now, Clare, I must return to you, <sup>1</sup>

 Accept, then, my concession.
 In truth, dear Clare, in Fancy's flight <sup>11</sup>
 I soar along from left to right,
 My Muse admires digression

Fortune ! take back these cultur'd lands,
Take back this name of splendid sound !
I hate the touch of servile hands,
I hate the slaves that cringe around
Place me among the rocks I love,
Which sound to Ocean's wildest roar ,
I ask but this—again to rove
Through scenes my youth hath known before

3.

Few are my years, and yet I feel
The World was ne'er design'd for me
Ah ! why do dark'ning shades conceal
The hour when man must cease to be ?
Once I beheld a splendid dream,
A visionary scene of bliss
Truth !—wherefore did thy hated beam
Awake me to a world like this ?

4

I lov'd—but those I lov'd are gone ,
Had friends—my early friends are fled
How cheerless feels the heart alone,
When all its former hopes are dead !
Though gay companions, o'er the bowl
Dispel awhile the sense of ill ,
Though Pleasure stirs the maddening soul,
The heart—the heart—is lonely still

5

How dull ! to hear the voice of those Whom Rank or Chance, whom Wealth or Power,
Have made, though neither friends nor foes,
Associates of the festive hour.
Give me again a faithful few,
In years and feelings still the same,
And I will fly the midnight crew,
Where boist'rous Joy is but a name

6

And Woman, lovely Woman ! thou,
My hope, my comforter, my all !
How cold must be my bosom now,
When e'en thy smiles begin to pall !
Without a sigh would I resign,
This busy scene of splendid Woe,
To make that calm contentment mine,
Which Virtue knows, or seems to know

7

Fain would I fly the haunts of men<sup>1</sup>—
I seek to shun, not hate mankind,

<sup>1</sup> [Shyness was a family characteristic of the Byrons. The poet continued in later years to have a horror of being observed by unaccustomed eyes, and in the country would, if possible, avoid meeting strangers on the road.]

My breast requires the sullen glen,
 Whose gloom may suit a darken'd mind
 Oh ! that to me the wings were given,
 Which bear the turtle to her nest !
 Then would I cleave the vault of Heaven,
 To flee away, and be at rest.<sup>1</sup>

LINES WRITTEN BENEATH AN ELM IN THE CHURCHYARD OF HARROW<sup>1 2</sup>

SPOT of my youth ! whose hoary branches sigh,
 Swept by the breeze that fans thy cloudless sky,
 Where now alone I muse, who oft have trod,
 With those I loved, thy soft and verdant sod,

<sup>1</sup> *Lines written beneath an Elm
 In the
 Churchyard of Harrow on the Hill
 September 2, 1807 —[Poems O and T]*

<sup>1</sup> "And I said, O that I had wings like a dove, for then would I fly away, and be at rest."—Psalm lv 6 This verse also constitutes a part of the most beautiful anthem in our language.

<sup>2</sup> [On the death of his daughter, Allegra, in April, 1822, Byron sent her remains to be buried at Harrow, "where," he says, in a letter to Murray, "I once hoped to have laid my own" "There is," he wrote, May 26, "a spot in the churchyard, near the footpath, on the brow of the hill looking towards Windsor, and a tomb under a large tree (bearing the name of Peachie, or Peachey), where I used to sit for hours and hours when a boy. This was my favourite spot, but as I wish to erect a tablet to her memory, the body had better be deposited in the church" No tablet was, however, erected, and Allegra sleeps in her unmarked grave inside the church, a few feet to the right of the entrance]

With those who, scatter'd far, perchance deplore,
Like me, the happy scenes they knew before
Oh ! as I trace again thy winding hill,
Mine eyes admire, my heart adores thee still,
Thou drooping Elm ! beneath whose boughs I lay,
And frequent mus'd the twilight hours away ,
Where, as they once were wont, my limbs recline,
But, ah ! without the thoughts which then were mine
How do thy branches, moaning to the blast,
Invite the bosom to recall the past,
And seem to whisper, as they gently swell,
“ Take, while thou canst, a lingering, last farewell ! ”

When Fate shall chill, at length, this fever'd breast,
And calm its cares and passions into rest,
Oft have I thought, 'twould soothe my dying hour,—
If aught may soothe, when Life resigns her power,—
To know some humbler grave, some narrow cell,
Would hide my bosom where it lov'd to dwell ,
With this fond dream, methinks 'twere sweet to die—
And here it linger'd, here my heart might lie ,
Here might I sleep where all my hopes arose,
Scene of my youth, and couch of my repose ,
For ever stretch'd beneath this mantling shade,
Press'd by the turf where once my childhood play'd ,
Wrapt by the soil that veils the spot I lov'd,
Mix'd with the earth o'er which my footsteps mov'd ,

Blest by the tongues that charm'd my youthful ear,
 Mourn'd by the few my soul acknowledged here,
 Deplor'd by those in early days allied,
 And unremember'd by the world beside

 Where my thoughtless Childhood stray'd,
 How the northern Tempests, warring,
 Howl above thy tufted Shade !

The original MS (which is in the possession of Mrs. Chaworth Musters) formerly belonged to Miss E B Pigot, according to whom they "were written by Lord Byron in 1804." "We were reading Burns' Farewell to Ayrshire—

REMEMBRANCE

'Tis done!—I saw it in my dreams
 No more with Hope the future beams,
 My days of happiness are few
 Chill'd by Misfortune's wintry blast,
 My dawn of Life is overcast,
 Love, Hope, and Joy, alike adieu!
 Would I could add Remembrance too!

read them to Moore, and at his particular request I copied them for him"—E B Pigot, 1859

On the fly-leaf of the same volume (Poetry of Robert Burns, vol. iv. Third Edition, 1802), containing the Farewell to Ayrshire, Byron wrote in pencil the two stanzas "Oh! little lock of golden hue," in 1806 (vide post, p. 233)

It may be noted that the verses quoted, though included until recently among his poems, were not written by Burns, but by Richard Gall, who died in 1801, aged 25]

THIS Band, which bound thy yellow hair
Is mine, sweet girl ! thy pledge of love,
It claims my warmest, dearest care,
Like relics left of saints above.

Oh ! I will wear it next my heart ;
'Twill bind my soul in bonds to thee
From me again 'twill ne'er depart,

TO A KNOT OF UNGENEROUS CRITICS<sup>1</sup>

RAIL on, Rail on, ye heartless crew !
My strains were never meant for you ,
Remorseless Rancour still reveal,
And damn the verse you cannot feel
Invoke those kindred passions' aid,
Whose baleful stings your breasts pervade ,
Crush, if you can, the hopes of youth,
Trampling regardless on the Truth
Truth's Records you consult in vain,
She will not blast her native strain ,
She will assist her votary's cause,
His will at least be her applause,
Your prayer the gentle Power will spurn ,
To Fiction's motley altar turn,
Who joyful in the fond address
Her favoured worshippers will bless
And lo ! she holds a magic glass,
Where Images reflected pass,

1 [From an autograph MS at Newstead, now for the first time printed

There can be little doubt that these verses were called forth by the criticisms passed on the "Fugitive Pieces" by certain ladies of Southwell, concerning whom, Byron wrote to Mr Pigot (Jan 13, 1807), on sending him an early copy of the Poems, "That unlucky poem to my poor Mary has been the cause of some animadversion from ladies in years I have not printed it in this collection in consequence of my being pronounced a most profligate sinner, in short a 'young Moore.'"—Life, p 41 ]

Bent on your knees the Boon receive—
This will assist you to deceive—
The glittering gift was made for you,
Now hold it up to public view ,
Lest evil unforeseen betide,
A Mask each canker'd brow shall hide,
(Whilst Truth my sole desire is nigh, Prepared the danger to defy,)
“ There is the Maid's perverted name,
“ And there the Poet's guilty Flame,
“ Gloaming a deep phosphoric fire,
“ Threatening—but ere it spreads, retire ”
Says Truth “ Up Virgins, do not fear !
“ The Comet rolls its Influence here ,
“ 'Tis Scandal's Mirror you perceive,
“ These dazzling Meteors but deceive—
“ Approach and touch—Nay do not turn
“ It blazes there, but will not burn ”—
At once the shivering Mirror flies,
Teeming no more with varnished Lies,
The baffled friends of Fiction start,
Too late desiring to depart—
Truth poising high Ithuriel's spear
Bids every Fiend unmask'd appear,
The vizard tears from every face,
And dooms them to a dire disgrace
For e'er they compass their escape,
Each takes perforce a native shape—

The Leader of the wrathful Band,
Behold a portly Female stand !
She raves, impelled by private pique,
This mean unjust revenge to seek ,
From vice to save this virtuous Age,
Thus does she vent indecent rage !
What child has she of promise fair,
Who claims a fostering Mother's care ?
Whose Innocence requires defence,
Or forms at least a smooth pretence,
Thus to disturb a harmless Boy,
His humble hope, and peace annoy ?
She need not fear the amorous rhyme,
Love will not tempt her future time,
For her his wings have ceased to spread,
No more he flutters round her head ,
Her day's Meridian now is past,
The clouds of Age her Sun o'ercast ,
To her the strain was never sent,
For feeling Souls alone 'twas meant—
The verse she seized, unask'd, unbade,
And damn'd, ere yet the whole was read !
Yes ! for one single erring verse,
Pronounced an unrelenting Curse ,
Yes ! at a first and transient view,
Condemned a heart she never knew —
Can such a verdict then decide,
Which springs from disappointed pride ?

Without a wondrous share of Wit,
To judge is such a Matron fit?
The rest of the censorious throng
Who to this zealous Band belong,
To her a general homage pay,
And right or wrong her wish obey
Why should I point my pen of steel
To break "such flies upon the wheel?"
With minds to Truth and Sense unknown.
Who dare not call their words their own
Rail on, Rail on, ye heartless Crew!
Your Leader's grand design pursue
Secure behind her ample shield,
Yours is the harvest of the field.—
My path with thorns you cannot strew,
Nay more, my warmest thanks are due
When such as you revile my Name,
Bright beams the rising Sun of Fame,
Chasing the shades of envious night,
Outshining every critic Light.—
Such, such as you will serve to show
Each radiant tint with higher glow
Vain is the feeble cheerless toil,
Your efforts on yourselves recoil,
Then Glory still for me you raise,
Yours is the Censure, mine the Praise.

BYRON,
Dedication 1, 1806.

SOLILOQUY OF A BARD IN THE COUNTRY <sup>1</sup>

'Twas now the noon of night, and all was still,
 Except a hapless Rhymer and his quill
 In vain he calls each Muse in order down,
 Like other females, these will sometimes frown ,
 He frets, he fumes, and ceasing to invoke
 The Nine, in anguish'd accents thus he spoke
 Ah what avails it thus to waste my time,
 To roll in Epic, or to rave in Rhyme?
 What worth is some few partial readers' praise,
 If ancient Virgins croaking censures raise?
 Where few attend, 'tis useless to indite ,
 Where few can read, 'tis folly sure to write ,
 Where none but girls and striplings dare admire,
 And Critics rise in every country Squire—
 But yet this last my candid Muse admits,
 When Peers are Poets, Squires may well be Wits ,
 When schoolboys vent their amorous flames in verse,
 Matrons may sure their characters asperse ,
 And if a little parson joins the train,
 And echos back his Patron's voice again—
 Though not delighted, yet I must forgive,
 Parsons as well as other folks must live —

1 [From an autograph MS at Newstead, now for the first time printed ]

From rage he rails not, rather say from dread,
 He does not speak for Virtue, but for bread,
 And this we know is in his Patron's giving,
 For Parsons cannot eat without a Living.
 The Matron knows I love the Sex too well,
 Even unprovoked aggression to repel
 What though from private pique her anger grew,
 And bade her blast a heart she never knew?
 What though, she said, for one light heedless line,
 That Wilmot's<sup>1</sup> verse was far more pure than mine!
 In wars like these, I neither fight nor fly,
 When dames accuse 'tis bootless to deny,
 Her's be the harvest of the martial field,
 I can't attack, where Beauty forms the shield
 But when a pert Physician loudly cries,
 Who hunts for scandal, and who lives by lies,
 A walking register of daily news,
 Train'd to invent, and skilful to abuse—
 For arts like these at bounteous tables fed,
 When S—— condemns a book he never read
 Declaring with a coxcomb's native air,
 The moral's shocking, though the rhymes are fair
 Ah! must he rise unpunish'd from the feast,
 Nor lash'd by vengeance into truth at least?
 Such lenity were more than Man's indeed!
 Those who condemn, should surely deign to read

<sup>1</sup> [John Wilmot, Earl of Rochester (1647–1680)
Poems were published in the year of his death.]

Yet must I spare—nor thus my pen degrade,
 I quite forgot that scandal was his trade.
 For food and raiment thus the coxcomb rails,
 For those who fear his physic, like his tales
 Why should his harmless censure seem offence?
 Still let him eat, although at my expense,
 And join the herd to Sense and Truth unknown,
 Who dare not call their very thoughts their own,
 And share with these applause, a godlike bribe,
 In short, do anything, except prescribe —
 For though in garb of Galen he appears,
 His practice is not equal to his years
 Without improvement since he first began,
 A young Physician, though an ancient Man—
 Now let me cease—Physician, Parson, Dame,
 Still urge your task, and if you can, defame
 The humble offerings of my Muse destroy,
 And crush, oh ! noble conquest ! crush a Boy
 What though some silly girls have lov'd the strain,
 And kindly bade me tune my Lyre again ,
 What though some feeling, or some partial few,
 Nay, Men of Taste and Reputation too,
 Have deign'd to praise the firstlings of my Muse—
 If you your sanction to the theme refuse,
 If you your great protection still withdraw,
 Whose Praise is Glory, and whose Voice is law !
 Soon must I fall an unresisting foe,
 A hapless victim yielding to the blow —

Thus Pope by Curl and Dennis was destroyed,
 Thus Gray and Mason yield to furious Loyd,<sup>1</sup>
 From Dryden, Milbourne<sup>2</sup> tears the palm away,
 And thus I fall, though meaner far than they
 As in the field of combat, side by side,
 A Fabius and some noble Roman died

L'AMITIÉ EST L'AMOUR SANS AILES<sup>3</sup>

I

WHY should my anxious breast repine,
 Because my youth is fled?
 Days of delight may still be mine,
 Affection is not dead.
 In tracing back the years of youth,
 One firm record, one lasting truth
 Celestial consolation brings,
 Bear it, ye breezes, to the seat,
 Where first my heart responsive beat,—
 "Friendship is Love without his wings!"

<sup>1</sup> [Robert Lloyd (1733-1764) The following lines occur in the first of two odes to Obscurity and Oblivion—parodies of the odes of Gray and Mason —

"Heard ye the din of modern rhymers bray?
 It was cool M——n and warm G——y,
 Involv'd in tenfold smoke."

<sup>2</sup> [The Rev Luke Milbourne (died 1720) published, in 1698, his Notes on Dryden's Virgil, containing a venomous attack on Dryden. They are alluded to in The Dunciad, and also by Dr Johnson, who wrote (Life of Dryden), "His outrages seem to be the ebullitions of a mind agitated by stronger resentment than bad poetry can excite"]

<sup>3</sup> [The MS is preserved at Newstead]

2

Through few, but deeply chequer'd years,
What moments have been mine !
Now half obscured by clouds of tears,
Now bright in rays divine ,
Howe'er my future doom be cast,
My soul, enraptured with the past,
To one idea fondly clings ,
Friendship ! that thought is all thine own,
Worth worlds of bliss, that thought alone—
“ Friendship is Love without his wings ! ”

3

Where yonder yew-trees lightly wave
Their branches on the gale,
Unheeded heaves a simple grave,
Which tells the common tale ,
Round this unconscious schoolboys stray,
Till the dull knell of childish play
From yonder studious mansion rings ,
But here, whene'er my footsteps move,
My silent tears too plainly prove,
“ Friendship is Love without his wings ! ”

4.

Oh, Love ! before thy glowing shrine,
My early vows were paid ,
My hopes, my dreams, my heart was thine,
But these are now decay'd ,

For thine are pinions like the wind,
 No trace of thee remains behind,
     Except, alas ! thy jealous stings
 Away, away ! delusive power,
 Thou shalt not haunt my coming hour ,
     Unless, indeed, without thy wings.

5

Seat of my youth <sup>1</sup> thy distant spire
     Recalls each scene of joy ,
 My bosom glows with former fire,—
     In mind again a boy
 Thy grove of elms, thy verdant hill,
 Thy every path delights me still,
     Each flower a double fragrance flings ,
 Again, as once, in converse gay,
 Each dear associate seems to say,
     “ Friendship is Love without his wings <sup>1</sup>”

6

My Lycus ! <sup>2</sup> wherefore dost thou weep ?
     Thy falling tears restrain ,

<sup>1</sup> [Harrow]

<sup>2</sup> [Lord Clare had written to Byron, “ I think by your last letter that you are very much piqued with most of your friends, and, if I am not much mistaken, a little so with me. In one part you say, ‘ There is little or no doubt a few years or months will render us <sup>as Virgil, comment</sup> as if we had never. They are alluded to <sup>our time together</sup> as if we had never. Indeed, Byron, you know, who wrote (Life of <sup>no doubt, at least</sup> I hope, you are <sup>o be the ebullitions of a m</sup> <sup>ment than bad poetry can exci</sup> <sup>S is preserved at Newstead</sup> ]

Affection for a time may sleep,

But, oh, 'twill wake again

Think, think, my friend, when next we meet,

Our long-wish'd interview, how sweet !

From this my hope of rapture springs ,

While youthful hearts thus fondly swell,

Absence, my friend, can only tell,

“ Friendship is Love without his wings ! ”

7

In one, and one alone deceiv'd,

Did I my error mourn ?

No—from oppressive bonds reliev'd,

I left the wretch to scorn

I turn'd to those my childhood knew,

With feelings warm, with bosoms true,

Twinn'd with my heart's according strings ,

And till those vital chords shall break,

For none but these my breast shall wake

Friendship, the power deprived of wings !

8

Ye few ! my soul, my life is yours,

My memory and my hope ,

Your worth a lasting love insures,

Unfetter'd in its scope ,

From smooth deceit and terror sprung,

With aspect fair and honey'd tongue,

Let Adulation wait on kings ,
 With joy elate, by snares beset,
 We, we, my friends, can ne'er forget,
 " Friendship is Love without his wings !"

9

Fictions and dreams inspire the bard,
 Who rolls the epic song ,
 Friendship and truth be my reward—
 To me no bays belong ,
 If laurell'd Fame but dwells with lies,
 Me the enchantress ever flies,
 Whose heart and not whose fancy sings ,
 Simple and young, I dare not feign ,
 Mine be the rude yet heartfelt strain,
 " Friendship is Love without his wings !"

THE PRAYER OF NATURE <sup>1</sup>

I

FATHER of Light ! great God of Heaven !
 Hear'st thou the accents of despair ?
 Can guilt like man's be e'er forgiven ?
 Can vice atone for crimes by prayer ?

<sup>1</sup> [These stanzas were first published in Moore's Letters and Journals of Lord Byron, 1832.]

2

Father of Light, on thee I call !

Thou see'st my soul is dark within .

Thou, who canst mark the sparrow's fall,

Avert from me the death of sin

3

No shrine I seek, to sects unknown

Oh, point to me the path of truth !

Thy dread Omnipotence I own ,

Spare, yet amend, the faults of youth

4.

Let bigots rear a gloomy lane,

Let Superstition hail the pile,

Let priests, to spread their sable reign,

With tales of mystic rites beguile.

5

Shall man confine his Maker's sway

To Gothic domes of mouldering stone ?

Thy temple is the face of day ;

Earth, Ocean Heaven thy boundless throne.

6.

Shall man condemn his race to Hell,

Unless they bend in pompous form ?

Tell us that all for one who fell,

Must perish in the mingling storm ?

7.

Shall each pretend to reach the skies,
 Yet doom his brother to expire,
 Whose soul a different hope supplies,
 Or doctrines less severe inspire?

8

Shall these, by creeds they can't expound,
 Prepare a fancied bliss or woe?
 Shall reptiles, groveling on the ground,
 Their great Creator's purpose know?

9

Shall those, who live for self alone,<sup>1</sup>
 Whose years float on in daily crime—
 Shall they, by Faith, for guilt atone,
 And live beyond the bounds of Time?

10

Father! no prophet's laws I seek,—
 Thy laws in Nature's works appear,—
 I own myself corrupt and weak,
 Yet will I pray, for thou wilt hear!

<sup>1</sup> *Shall these who live for self alone,
 Whose years fleet on in daily crime—
 Shall these by Faith for guilt atone,
 Exist beyond the bounds of Time!—[MS Newstead]*

11.

Thou, who canst guide the wandering star,
Through trackless realms of æther's space,
Who calm'st the elemental war,
Whose hand from pole to pole I trace

12

Thou, who in wisdom plac'd me here,
Who, when thou wilt, canst take me hence,
Ah ! whilst I tread this earthly sphere,
Extend to me thy wide defence

13

To Thee, my God, to thee I call !
Whatever weal or woe betide,
By thy command I rise or fall,
In thy protection I confide.

14

If, when this dust to dust's restor'd,
My soul shall float on airy wing,
How shall thy glorious Name ador'd
Inspire her feeble voice to sing !

15

But, if this fleeting spirit share
With clay the Grave's eternal bed,
While Life yet throbs I raise my prayer,
Though doom'd no more to quit the dead

16

To Thee I breathe my humble strain,
 Grateful for all thy mercies past,
 And hope, my God, to thee again<sup>1</sup>
 This erring life may fly at last.

MINGLE with the genial bowl
 The Rose, the flow'ret of the Soul,
 The Rose and Grape together quaff'd,
 How doubly sweet will be the draught<sup>1</sup>
 With Roses crown our jovial brows,
 While every cheek with Laughter glows,
 While Smiles and Songs, with Wine incite,
 To wing our moments with Delight.
 Rose by far the fairest birth,
 Which Spring and Nature cull from Earth—
 Rose whose sweetest perfume given,
 Breathes our thoughts from Earth to Heaven

<sup>1</sup> My hope, my God, in thee again
This erring life will fly at last—[MS Newstead]

Rose whom the Deities above,
 From Jove to Hebe, dearly love,
 When Cytherea's blooming Boy,
 Flies lightly through the dance of Joy,
 With him the Graces then combine,
 And rosy wreaths their locks entwine
 Then will I sing divinely crown'd,
 With dusky leaves my temples bound—
 Lyæus ! in thy bowers of pleasure,
 I'll wake a wildly thrilling measure
 There will my gentle Girl and I,
 Along the mazes sportive fly,
 Will bend before thy potent throne—
 Rose, Wine, and Beauty, all my own

[OSSIAN'S ADDRESS TO THE SUN IN "CARTHON" <sup>1</sup>]

OH ! thou that roll'st above thy glorious Fire,
 Round as the shield which grac'd my godlike Sire,
 Whence are the beams, O Sun ! thy endless blaze,
 Which far eclipse each minor Glory's rays ?
 Forth in thy Beauty here thou deign'st to shine !
 Night quits her car, the twinkling stars decline ,

1 [From an autograph MS at Newstead, now for the first time printed (See Ossian's Poems, London, 1819, pp xvii 119)]

Pallid and cold the Moon descends to cave
Her sinking beams beneath the Western wave;
But thou still mov'st alone, of light the Source—
Who can o'ertake thee in thy fiery course?
Oaks of the mountains fall, the rocks decay,
Weighed down with years the hills dissolve away
A certain space to yonder Moon is given,
She rises, smiles, and then is lost in Heaven
Ocean in sullen murmurs ebbs and flows,
But thy bright beam unchanged for ever glows!
When Earth is darkened with tempestuous skies,
When Thunder shakes the sphere and Lightning flies,
Thy face, O Sun, no rolling blasts deform,
Thou look'st from clouds and laughest at the Storm
To Ossian, Orb of Light! thou look'st in vain,
Nor cans't thou glad his aged eyes again,
Whether thy locks in Orient Beauty stream,
Or glimmer through the West with fainter gleam—
But thou, perhaps, like me with age must bend,
Thy season o'er, thy days will find their end,
No more yon azure vault with rays adorn,
Lull'd in the clouds, nor hear the voice of Morn
Exult, O Sun, in all thy youthful strength!
Age, dark unlovely Age, appears at length,
As gleams the moonbeam through the broken cloud
While mountain vapours spread their misty shroud—
The Northern tempest howls along at last,
And wayworn strangers shrink amid the blast

'Thou rolling Sun who gild'st those rising towers,
 Fair didst thou shine upon my earlier hours !
 I hail'd with smiles the cheering rays of Morn,
 My breast by no tumultuous Passion torn—
 Now hateful are thy beams which wake no more
 The sense of joy which thrill'd my breast before ,
 Welcome thou cloudy veil of nightly skies,
 To thy bright canopy the mourner flies
 Once bright, thy Silence lull'd my frame to rest,
 And Sleep my soul with gentle visions blest ,
 Now wakeful Grief disdains her mild controul,
 Dark is the night, but darker is my Soul
 Ye warring Winds of Heav'n your fury urge,
 To me congenial sounds your wintry Dirge
 Swift as your wings my happier days have past,
 Keen as your storms is Sorrow's chilling blast ,
 To Tempests thus expos'd my Fate has been,
 Piercing like yours, like yours, alas ! unseen

As by the fix'd decrees of Heaven,

I prize with zeal before unknown,
It tells me of a Friend I knew,
Who loved me for myself alone

It tells me what how few can say
Though all the social tie commend,
Recorded in my heart 'twill lay,<sup>1</sup>
It tells me mine was once a Friend.

And heartless Age perhaps will smile,
Or wonder whence those feelings sprung,
Yet let not sterner souls revile,
For Both were open, Both were young

STANZAS TO JESSY.<sup>1</sup>

I

THERE IS a mystic thread of life
 So dearly wreath'd with mine alone,
 That Destiny's relentless knife
 At once must sever both, or none.

1 — a cloudless morn — [Ed 1832]

1 ["Stanzas to Jessy" have often been printed, but were never acknowledged by Byron, or included in any authorized edition of his works. They are, however, unquestionably genuine. They appeared first in Monthly Literary Recreations (July, 1807), a magazine published by B Crosby & Co, Stationers' Court. Crosby was London agent for Ridge, the Newark bookseller, and, with Longman and others, "sold" the recently issued Hours of Idleness. The same number of Monthly Literary Recreations (for July, 1807) contains Byron's review of Wordsworth's Poems (2 vols. 1807), and a highly laudatory notice of Hours of Idleness. The lines are headed "Stanzas to Jessy," and are signed "George Gordon, Lord Byron." They were republished in 1824, by Knight and Lacy, in vol. v. of the three supplementary volumes of the Works, and again in the same year by John Bumpus and A. Griffin, in their Miscellaneous Poems, etc. A note which is prefixed to these issues, "The following stanzas were addressed by Lord Byron to his Lady, a few months before their separation," and three variants in the text, make it unlikely that the pirating editors were acquainted with the text of the magazine. <sup>1</sup> Such thrills of Rapture —[Knight and Lacy, 1824, v 56 ]
 (British Museum, Eg MSS No 2332) is signed "George Gordon, Lord Byron," but the words "George Gordon, Lord" are in another hand, and were probably added by Crosby. The following letter (together with a wrapper addressed, "Mr Crosby, Stationers' Court," and sealed in red wax with Byron's arms and coronet) is attached to the poem —

"July 21, 1807

There is a Lip, which mine has prest,
But none had ever prest before ;
It vowed to make me sweetly blest,
That mine alone should press it more <sup>1</sup>

In unison so closely sweet,
That Pulse to Pulse responsive still
They Both must heave, or cease to beat

THE ADIEU

WRITTEN UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT THE AUTHOR WOULD SOON DIE.

I

ADIEU, thou Hill !<sup>1</sup> where early joy
 Spread roses o'er my brow ,
 Where Science seeks each loitering boy
 With knowledge to endow
 Adieu, my youthful friends or foes,
 Partners of former bliss or woes ,
 No more through Ida's paths we stray ,
 Soon must I share the gloomy cell,
 Whose ever-slumbering inmates dwell
 Unconscious of the day

2

Adieu, ye hoary Regal Fanes,<sup>1</sup>
 Ye spires of Granta's vale,
 Where Learning robed in sable reigns,
 And Melancholy pale
 Ye comrades of the jovial hour,
 Ye tenants of the classic bower,

<sup>1</sup> ——— ye regal Towers —[MS Newcastle ]

<sup>1</sup> [Harrow ]

On Cama's verdant margin plac'd,
Adieu ! while memory still is mine,
For offerings on Oblivion's shrine,
These scenes must be effac'd.

3

Adieu, ye mountains of the clime
Where grew my youthful years ,
Where Loch na Garr in snows sublime
His giant summit rears
Why did my childhood wander forth
From you, ye regions of the North,
With sons of Pride to roam ?
Why did I quit my Highland cave,
Marr's dusky heath, and Dee's clear wave,
To seek a Sotheron home ?

4

Hall of my Sires ! a long farewell—
Yet why to thee adieu ?
Thy vaults will echo back my knell,
Thy towers my tomb will view
The faltering tongue which sung thy fall,
And former glories of thy Hall,
Forgets its wonted simple note—
But yet the Lyre retains the strings,
And sometimes, on Æolian wings,
In dying strains may float.

5

Fields, which surround yon rustic cot,<sup>1</sup>
While yet I linger here,
Adieu ! you are not now forgot,
To retrospection dear
Streamlet !<sup>2</sup> along whose rippling surge
My youthful limbs were wont to urge,
At noontide heat, their pliant course ,
Plunging with ardour from the shore,
Thy springs will lave these limbs no more,
Deprived of active force

6

And shall I here forget the scene,
Still nearest to my breast ?
Rocks rise and rivers roll between
The spot which passion blest ,
Yet Mary,<sup>3</sup> all thy beauties seem
Fresh as in Love's bewitching dream,
To me in smiles display'd ,
Till slow disease resigns his prey
To Death, the parent of decay,
Thine image cannot fade.

7

And thou, my Friend ! whose gentle love
Yet thrills my bosom's chords,
How much thy friendship was above
Description's power of words !
Still near my breast thy gift <sup>1</sup> I wear<sup>1</sup>
Which sparkled once with Feeling's tear,
Of Love the pure, the sacred gem
Our souls were equal, and our lot
In that dear moment quite forgot,
Let Pride alone condemn !

8

All, all is dark and cheerless now !
No smile of Love's deceit
Can warm my veins with wonted glow,
Can bid Life's pulses beat
Not e'en the hope of future fame
Can wake my faint, exhausted frame,
Or crown with fancied wreaths my head
Mine is a short inglorious race,—
To humble in the dust my face,
And mingle with the dead

9.

Oh Fame ! thou goddess of my heart ,
 On him who gains thy praise,
 Pointless must fall the Spectre's dart,
 Consumed in Glory's blaze ,
 But me she beckons from the earth,
 My name obscure, unmark'd my birth,
 My life a short and vulgar dream
 Lost in the dull, ignoble crowd,
 My hopes recline within a shroud,
 My fate is Lethe's stream

10

When I repose beneath the sod,
 Unheeded in the clay,
 Where once my playful footsteps trod,
 Where now my head must lay,<sup>1</sup>
 The meed of Pity will be shed
 In dew-drops o'er my narrow bed,
 By nightly skies, and storms alone ,
 No mortal eye will deign to steep
 With tears the dark sepulchral deep
 Which hides a name unknown

11

Forget this world, my restless sprite,
 Turn, turn thy thoughts to Heaven

1 [See note to "Pignus Amoris," st 3, l 3, p 232 ]

There must thou soon direct thy flight,
 If errors are forgiven
 To bigots and to sects unknown,
 Bow down beneath the Almighty's Throne,
 To Him address thy trembling prayer
 He, who is merciful and just,
 Will not reject a child of dust,
 Although His meanest care

12

Father of Light! to Thee I call,
 My soul is dark within.
 Thou who canst mark the sparrow's fall,
 Avert the death of sin
 Thou, who canst guide the wandering star
 Who calm'st the elemental war,
 Whose mantle is yon boundless sky,
 My thoughts, my words, my crimes forgive,
 And, since I soon must cease to live,
 Instruct me how to die<sup>1</sup>

While jealous pangs our Souls perplex,

From Love, or Pity ne'er you fall,
By you, no mutual Flame is felt,
'Tis Vanity, which rules you all,
Desire alone which makes you melt

I will not say no souls are yours,
Aye, ye have Souls, and dark ones too,
Souls to contrive those smiling lures,
To snare our simple hearts for you.

4

Yet shall you never bind me fast,
Long to adore such brittle toys,
I'll rove along, from first to last,
And change whene'er my fancy cloy

Oh ! I should be a baby fool,
To sigh the dupe of female art—
Woman ! perhaps thou hast a Soul,
But where have Demons hid thy Heart ?

ON THE EYES OF MISS A—— H——<sup>1</sup>

ANNE'S Eye is liken'd to the Sun,
 From it such Beams of Beauty fall,
 And this can be denied by none,
 For like the Sun, it shines on All

 Or say these glances don't become her,
 To you, or I, or any other
 Her Sun, displays perpetual Summer<sup>2</sup>

TO A VAIN LADY<sup>3</sup>

I

Ah, headless girl ' why thus disclose
 What ne'er was meant for other ears.
 Why thus destroy thine own repose,
 And dig the source of future tears?

1 [Miss Anne Houston. From an autograph MS at Newead, now for the first time printed.]

2. [Compare, for the same simile, the lines "To Edward oel Long, Esq.," p. 187, ante.]

3. [To A Young Lady (Miss Anne Houston) whose vanity induced her to repeat the compliments paid her by some young men of her acquaintance.—MS. Newstead]

2

Oh, thou wilt weep, imprudent maid,
While lurking envious foes will smile,
For all the follies thou hast said
Of those who spoke but to beguile

3

Vain girl ! thy ling'ring woes are nigh,
If thou believ'st what striplings say
Oh, from the deep temptation fly,
Nor fall the specious spoiler's prey

4

Dost thou repeat, in childish boast,
The words man utters to deceive ?
Thy peace, thy hope, thy all is lost,
If thou canst venture to believe

5

While now amongst thy female peers
Thou tell'st again the soothing tale,
Canst thou not mark the rising sneers
Duplicity in vain would veil ?

6

These tales in secret silence hush,
Nor make thyself the public gaze
What modest maid without a blush
Recounts a flattering coxcomb's praise ?

7.

Will not the laughing boy despise
 Her who relates each fond conceit—
 Who, thinking Heaven is in her eyes,
 Yet cannot see the slight deceit?

8

For she who takes a soft delight
 These amorous nothings in revealing,
 Must credit all we say or write,
 While vanity prevents concealing

9

Cease, if you prize your Beauty's reign!
 No jealousy bids me reprove
 One, who is thus from nature vain,
 I pity, but I cannot love

TO ANNE <sup>1</sup>

I

OH, Anne, your offences to me have been grievous
 I thought from my wrath no atonement could save you,
 But Woman is made to command and deceive us—
 I look'd in your face, and I almost forgave you

<sup>1</sup> [Miss Anne Houson]

2

I vow'd I could ne'er for a moment respect you,
 Yet thought that a day's separation was long ,
 When we met, I determined again to suspect you—
 Your smile soon convinced me suspicion was wrong

3

I swore, in a transport of young indignation,
 With fervent contempt evermore to disdain you
 I saw you—my anger became admiration ,
 And now, all my wish, all my hope's to regain you

4

With beauty like yours, oh, how vain the contention !
 Thus lowly I sue for forgiveness before you,—
 At once to conclude such a fruitless dissension,
 Be false, my sweet Anne, when I cease to adore you !

EGOTISM. A LETTER TO J T BECHER <sup>1</sup>

If Fate should seal my Death to-morrow,
 (Though much I hope she will postpone it,)
 I've held a share of Joy and Sorrow,
 Enough for Ten , and here I own it.

2.

I've lived, as many others live,
 And yet, I think, with more enjoyment,
 For could I through my days again live,
 I'd pass them in the same employment.

3.

That is to say, with some exception,
 For though I will not make confession,
 I've seen too much of man's deception
 Ever again to trust profession

4.

Some sage Mammas with gesture haughty,
 Pronounce me quite a youthful Sinner—
 But Daughters say, "although he's naughty,
 You must not check a Young Beginner!"

5

I've loved, and many damsels know it—
 But whom I don't intend to mention,
 As certain stanzas also show it,
 Some say deserving Reprehension

6

Some ancient Dames, of virtue fiery,
 (Unless Report does much belie them,)
 Have lately made a sharp Enquiry,
 And much it grieves me to deny them

7

Two whom I lov'd had eyes of Blue,
To which I hope you've no objection,
The Rest had eyes of darker Hue—
Each Nymph, of course, was all perfection

8

But here I'll close my chaste Description,
Nor say the deeds of animosity,
For silence is the best prescription,
To physic idle curiosity

9

Of Friends I've known a goodly Hundred—
For finding one in each acquaintance,
By some deceived, by others plunder'd,
Friendship, to me, was not Repentance

10

At School I thought like other Children
Instead of Brains, a fine Ingredient,
Romance, my youthful Head bewildering,
To Sense had made me disobedient

11

A victim, nearly from affection,
To certain very precious scheming,
The still remaining recollection
Has cured my boyish soul of Dreaming

12

By Heaven ! I rather would forswear
 The Earth, and all the joys reserved me
 Than dare again the specious Snare,
 From which my Fate and Heaven preserved me

13

Still I possess some Friends who love me—
 In each a much esteemed and true one,
 The Wealth of Worlds shall never move me
 To quit their Friendship, for a new one.

14

But Becher ! you're a reverend pastor,
 Now take it in consideration,
 Whether for penance I should fast, or Pray for my sins in expiation

15

I own myself the child of Folly,
 But not so wicked as they make me—
 I soon must die of melancholy,
 If Female smiles should e'er forsake me.

16

Philosophers have never doubted,
 That Ladies' Lips were made for kisses !
 For Love ! I could not live without it,
 For such a cursed place as This is

17

Say, Becher, I shall be forgiven !

If you don't warrant my salvation,
I must resign all Hopes of Heaven !

For, Faith, I can't withstand Temptation

1

OH say not, sweet Anne, that the Fates have decreed
The heart which adores you should wish to dissever ,
Such Fates were to me most unkind ones indeed,—
To bear me from Love and from Beauty for ever

2

Your frowns, lovely girl, are the Fates which alone
Could bid me from fond admiration refrain ,
By these, every hope, every wish were o'erthrown,
Till smiles should restore me to rapture again

3

As the ivy and oak, in the forest entwin'd,
The rage of the tempest united must weather ,
My love and my life were by nature design'd
To flourish alike, or to perish together

4

Then say not, sweet Anne, that the Fates have decreed
 Your lover should bid you a lasting adieu
 Till Fate can ordain that his bosom shall bleed,
 His Soul, his Existence, are centred in you

1807. [First published, 1832.]

TO THE AUTHOR OF A SONNET

BEGINNING "‘SAD IS MY VERSE,’ YOU SAY, ‘AND YET
 NO TEAR’"

I

THY verse is "sad" enough, no doubt
 A devilish deal more sad than witty !
 Why we should weep I can't find out,
 Unless for thee we weep in pity

2

Yet there is one I pity more ,
 And much, alas ! I think he needs it
 For he, I'm sure, will suffer sore,
 Who, to his own misfortune, reads it

3

Thy rhymes, without the aid of magic,
 May once be read—but never after
 Yet their effect's by no means tragic,
 Although by far too dull for laughter

4

But would you make our bosoms bleed,
And of no common pang complain—
If you would make us weep indeed,
Tell us, you'll read them o'er again.

ON FINDING A FAN.<sup>1</sup>

I

IN one who felt as once he felt,
This might, perhaps, have fann'd the flame ,
But now his heart no more will melt,
Because that heart is not the same

2

As when the ebbing flames are low,
The aid which once improved their light,
And bade them burn with fiercer glow,
Now quenches all their blaze in night

3

Thus has it been with Passion's fires—
As many a boy and girl remembers—
While every hope of love expires,
Extinguish'd with the dying embers

1 [Of Miss A. H —.MS Newstead ]

4

The first, though not a spark survive,
 Some careful hand may teach to burn,
 The last, alas ! can ne'er survive,
 No touch can bid its warmth return

5

Or, if it chance to wake again,
 Not always doom'd its heat to smother,
 It sheds (so wayward fates ordain)
 Its former warmth around another

FAREWELL TO THE MUSE<sup>1</sup>

I

THOU Power ! who hast ruled me through Infancy's days,
 Young offspring of Fancy, 'tis time we should part,
 Then rise on the gale this the last of my lays,
 The coldest effusion which springs from my heart.

2

This bosom, responsive to rapture no more,
 Shall hush thy wild notes, nor implore thee to sing,
 The feelings of childhood, which taught thee to soar,
 Are wafted far distant on Apathy's wing

1 Adieu to the Muse —[MS Newcastle]

3

Though simple the themes of my rude flowing Lyre,
 Yet even these themes are departed for ever,
 No more beam the eyes which my dream could inspire,
 My visions are flown, to return,—alas, never !

4

When drain'd is the nectar which gladdens the bowl,
 How vain is the effort delight to prolong !
 When cold is the beauty which dwelt in my soul,<sup>1</sup>
 What magic of Fancy can lengthen my song ?

5

Can the lips sing of Love in the desert alone,
 Of kisses and smiles which they now must resign ?
 Or dwell with delight on the hours that are flown ?
 Ah, no ! for those hours can no longer be mine

6

Can they speak of the friends that I lived but to love ?<sup>11</sup>
 Ah, surely Affection ennobles the strain !
 But how can my numbers in sympathy move,
 When I scarcely can hope to behold them again ?

7

Can I sing of the deeds which my Fathers have done,
 And raise my loud harp to the fame of my Sires ?
 For glories like theirs, oh, how faint is my tone !
 For Heroes' exploits how unequal my fires !

<sup>1</sup> When cold is the form —[MS Newstead]

<sup>11</sup> —whom I lived but to love —[MS Newstead]

8.

Untouch'd, then, my Lyre shall reply to the blast—
 'Tis hush'd, and my feeble endeavours are o'er,
 And those who have heard it will pardon the past,
 When they know that its murmurs shall vibrate no more.

9

And soon shall its wild erring notes be forgot,
 Since early affection and love is o'ercast
 Oh ! blest had my Fate been, and happy my lot,
 Had the first strain of love been the dearest, the last

10

Farewell, my young Muse ! since we now can ne'er meet,<sup>1</sup>
 If our songs have been languid, they surely are few
 Let us hope that the present at least will be sweet—
 The present—which seals our eternal Adieu

1807 [First published, 1832]

TO AN OAK AT NEWSTEAD<sup>1</sup>

1

YOUNG Oak ! when I planted thee deep in the ground,
 I hoped that thy days would be longer than mine,
 That thy dark-waving branches would flourish around,
 And ivy thy trunk with its mantle entwine.

<sup>1</sup> [There is no heading to the original MS, but on the blank leaf at the end of the poem is written, "To an oak in the garden of Newstead Abbey, planted by the author in the 9th year of [his] age, this tree at his last visit was in a state

2

Such, such was my hope, when in Infancy's years,
 On the land of my Fathers I rear'd thee with pride,
 They are past, and I water thy stem with my tears,—
 Thy decay, not the weeds that surround thee can hide

3

I left thee, my Oak, and, since that fatal hour,
 A stranger has dwelt in the hall of my Sire,
 Till Manhood shall crown me, not mine is the power,
 But his, whose neglect may have bade thee expire

4

Oh! hardy thou wert—even now little care
 Might revive thy young head, and thy wounds gently heal
 But thou wert not fated affection to share—
 For who could suppose that a Stranger would feel?

5

Ah, droop not, my Oak! lift thy head for a while,
 Ere twice round yon Glory this planet shall run,
 The hand of thy Master will teach thee to smile,
 When Infancy's years of probation are done

of decay, though perhaps not irrecoverable" On arriving at Newstead, in 1798, Byron, then in his eleventh year, planted an oak, and cherished the fancy, that as the tree flourished so should he. On revisiting the abbey, he found the oak choked up by weeds and almost destroyed,—hence these lines Shortly after Colonel Wildman took possession, he said to a servant, "Here is a fine young oak, but it must be cut down, as it grows in an improper place."—"I hope not, sir," replied the man, "for it's the one that my lord was so fond of, because he set it himself"—Life, p 50, note.]

Oh, live then, my Oak ! tow'r aloft from the weeds,
 That clog thy young growth, and assist thy decay,
 For still in thy bosom are Life's early seeds,
 And still may thy branches their beauty display

7

Oh ! yet, if Maturity's years may be thine,
 Though I shall lie low in the cavern of Death,
 On thy leaves yet the day-beam of ages may shine,<sup>1</sup>
 Uninjured by Time, or the rude Winter's breath

8

For centuries still may thy boughs lightly wave
 O'er the corse of thy Lord in thy canopy laid,
 While the branches thus gratefully shelter his grave,
 The Chief who survives may recline in thy shade

9

And as he, with his boys, shall revisit this spot,
 He will tell them in whispers more softly to tread
 Oh ! surely, by these I shall ne'er be forgot,
 Remembrance still hallows the dust of the dead

10

And here, will they say, when in Life's glowing prime,
 Perhaps he has pour'd forth his young simple lay,
 And here must he sleep, till the moments of Time
 Are lost in the hours of Eternity's day

ON REVISITING HARROW<sup>1</sup>

I

HERE once engaged the stranger's view
 Young Friendship's record simply trac'd,
 Few were her words,—but yet, though few,
 Resentment's hand the line defac'd

2

Deeply she cut—but not eras'd—
 The characters were still so plain,
 That Friendship once return'd, and gaz'd,—
 Till Memory hail'd the words again

3

Repentance plac'd them as before,
 Forgiveness join'd her gentle name,
 So fair the inscription seem'd once more,
 That Friendship thought it still the same

4.

Thus might the Record now have been,
 But, ah, in spite of Hope's endeavour,
 Or Friendship's tears, Pride rush'd between,
 And blotted out the line for ever

September, 1807 [First published in Moore's Life and Letters, etc., 1830, i 102]

1 ["Some years ago, when at Harrow, a friend of the author engraved on a particular spot the names of both, with a few additional words, as a memorial. Afterwards, on receiving some real or imaginary injury, the author destroyed the frail record before he left Harrow. On revisiting the place in 1807, he wrote under it these stanzas"—Moore's Life, etc., i 102]

TO MY SON.<sup>1</sup>

1.

THOSE flaxen locks, those eyes of blue
Bright as thy mother's in their hue,
Those rosy lips, whose dimples play
And smile to steal the heart away,
Recall a scene of former joy,
And touch thy father's heart, my Boy!

2

And thou canst lisp a father's name—
Ah, William, were thine own the same,—
No self-reproach—but, let me cease—
My care for thee shall purchase peace,
Thy mother's shade shall smile in joy,
And pardon all the past, my Boy!

3

Her lowly grave the turf has prest,
And thou hast known a stranger's breast,
Derision sneers upon thy birth,
And yields thee scarce a name on earth,
Yet shall not these one hope destroy,—
A Father's heart is thine, my Boy!

1 [For a reminiscence of what was, possibly, an actual event, see Don Juan, canto xvi st. 61. He told Lady Byron that he had two natural children, whom he should provide for.]

4.

Why, let the world unfeeling frown,
Must I fond Nature's claims disown?
Ah, no—though moralists reprove,
I hail thee, dearest child of Love,
Fair cherub, pledge of youth and joy—
A Father guards thy birth, my Boy!

5.

Oh, 'twill be sweet in thee to trace,
Ere Age has wrinkled o'er my face,
Ere half my glass of life is run,
At once a brother and a son,
And all my wane of years employ
In justice done to thee, my Boy!

6

Although so young thy heedless sire,
Youth will not damp parental fire,
And, wert thou still less dear to me,
While Helen's form revives in thee,
The breast, which beat to former joy,
Will ne'er desert its pledge, my Boy!

QUERIES TO CASUISTS.<sup>1</sup>

THE Moralists tell us that Loving is Sinning,
 And always are prating about and about it,
 But as Love of Existence itself's the beginning,
 Say, what would Existence itself be without it?

They argue the point with much furious Invective,
 Though perhaps 'twere no difficult task to confute it,
 But if Venus and Hymen should once prove defective,
 Pray who would there be to defend or dispute it?

SONG <sup>2</sup>

1

BREEZE of the night in gentler sighs
 More softly murmur o'er the pillow,
 For Slumber seals my Fanny's eyes,
 And Peace must never shun her pillow

Or breathe those sweet Æolian strains
 Stolen from celestial spheres above,
 To charm her ear while some remains,
 And soothe her soul to dreams of love

<sup>1</sup> [From an autograph MS (watermark 1805) at Newstead, now for the first time printed]

3

But Breeze of night again forbear,
 In softest murmurs only sigh,
 Let not a Zephyr's pinion dare
 To lift those auburn locks on high

4

Chill is thy Breath, thou breeze of night !
 Oh ! ruffle not those lids of Snow,
 For only Morning's cheering light
 May wake the beam that lurks below

5

Blest be that lip and azure eye !
 Sweet Fanny, hallowed be thy Sleep !
 Those lips shall never vent a sigh,
 Those eyes may never wake to weep

TO HARRIET <sup>1</sup>

I

HARRIET ! to see such Circumspection,<sup>2</sup>
 In Ladies I have no objection
 Concerning what they read,

<sup>2</sup> [See the poem "To Marion," and note, p 129. It would seem that J. F. Becher addressed some flattering lines to Byron with reference to a poem concerning Harriet Maltby, possibly the lines "To Marion." The following note was An ancient Maid's a sage adviser,

 Like her, you will be much the wiser,
 In word, as well as Deed.

2.

But Harriet, I don't wish to flatter,
 And really think 't would make the matter
 More perfect if not quite,
 If other Ladies when they preach,
 Would certain Damsels also teach
 More cautiously to write

THERE WAS A TIME, I NEED NOT NAME<sup>1</sup>

I

THERE was a time, I need not name,
 Since it will ne'er forgotten be,
 When all our feelings were the same
 As still my soul hath been to thee

attached by Miss Pigot to these stanzas, which must have been written on another occasion — "I saw Lord B was flattered by John Becher's lines, as he read Apollo, etc., with a peculiar smile and emphasis, so out of fun, to vex him a little, I said, 'Apollo' He should have said Apollyon' 'Elizabeth! for Heaven's sake don't say so again! I don't mind you telling me so, but if any one else got hold of the word, I should never hear the end of it.' So I laughed at him, and dropt it, for he was red with agitation"]

I [This copy of verses, with eight others, originally appeared in a volume published in 1809 by J. C. Hobhouse, under the title of Imitations and Translations, From the Ancient and Modern Classics, Together with Original Poems never before published. The MS. is in the possession of the Earl of Lovelace]

2.

And from that hour when first thy tongue
Confess'd a love which equall'd mine,
Though many a grief my heart hath wrung,
Unknown, and thus unfelt, by thine,

3

None, none hath sunk so deep as this—
To think how all that love hath flown,
Transient as every faithless kiss,
But transient in thy breast alone

4

And yet my heart some solace knew,
When late I heard thy lips declare,
In accents once imagined true,
Remembrance of the days that were

5

Yes ! my adored, yet most unkind !
Though thou wilt never love again,
'To me 'tis doubly sweet to find
Remembrance of that love remain<sup>1</sup>

6

Yes ! 'tis a glorious thought to me,
Nor longer shall my soul repine,
Whate'er thou art or e'er shalt be,
Thou hast been dearly, solely mine

AND WILT THOU WEEP WHEN I AM LOW?<sup>1</sup>

I

AND wilt thou weep when I am low?

Sweet lady ! speak those words again

Yet if they grieve thee, say not so—

I would not give that bosom pain

2

My heart is sad, my hopes are gone,

My blood runs coldly through my breast

And when I perish, thou alone

Wilt sigh above my place of rest

3

And yet, methinks, a gleam of peace

Doth through my cloud of anguish shine

And for a while my sorrows cease,

To know thy heart hath felt for mine.

4

Oh lady ' blessed be that tear—

It falls for one who cannot weep

<sup>1</sup> Starzas —[MS L]

To the Same —[Irish and Transl, p 202]

Such precious drops are doubly dear<sup>1</sup>

To those whose eyes no tear may steep

5

Sweet lady ! once my heart was warm

With every feeling soft as thine ,

But Beauty's self hath ceased to charm

A wretch created to repine.

6<sup>ll</sup>

Yet wilt thou weep when I am low ?

Sweet lady ! speak those words again

Yet if they grieve thee, say not so—

I would not give that bosom pain<sup>1</sup>

1 [It was in one of Byron's fits of melancholy that the following verses were addressed to him by his friend John Cam Hobhouse —

EPISTLE TO A YOUNG NOBLEMAN IN LOVE

Hail ! generous youth, whom glory's sacred flame
Inspires, and animates to deeds of fame ,
Who feel the noble wish before you die
To rouse the finger of each passer-by
Hail ! may a future age admiring view
A Falkland or a Clarendon in you

REMINDE ME NOT, REMINDE ME NOT.<sup>1</sup>

I

REMINDE me not, remind me not,
 Of those beloved, those vanish'd hours,
 When all my soul was given to thee,
 Hours that may never be forgot,
 Till Time unnerves our vital powers,
 And thou and I shall cease to be

<sup>1</sup> A Love Song To — — [Imit and Transl, p 197]

But as your blood with dangerous passion boils,
 Beware! and fly from Venus' silken toils
 Ah! let the head protect the weaker heart,
 And Wisdom's Ægis turn on Beauty's dart

* * * *

But if 'tis fix'd that every lord must pair,
 And you and Newstead must not want an heir,
 Lose not your pains, and scour the country round,
 To find a treasure that can ne'er be found!
 No! take the first the town or court affords,
 Trick'd out to stock a market for the lords,
 By chance perhaps your luckier choice may fall
 On one, though wicked, not the worst of all

* * * *

One though perhaps as any Maxwell free,
 Yet scarce a copy, Claribel, of thee,
 Not very ugly, and not very old,
 A little pert indeed, but not a scold,
 One that, in short, may help to lead a life
 Not farther much from comfort than from strife,
 And when she dies, and disappoints your fears,
 Shall leave some joys for your declining years

But, as your early youth some time allows,
 Nor custom yet demands you for a spouse,

2.

Can I forget—canst thou forget,
 When playing with thy golden hair,
 How quick thy fluttering heart did move?

Some hours of freedom may remain as yet,
 For one who laughs alike at love and debt
 Then, why in haste? put off the evil day,
 And snatch at youthful comforts while you may!
 Pause! nor so soon the various bliss forego
 That single souls, and such alone, can know
 Ah! why too early careless life resign,
 Your morning slumber, and your evening wine,
 Your loved companion, and his easy talk,
 Your Muse, invoked in every peaceful walk?
 What! can no more your scenes paternal please,
 Scenes sacred long to wise, unmated ease?
 The prospect lengthen'd o'er the distant down,
 Lakes, meadows, rising woods, and all your own?
 What! shall your Newstead, shall your cloister'd bowers,
 The high o'erhanging arch and trembling towers!
 Shall these, profaned with folly or with strife,
 An ever fond, or ever angry wife!
 Shall these no more confess a manly sway,
 But changeful woman's changing whims obey?
 Who may, perhaps, as varying humour calls,
 Contract your cloisters and o'erthrow your walls,
 Let Repton loose o'er all the ancient ground,
 Change round to square, and square convert to round,
 Root up the elms' and yews' too solemn gloom,
 And fill with shrubberies gay and green their room,
 Roll down the terrace to a gay parterre,
 Where gravel'd walks and flowers alternate glare,
 And quite transform, in every point complete,
 Your Gothic abbey to a country seat.

Forget the fair one, and your fate delay,
 If not avert, at least defer the day,
 When you beneath the female yoke shall bend,
 And lose your wit, your temper, and your friend*
Trin Coll. Camb, 1808]

* [In his mother's copy of Hobhouse's volume, Byron has written with a pencil, "I have lost them all, and shall wed accordingly 1811. B"]

Oh ! by my soul, I see thee yet,
With eyes so languid, breast so fair,
And lips, though silent, breathing love

3.

When thus reclining on my breast,
Those eyes threw back a glance so sweet,
As half reproach'd yet rais'd desire,
And still we near and nearer prest,
And still our glowing lips would meet,
As if in kisses to expire

4.

And then those pensive eyes would close,
And bid their lids each other seek,
Veiling the azure orbs below ,
While their long lashes' darken'd gloss
Seem'd stealing o'er thy brilliant cheek,
Like raven's plumage smooth'd on snow

5

I dreamt last night our love return'd,
And, sooth to say, that very dream
Was sweeter in its phantasy,
Than if for other hearts I burn'd,
For eyes that ne'er like thine could beam
In Rapture's wild reality

6

Then tell me not, remind me not,<sup>i</sup>
 Of hours which, though for ever gone,
 Can still a pleasing dream restore,<sup>ii</sup>
 Till thou and I shall be forgot,
 And senseless, as the mouldering stone
 Which tells that we shall be no more

TO A YOUTHFUL FRIEND<sup>iii</sup>

I

Few years have pass'd since thou and I
 Were firmest friends, at least in name,
 And Childhood's gay sincerity
 Preserved our feelings long the same.<sup>iv</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Remind me not, remind me not —[MS L.]

<sup>iii</sup> To Sir W. D., on his using the expression, "Sojourn constant in amidst" —[MS L.]

<sup>iv</sup> *'Twere well my friend if still with thee
 Through every scene of joy and woe,
 That thought could ever cherish'd be
 As warm as it was wont to glow* —[MS L.]

2.

But now, like me, too well thou know'st <sup>i</sup>
 What trifles oft the heart recall,
 And those who once have loved the most
 Too soon forget they lov'd at all <sup>ii</sup>

3

And such the change the heart displays,
 So frail is early friendship's reign, <sup>iii</sup>
 A month's brief lapse, perhaps a day's,
 Will view thy mind estrang'd again <sup>iv</sup>

4

If so, it never shall be mine
 To mourn the loss of such a heart,
 The fault was Nature's fault, not thine,
 Which made thee fickle as thou art

5

As rolls the Ocean's changing tide,
 So human feelings ebb and flow,
 And who would in a breast confide
 Where stormy passions ever glow?

<sup>i</sup> And yet like me.—[MS L]

<sup>iii</sup> So short—[MS L]

<sup>iv</sup> a day
Will send my friendship back again—[MS L]

6

It boots not that, together bred,
 Our childish days were days of joy<sup>1</sup>
 My spring of life has quickly fled,
 Thou, too, hast ceas'd to be a boy

7

And when we bid adieu to youth,
 Slaves to the specious World's controul,
 We sigh a long farewell to truth,
 That World corrupts the noblest soul.

8

Ah, joyous season ! when the mind<sup>1</sup>
 Dares all things boldly but to lie,
 When Thought ere spoke is unconfin'd,
 And sparkles in the placid eye

9

Not so in Man's maturer years,
 When Man himself is but a tool,
 When Interest sways our hopes and fears,
 And all must love and hate by rule.

10

With fools in kindred vice the same,<sup>1</sup>
 We learn at length our faults to blend,
 And those, and those alone, may claim
 The prostituted name of friend.

<sup>1</sup> *Each fool whose vices are the same
 Whose faults with ours may blend* — [MS L.]

<sup>1</sup> [Stanzas 8-9 are not in the MS]

11.

Such is the common lot of man
 Can we then 'scape from folly free?
 Can we reverse the general plan,
 Nor be what all in turn must be?

12.

No, for myself, so dark my fate
 Through every turn of life hath been,
 Man and the World so much I hate,
 I care not when I quit the scene.

13

But thou, with spirit frail and light,
 Wilt shine awhile, and pass away,
 As glow-worms sparkle through the night,
 But dare not stand the test of day

14.

Alas! whenever Folly calls
 Where parasites and princes meet,
 (For cherish'd flatterers first in royal halls,
 The welcome vices kindly greet,)

15

Ev'n now thou'rt ni
 One insect to the lightly seen to add
 And still thy trifling fluttering crowd,
 To join the vain an heart is glad
 And court the proud.

16.

There dost thou glide from fair to fair,
Still simpering on with eager haste,
As flies along the gay parterre,
That tant the flowers they scarcely taste.

17

But say, what nymph will prize the flame
Which seems, as marshy vapours move,
To flit along from dame to dame,
An ignis-fatuus gleam of love?

18

What friend for thee, howe'er inclin'd,
Will deign to own a kindred care?
Who will debase his manly mind,
For friendship every fool may share?

19

In time forbear, amidst the throng
No more so base a thing be seen,
No more so idly pass along,
Be something, any thing, but—mean.

LINES INSCRIBED UPON A CUP FORMED
 FROM A SKULL.<sup>1</sup>

I

START not—nor deem my spirit fled
 In me behold the only skull,
 From which, unlike a living head,
 Whatever flows is never dull.

2

I lived, I loved, I quaff'd, like thee
 I died let earth my bones resign,
 Fill up—thou canst not injure me,
 The worm hath fouler lips than thine.

3

Better to hold the sparkling grape,
 Than nurse the earth-worm's slimy brood,
 And circle in the goblet's shape
 The drink of Gods, than reptile's food

<sup>1</sup> [Byron gave Medwin the following account of this cup —“The gardener in digging [discovered] a skull that had probably belonged to some jolly friar or monk of the abbey, about the time it was dis-monasteried. Observing it to be of giant size, and in a perfect state of preservation, a strange fancy seized me of having it set and mounted as a drinking cup I accordingly sent it to town, and it returned with a very high polish, and of a mottled colour like tortoiseshell”—Medwin's Conversations, 1824, p 87 ]

4.

Where once my wit, perchance, hath shone,
 In aid of others' let me shine,
 And when, alas ! our brains are gone,
 What nobler substitute than wine ?

5

Quaff while thou canst another race,
 When thou and thine, like me, are sped,
 May rescue thee from earth's embrace,
 And rhyme and revel with the dead

6

Why not ? since through life's little day
 Our heads such sad effects produce,
 Redeem'd from worms and wasting clay,
 This chance is theirs, to be of use

For still my heart regards thy weal
 Warmly, as it was wont to do

2

Thy husband's blest—and 'twill impart
 Some pangs to view his happier lot <sup>1</sup>
 But let them pass—Oh ! how my heart
 Would hate him if he loved thee not !

3

When late I saw thy favourite child,
 I thought my jealous heart would break,
 But when the unconscious infant smil'd,
 I kiss'd it for its mother's sake.

4.

I kiss'd it,—and repress'd my sighs
 Its father in its face to see,
 But then it had its mother's eyes,
 And they were all to love and me

5 <sup>u.</sup>

Mary, adieu ! I must away
 While thou art blest I'll not repine,
 But near thee I can never stay,
 My heart would soon again be thine.

1. Some pang to see my rival's lot —[MS L]

u MS L inserts—

*Poor little pledge of mutual love,
 I would not hurt a hair of thee,
 Although thy birth should chance to prove
 Thy parents' bliss—my misery*

6

I deem'd that Time, I deem'd that Pride,
Had quench'd at length my boyish flame ,
Nor knew, till seated by thy side,
My heart in all,—save hope,—the same

7

Yet was I calm I knew the time
My breast would thrill before thy look ,
But now to tremble were a crime—
We met,—and not a nerve was shook

8

I saw thee gaze upon my face,
Yet meet with no confusion there
One only feeling couldst thou trace ,
The sullen calmness of despair

9.

Away ! away ! my early dream
Remembrance never must awake
Oh ! where is Lethe's fabled stream ?
My foolish heart be still, or break

INSCRIPTION ON THE MONUMENT OF A NEWFOUNDLAND DOG<sup>1</sup>

WHEN some proud son of man returns to earth,
Unknown to glory, but upheld by birth,
The sculptor's art exhausts the pomp of woe
And storied urns record who rest below
When all is done, upon the tomb is seen,
Not what he was, but what he should have been

<sup>1</sup> [This monument is placed in the garden of Newstead
A prose inscription precedes the verses —

“Near this spot
Are deposited the Remains of one
Who possessed Beauty without Vanity,
Strength without Insolence,
Courage without Ferocity,
And all the Virtues of Man without his Vices
This Praise, which would be unmeaning Flattery
If inscribed over human ashes,
Is but a just tribute to the Memory of BOATSWAIN, a Dog,
Who was born at Newfoundland, May, 1803,
And died at Newstead Abbey, Nov 18, 1808”

Byron thus announced the death of his favourite to his friend Hodgson — “Boatswain is dead! — he expired in a state of madness on the 18th after suffering much, yet retaining all the gentleness of his nature to the last, never attempting to do the least injury to any one near him. I have now lost everything except old Murray” In the will which the poet executed in 1811, he desired to be buried in the vault with his dog, and Joe Murray was to have the honour of making one of the party. When the poet was on his travels, a gentleman, to whom Murray showed the tomb, said, “Well, old boy, you will take your place here some twenty years hence.” “I don’t know that, sir,” replied Joe, “if I was sure his lordship would come here I should like it well enough, but I should not like to lie alone with the dog” — Life, pp 73, 131 ]

But the poor dog, in life the firmest friend,
 The first to welcome, foremost to defend,
 Whose honest heart is still his master's own,
 Who labours, fights, lives, breathes for him alone,
 Unhonour'd falls, unnoticed all his worth—
 Denied in heaven the soul he held on earth
 While Man, vain insect ! hopes to be forgiven,
 And claims himself a sole exclusive Heaven
 Oh Man ! thou feeble tenant of an hour,
 Debased by slavery, or corrupt by power,
 Who knows thee well must quit thee with disgust,
 Degraded mass of animated dust !
 Thy love is lust, thy friendship all a cheat,
 Thy smiles hypocrisy, thy words deceit <sup>1</sup>
 By nature vile, ennobled but by name,
 Each kindred brute might bid thee blush for shame
 Ye ! who perchance behold this simple urn,
 Pass on—it honours none you wish to mourn
 To mark a Friend's remains these stones arise,
 I never knew but one,—and here he lies <sup>1</sup>

TO A LADY,<sup>1</sup>

ON BEING ASKED MY REASON FOR QUITTING ENGLAND
IN THE SPRING<sup>2</sup>

I.

WHEN Man, expell'd from Eden's bowers,
A moment linger'd near the gate.
Each scene recall'd the vanish'd hours,
And bade him curse his future fate

2

But, wandering on through distant climes
He learnt to bear his load of grief;
Just gave a sigh to other times,
And found in busier scenes relief

3

Thus, Lady! will it be with me.<sup>3</sup>
And I must view thy charms no more,
For, while I linger near to thee,
I sigh for all I knew before.

FILL THE GOBLET AGAIN <sup>11</sup>

A SONG

I

FILL the goblet again ! for I never before
 Felt the glow which now gladdens my heart to its core ,
 Let us drink !—who would not?—since, through life's varied round,
 In the goblet alone no deception is found

1 Without a wish to enter there —[Imit and Transl , p 196 ]

11. Song —[Imit and Transl , p 204.]

1 [In an unpublished letter of Byron to —, dated within a few days of his final departure from Italy to Greece, in 1823, he writes "Miss Chaworth was two years older than myself She married a man of an ancient and respectable family, but her marriage was not a happier one than my own Her conduct, however, was irreproachable, but there was not sympathy between their characters I had not seen her for many years when an occasion offered to me, January, 1814. I was upon the point, with her consent, of paying her a visit, when my sister, who has always had more influence over me than any one else, persuaded me not to do it. "For," said she, "if you go you will fall in love again, and then there will be a scene, one step will lead to another, et cela fera un éclat" ]

2

I have tried in its turn all that life can supply ,
I have bask'd in the beam of a dark rolling eye ,
I have lov'd !—who has not ?—but what heart can declare
That Pleasure existed while Passion was there ?

3

In the days of my youth, when the heart's in its spring,
And dreams that Affection can never take wing,
I had friends !—who has not ?—but what tongue will avow,
That friends, rosy wine ! are so faithful as thou ?

4

The heart of a mistress some boy may estrange,
Friendship shifts with the sunbeam—thou never canst change ,
Thou grow'st old—who does not ?—but on earth what appears,
Whose virtues, like thine, still increase with its years ?

5

Yet if blest to the utmost that Love can bestow,
Should a rival bow down to our idol below,
We are jealous !—who's not ?—thou hast no such alloy ;
For the more that enjoy thee, the more we enjoy

6

Then the season of youth and its vanities past,
 For refuge we fly to the goblet at last,
 There we find—do we not?—in the flow of the soul,
 That truth, as of yore, is confined to the bowl.

7

When the box of Pandora was open'd on earth,
 And Misery's triumph commenc'd over Mirth,
 Hope was left,—was she not?—but the goblet we kiss,
 And care not for Hope, who are certain of bliss

8.

Long life to the grape! for when summer is flown,
 The age of our nectar shall gladden our own
 We must die—who shall not?—May our sins be forgiven,
 And Hebe shall never be idle in Heaven

STANZAS TO A LADY, ON LEAVING ENGLAND<sup>1</sup>

I

'Tis done—and shivering in the gale

 Because I cannot love but one

2

But could I be what I have been,
And could I see what I have seen—
Could I repose upon the breast
Which once my warmest wishes blest—
I should not seek another zone,
Because I cannot love but one

3

'Tis long since I beheld that eye
Which gave me bliss or misery ,
And I have striven, but in vain,
Never to think of it again :
For though I fly from Albion,
I still can only love but one

4

As some lone bird, without a mate,
My weary heart is desolate ,
I look around, and cannot trace
One friendly smile or welcome face,
And ev'n in crowds am still alone,
Because I cannot love but one

5

And I will cross the whitening foam,
And I will seek a foreign home ,

Till I forget a false fair face,
 I ne'er shall find a resting-place,
 My own dark thoughts I cannot shun,
 But ever love, and love but one

6

The poorest, veriest wretch on earth
 Still finds some hospitable hearth,
 Where Friendship's or Love's softer glow
 May smile in joy or soothe in woe,
 But friend or leman I have none,<sup>1</sup>
 Because I cannot love but one.

7

I go—but wheresoe'er I flee
 There's not an eye will weep for me,
 There's not a kind congenial heart,
 Where I can claim the meanest part,
 Nor thou, who hast my hopes undone,
 Wilt sigh, although I love but one.

8

To think of every early scene,
 Of what we are, and what we've been,
 Would whelm some softer hearts with woe—
 But mine, alas ! has stood the blow,
 Yet still beats on as it begun,
 And never truly loves but one

<sup>1</sup> But friend or lover I have none —[Imit. as d. Transl., p. 229]

9

And who that dear lov'd one may be,
 Is not for vulgar eyes to see,
 And why that early love was cross'd,
 Thou know'st the best, I feel the most,
 But few that dwell beneath the sun
 Have loved so long, and loved but one

10

I've tried another's fetters too,
 With charms perchance as fair to view,
 And I would fain have loved as well,
 But some unconquerable spell
 Forbade my bleeding breast to own
 A kindred care for aught but one

11

'Twould soothe to take one lingering view,
 And bless thee in my last adieu,
 Yet wish I not those eyes to weep
 For him that wanders o'er the deep,
 His home, his hope, his youth are gone,<sup>1</sup>
 Yet still he loves, and loves but one<sup>11</sup>

---

ALL my friends, learned and unlearned, have urged me not to publish this Satire with my name. If I were to be "turned from the career of my humour by quibbles quick, and paper bullets of the brain," I should have complied with their counsel. But I am not to be terrified by abuse, or bullied by reviewers, with or without arms. I can safely say that I have attacked none personally, who did not commence on the offensive. An Author's works are public property: he who purchases may judge, and publish his opinion if he pleases, and the Authors I have endeavoured to commemorate may do by me as I have done by them. I dare say they will succeed better in condemning my scribblings, than in mending their own. But my object is not to prove that I can write well, if, if possible, to make others write better. As the Poem has met with far more success than I expected, I have endeavoured in this Edition to make some additions and alterations, to render it more worthy of public perusal.

1 [The Preface, as it is here printed, was prefixed to the Second, Third, and Fourth Editions of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers. The preface to the First Edition began with the words, "With regard to the real talents," etc. (see overleaf, line 11). The text of the poem follows that of the suppressed Fifth Edition, which passed under Byron's own supervision, and was to have been issued in 1812. From that Edition the Preface was altogether excluded.]

In an annotated copy of the Fourth Edition, of 1811, underneath the note, "This preface was written for the Second Edition, and printed with it. The noble author had left this country previous to the publication of that Edition, and is not yet returned," Byron wrote, in 1816, "He is, and gone again."—MS. Notes from this volume, which is now in Mr Murray's possession, are marked—B, 1816.]

In the First Edition of this Satire, published anonymously, fourteen lines on the subject of Bowles's Pope were written by, and inserted at the request of, an ingenious friend of mine,<sup>1</sup> who has now in the press a volume of Poetry. In the present Edition they are erased, and some of my own substituted in their stead, my only reason for this being that which I conceive would operate with any other person in the same manner,—a determination not to publish with my name any production, which was not entirely and exclusively my own composition

With<sup>2</sup> regard to the real talents of many of the poetical persons whose performances are mentioned or alluded to in the following pages, it is presumed by the Author that there can be little difference of opinion in the Public at large, though, like other sectaries, each has his separate tabernacle of proselytes, by whom his abilities are over-rated, his faults overlooked, and his metrical canons received without scruple and without consideration. But the unquestionable possession of considerable genius by several of the writers here censured<sup>3</sup> renders their mental prostitution more to be regretted. Inbecility may be pitied, or, at worst, laughed at and forgotten; perverted powers demand the most decided reprehension. No one can wish more than the Author that some known and able writer had undertaken their exposure, but Mr Gifford has devoted himself to Massinger, and, in the absence of the regular physician, a country practitioner may, in cases of absolute necessity, be allowed to prescribe his nostrum to prevent the extension of so deplorable an epidemic, provided there be no quackery in his treatment of the malady. A caustic is here offered, as it is to be feared nothing short of actual cautery can recover the numerous patients afflicted with the present prevalent and distressing rabies for rhyming.—As to the Edinburgh Reviewers, it would indeed require an Hercules to crush the Hydra, but if the Author succeeds in merely "bruising one of the heads of the serpent," though his own hand should suffer in the encounter, he will be amply satisfied

INTRODUCTION TO ENGLISH BARDS, AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

THE article upon Hours of Idleness "which Lord Brougham after denying it for thirty years, confessed that he had written" (Notes from a Diary, by Sir M E Grant Duff, 1897, ii. 189), was published in the Edinburgh Review of January, 1808. English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers did not appear till March, 1809. The article gave the opportunity for the publication of the satire, but only in part provoked its composition. Years later, Byron had not forgotten its effect on his mind. On April 26, 1821, he wrote to Shelley "I recollect the effect on me of the Edinburgh on my first poem it was rage and resistance and redress but not despondency nor despair" And on the same date to Murray "I know by experience that a savage review is hemlock to a sucking author, and the one on me (which produced the English Bards, etc) knocked me down, but I got up again," etc. It must, however, be remembered that Byron had his weapons ready for an attack before he used them in defence. In a letter to Miss Pigot, dated October 26, 1807, he says that "he has written one poem of 380 lines to be published in a few weeks with notes. The poem is a Satire" It was entitled British Bards, and finally numbered 520 lines. With a view to publication, or for his own convenience, it was put up in type and printed in quarto sheets. A single copy, which he kept for corrections and additions, was preserved by Dallas, and is now in the British Museum. After the review appeared, he enlarged and recast the British Bards, and in March, 1809, the Satire was published anonymously. Byron was at no pains to conceal the authorship of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, and, before starting on his Pilgrimage, he had prepared a second and enlarged edition, which came out in October, 1809, with his name prefixed. Two more editions were called for in his absence, and on his return he revised and printed a fifth, when he suddenly resolved to suppress the work. On his homeward voyage he expressed, in a letter to Dallas, June 28, 1811, his regret at having written the Satire. A year later he became intimate, among others, with Lord and Lady Holland, whom he had assailed on the supposition that they were the instigators of the article in the Edinburgh Review, and on being told by Rogers that they wished the Satire to be withdrawn, he gave orders to his publisher, Cawthorn, to burn the whole impression. A few copies escaped the flames. One of two copies retained by Dallas, which afterwards belonged to Murray, and is now in his grandson's possession, was the foundation of the text of 1831, and of all subsequent issues. Another copy which belonged to Dallas is retained in the British Museum.

Towards the close of the last century there had been an outburst of satirical poems, written in the style of the Dunciad and its offspring the Rosciad. Of these, Gifford's Baviad and Mæviad (1794-5), and T. J. Mathias' Pursuits of Literature (1794-7), were the direct progenitors of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers. The Rolliad (1794), the Children of Apollo (circ. 1794), Canning's New Morality (1798), and Wolcot's coarse but virile lampoons, must also be reckoned among Byron's earlier models. The ministry of "All the Talents" gave rise to a fresh batch of political jeux d'esprits, and in 1807, when Byron was still at Cambridge, the air was full of these ephemera. To name only a few, All the Talents, by Polypus (Eaton Stannard Barrett), was answered by All the Blocks, an antidote to All the Talents, by Flagellum (W. H. Ireland), Elijah's Mantle, a tribute to the memory of the R. H. William Pitt, by James Sayer, the caricaturist, provoked Melville's Mantle, being a Parody on Elijah's Mantle. The Simpliciad, A Satirico-Didactic Poem, and Lady Anne Hamilton's Epics of the Ton, are also of the same period. One and all have perished, but Byron read them, and in a greater or less degree they supplied the impulse to write in the fashion of the day.

British Bards would have lived, but, unquestionably, the spur of the article, a year's delay, and, above all, the advice and criticism of his friend Hodgson, who was at work on his Gentle Alternative for the Reviewers, 1809 (for further details, see vol. 1, Letters, Letter 102, note 1), produced the brilliant success of the enlarged satire. English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers was recognized at once as a work of genius. It has intercepted the popularity of its great predecessors, who are often quoted, but seldom read. It is still a popular poem, and appeals with fresh delight to readers who know the names of many of the "bards" only because Byron mentions them, and count others whom he ridicules among the greatest poets of the century.

Jeffrey was called to the Scottish bar in 1794, and as an advocate was especially successful with juries. He was constantly employed, and won fame and fortune. In 1829 he was elected Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, and the following year, when the Whigs came into office, he became Lord Advocate. He sat as M.P. twice for Malton (1830-1832), and, afterwards, for Edinburgh. In 1834 he was appointed a Judge of the Court of Sessions, when he took the title of Lord Jeffrey. Byron had attacked Jeffrey in British Bards before his Hours of Idleness had been cut up by the Edinburgh, and when the article appeared (Jan. 1808), under the mistaken impression that he was the author, denounced him at large (II 460-528) in the first edition of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers. None the less, the great critic did not fail to do ample justice to the poet's mature work, and won from him repeated acknowledgments of his kindness and generosity. (See Edinburgh Review, vol. XXII p. 416, and Byron's comment in his Diary for March 20, 1814, Life, p. 232. See, too, Hints from Horace, II 589-626, and Don Juan, canto v. st. 11-16, and canto vii st. 16. 2 [William Gifford (1756-1826), a self-taught scholar, first a ploughboy, then boy on board a Brixham coaster, afterwards shoemaker's apprentice, was sent by friends to Exeter College, Oxford (1779-81). In the Baviad (1794) and the Mæviad (1795) he attacked many of the smaller writers of the day, who were either silly, like the Della Cruscan School, or discreditable, like Williams, who wrote as “Anthony Pasquin.” In his Epistle to Peter Pindar (1800) he laboured to expose the true character of John Wolcot. As editor of the Anti-Jacobin, or Weekly Examiner (November, 1797, to July, 1798), he supported the political views of Canning and his friends. As editor of the Quarterly Review, from its foundation (February, 1809) to his resignation in September, 1824, he soon rose to literary eminence by his sound sense and adherence to the best models, though his judgments were sometimes narrow-minded and warped by political prejudice. His editions of Massinger (1805), which superseded that of Monck Mason and Davies (1765), of Ben Jonson (1816), of Ford (1827), are valuable. To his translation of Juvenal (1802) is prefixed his autobiography. His translation of Persius appeared in 1821. To Gifford, Byron usually paid the utmost deference. “Any suggestion of yours, even if it were conveyed,” he writes to him, in 1813, “in the less tender text of the Baviad, or a Monck Mason note to Massinger, would be obeyed.” See also his letter (September 20, 1821, Life, p 531) “I know no praise which would compensate me in my own mind for his censure.” Byron was attracted to Gifford, partly by his devotion to the classical models of literature, partly by the outspoken frankness of his literary criticism, partly also, perhaps, by his physical deformity.]

3 [At first sight Byron appears to refer to the lighting of streets by gas, especially as the first shop lighted with it was that of Lardner & Co, at the corner of the Albany (June, 1805), and as lamps were on view at the premises of the Gas Light and Coke Company in Pall Mall from 1808 onwards. But it is almost certain that he alludes to the "sublimating gas" of Dr Beddoes, which his assistant, Davy, mentions in his Researches (1800) as nitrous oxide, and which was used by Southey and Coleridge. The same four "wonders" of medical science are depicted in Gillray's caricatures, November, 1801, and May and June, 1802, and are satirized in Christopher Caustic's Terrible Tractoration ! A Poetical Petition against Galvanising Trumpery and the Perkinistic Institution (in 4 cantos, 1803)]

Against vaccination, or cow-pox, a brisk war was still being carried on. Gillray has a likeness of Jenner vaccinating patients.

Metallic "Tractors" were a remedy much advertised at the beginning of the century by an American quack, Benjamin

2 See the "Lay of the Last Minstrel," passim Never was any plan so incongruous and absurd as the groundwork of this production The entrance of Thunder and Lightning prologuising to Byles' tragedy [(vide The Rehearsal), British Bards], unfortunately takes away the merit of originality from the dialogue between Messieurs the Spirits of Flood and Fell in the first canto Then we have the amiable William of Deloraine, "a stark moss-trooper," videlicet, a happy compound of porcher, sheep-stealer, and highwayman The propriety of his magical lady's injunction not to read can only be equalled by his candid acknowledgment of his independence of the trammels of spelling, although, to use his own elegant phrase, "'twas his neckverse at Harribee," &c the gallows

The biography of Gilpin Horner, and the marvellous pedestrian page, who travelled twice as fast as his master's horse, without the aid of seven-leagued boots, are chefs d'œuvre in the improvement of taste For incident we have the invisible, but by no means sparing box on the ear bestowed on the page, and the entrance of a Knight and Charger into the castle, under the very natural disguise of a wain of hay Marmion, the hero of the latter romance, is exactly what William of Deloraine would have been, had he been able to read and write. The poem was manufactured for Messrs. CONSTABLE, MURRAY, and MILLER, worshipful Booksellers in consideration of the receipt of a sum of money, and truly, considering the inspiration, it is a very creditable production. If Mr SCOTT will write for hire, let him do his best for his paymasters, but not disgrace his genius which is undoubtedly great, by a repetition of Black-Letter Ballad imitations

[Constable paid Scott a thousand pounds for Marmion, and "offered one fourth of the copyright to Mr Miller of Albemarle Street, and one fourth to Mr Murray of Fleet Street (see line 173) Both publishers eagerly accepted the proposal." "A severe and unjust review of Marmion by Jeffery appeared in [the Edinburgh Review for April] 1808 accusing Scott of a mercenary spirit in writing for money . . . Scott was much nettled by these observations" (Memoirs of John Murray, I. 76, 95) In his diary of 1813 Byron wrote of Scott, "He is undoubtedly the Monarch of Parnassus, and the most English of Bards"—Life, p. 206]

c. 1 [It was the suggestion of the Countess of Dalkeith, that Scott should write a ballad on the old border legend of Gilpin Horner, which first gave shape to the poet's ideas, and led to the Lay of the Last Minstrel]

1 [In his strictures on Scott and Southey, Byron takes his lead from Lady Anne Hamilton's (1766-1846, daughter of Archibald, ninth Duke of Hamilton, and Lady-in-waiting to Caroline of Brunswick) Epics of the Ton (1807), a work which has not shared the dubious celebrity of her Secret Memories of the Court, etc. (1832) Compare the following lines (p. 9) —

"Then still might Southey sing his crazy Joan,
 Or feign a Welshman o'er the Atlantic frown,
 Or tell of Thylaba the wondrous matter,
 Or with clown Wordsworth, chatter, chatter, chatter

Good-natured Scott rehearse, in well-paid lays,
 The mar'v'ous chiefs and elves of other days"

(For Scott's reference to "my share of flagellation among my betters," and an explicit statement that he had remonstrated with Jeffrey against the "offensive criticism" of Hours of Idleness, because he thought it treated with undue severity, see Introduction to Marmion, 1830))

1 — though lesser bards content — [British Bards ]

1 Thalaba, Mr SOUTHEY'S second poem, is written in open defiance of precedent and poetry. Mr S wished to produce something novel, and succeeded to a miracle. Joan of Arc was marvellous enough, but Thalaba was one of those poems "which," in the words of PORSON, "will be read when Homer and Virgil are forgotten, but—not till then." [Of Thalaba the wild and wondrous song—Poem to Madoc, Southey's Poetical Works (1838), vol 1. Joan of Arc was published in 1796, Thalaba the Destroyer in 1801, and Madoc in 1805.]

 Thou still wilt verseward plod thy weary way 230

or the Life and Death of Tom Thumb the Great, first played in 1730 at the Haymarket.

1 Southey's Madoc is divided into two parts—Part I, 'Madoc in Wales,' Part II, 'Madoc in Aztlan.' The word 'cacique' ("Cacique or cazique . . . a native chief or 'prince' of the aborigines in the West Indies" New Engl Dict., Art. "Cacique") occurs in the translations of Spanish writers quoted by Southey in his notes, but not in the text of the poem.

2 We beg Mr Southey's pardon "Madoc disdains the degraded title of Epic." See his Preface. ["It assumes not the degraded title of Epic."—Preface to Madoc (1805), Southey's Poetical Works (1838), vol v p xxi] Why is Epic degraded? and by whom? Certainly the late Romantics of Masters Cottle, Laureat Pyc, Ogilvy, Hole,* and gentle Mistress Cowley, have not exalted the Epic Muse, but, as Mr SOUTHEY'S poem "disdains the appellation," allow us to ask—has he substituted anything better in its stead? or must he be content to rival Sir RICHARD BLACKMORE in the quantity as well as quality of his verse?

* For "Hole," the MS and British Bards read "Sir J B Burgess, Cumberland."

If still in Berkeley-Ballads most uncivil,
 Thou wilt devote old women to the devil,<sup>1</sup>
 The babe unborn thy dread intent may rue
 "God help thee," SOUTHEY,<sup>2</sup> and thy readers too.

Next comes the dull disciple of thy school,<sup>3</sup>
 That mild apostate from poetic rule,
 The simple WORDSWORTH, framer of a lay
 As soft as evening in his favourite May,
 Who warns his friend "to shake off toil and trouble,
 And quit his books, for fear of growing double,"<sup>4</sup> 240
 Who, both by precept and example, shows
 That prose is verse, and verse is merely prose,
 Convincing all, by demonstration plain,
 Poetic souls delight in prose insane,

1 See The Old Woman of Berkeley, a ballad by Mr Southey, wherein an aged gentlewoman is carried away by Beelzebub, on a "high trotting horse."

2 The last line, "God help thee," is an evident plagiarism from the Anti-Jacobin to Mr Southey, on his Dactyls —

"God help thee, silly one!"

Poetry of the Anti-Jacobin, p 23

3 [In the annotated copy of the Fourth Edition Byron has drawn a line down the margin of the passage on Wordsworth, lines 236-248, and adds the word "Unjust" The first four lines on Coleridge (lines 255-258) are also marked "Unjust" The recitation is, no doubt, intended to apply to both passages from beginning to end]

 Contain the essence of the true sublime

 The idiot mother of "an idiot Boy,"
 A moon-struck, silly lad, who lost his way,
 And, like his bard, confounded night with day <sup>1</sup> 250
 So close on each pathetic part he dwells,
 And each adventure so sublimely tells,
 That all who view the "idiot in his glory"
 Conceive the Bard the hero of the story

Shall gentle COLERIDGE pass unnoticed here,<sup>2</sup>

 Though themes of innocence amuse him best,
 Yet still Obscurity's a welcome guest.
 If Inspiration should her aid refuse
 To him who takes a Pixy for a muse,<sup>3</sup> 260

1 Mr W. in his preface labours hard to prove, that prose and verse are much the same, and certainly his precepts and practice are strictly conformable —

"And thus to Betty's questions he Made answer, like a traveller bold
 'The cock did crow, to-whoo, to-whoo,
 And the sun did shine so cold'"

<sup>1</sup> [Matthew Gregory Lewis (1775–1818), known as “Monk” Lewis, was the son of a rich Jamaica planter. During a six months’ visit to Weimar (1792–3), when he was introduced to Goethe, he applied himself to the study of German literature, especially novels and the drama. In 1794 he was appointed attaché to the Embassy at the Hague, and in the course of ten weeks wrote Ambrosio, or The Monk, which was published in 1795. In 1798 he made the acquaintance of Scott, and procured his promise of co-operation in his contemplated Tales of Terror. In the same year he published the Castle Spectre (first played at Drury Lane, Dec 14, 1797), in which, to quote the postscript “To the Reader,” he meant (but Sheridan interposed) “to have exhibited a whole regiment of Ghosts.” Tales of Terror were printed at Weybridge in 1801, and two or three editions of Tales of Wonder, to which Byron refers, came out in the same year. Lewis borrowed so freely from all sources that the collection was called “Tales of Plunder.” In the first edition (two vols., printed by W. Bulmer for the author, 1801) the first eighteen poems, with the exception of The Fire King (xii) by Walter Scott, are by Lewis, either original or translated. Scott also contributed Glenfinlas, The Eve of St John, Frederick and Alice, The Wild Huntsmen (Der Wilde Jäger). Southey contributed six poems, including The Old Woman of Berkeley (xxi). The Little Grey Man (xix) is by H. Bunbury. The second volume is made up from Burns, Gray, Parnell, Glover, Percy’s Reliques, and other sources.

A second edition, published in 1801, which consists of thirty-two ballads (Southey’s are not included), advertises “Tales of Terror” printed uniform with this edition of Tales

Lo ! wreaths of yew, not laurel, bind thy brow,

 By gibb'ring spectres hailed, thy kindred band , 270
 Or tracest chaste descriptions on thy page,
 To please the females of our modest age ,

of Wonder" Romantic Tales, in four volumes, appeared in 1808. Of his other works, The Captive, A Monodrama, was played in 1803, the Bravo of Venice, A Translation from the German, in 1804, and Timour the Tartar in 1811. His Journal of a West Indian Proprietor was not published till 1834. He sat as M.P. for Hindon (1796-1802).

He had been a favourite in society before Byron appeared on the scene, but there is no record of any intimacy or acquaintance before 1813. When Byron was living at Geneva, Lewis visited the Maison Diodati in August, 1816, on which occasion he "translated to him Goethe's Faust by word of mouth," and drew up a codicil to his will, witnessed by Byron, Shelley, and Polidori, which contained certain humane provisions for the well-being of the negroes on his Jamaica estates. He also visited him at La Mira in August, 1817. Byron wrote of him after his death "He was a good man, and a clever one, but he was a bore, a damned bore—one may say. But I liked him."

To judge from his letters to his mother and other evidence (Scott's testimony, for instance), he was a kindly, well-intentioned man, but lacking in humour. When his father condemned the indecency of the Monk, he assured him "that he had not the slightest idea that what he was then writing could injure the principles of any human being." "He was," said Byron, "too great a bore to lie," and the plea is evidently offered in good faith. As a writer, he is memorable chiefly for his sponsorship of German literature. Scott said of him that he had the finest ear for rhythm he ever met with—finer than Byron's, and Coleridge, in a letter to Wordsworth, Jan., 1798 (Letters of S. T. C. (1895), i. 237), and again in Table Talk for March 20, 1834, commends his verses. Certainly his ballad of "Crazy Jane," once so famous that ladies took to wearing "Crazy Jane" hats, is of the nature of poetry. (See Life, 349, 362, 491, etc., Life and Correspondence of M. G. Lewis (1839), i. 158, etc., Life of Scott, by J. G. Lochart (1842), pp. 80-83, 94.)

<sup>i</sup> The reader, who may wish for an explanation of this, may refer to "Strangford's Camoëns," p 127, note to p 56, or to the last page of the Edinburgh Review of Strangford's Camoëns [Percy Clinton Sydney Smythe, sixth Viscount Strangford (1780-1855), published Translations from the Portuguese by Luis de Camoëns in 1803. The note to which Byron refers is on the canzone et Naõ sei quem assella, "Thou hast an eye of tender blue." It runs thus "Locks of auburn and eyes of blue have ever been dear to the sons of song. Sterne even considers them as indicative of qualities the most amiable. The Translator does not wish to deem this unfounded. He is, however, aware of the danger to which such a confession exposes him—but he flies for protection to the temple of AUREA VENUS" It may be added that Byron's own locks were auburn, and his eyes a greyish-blue.]

<sup>2</sup> It is also to be remarked, that the things given to the public as poems of Camoëns are no more to be found in the original Portuguese, than in the Song of Solomon

In July, 1809, Barclay completed his task of walking a thousand miles in a thousand hours, at the rate of one mile in each and every hour (See, too, for an account of Barclay, The Eccentric Review (1812), I 133-150)]

He has also written much Comedy in rhyme, Epistles, etc., etc. As he is rather an elegant writer of notes and biography, let us recommend POPE'S advice to WYCHERLEY to Mr H's consideration, viz., "to convert poetry into prose," which may be easily done by taking away the final syllable of each couplet

"Mis-quoted and misunderstood by me, but not intentionally. It was not the 'woods,' but the people in them who trembled—why, Heaven only knows—unless they were overheard making this prodigious smack."—B, 1816

2 The episode above alluded to is the story of "Robert who performed the kiss above mentioned, that startled the woods of Madeira [See Byron's letter to Murray, Feb 7,

1 See Bowles's late edition of Pope's works, for which he received three hundred pounds. [Twelve hundred guineas — British Bards] Thus Mr B has experienced how much easier it is to profit by the reputation of another, than to elevate his own ["Too savage all this on Bowles," wrote Byron, in 1816, but he afterwards returned to his original sentiments "Although," he says (Feb 7, 1821), "I regret having published English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, the part which I regret the least is that which regards Mr Bowles, with reference to Pope. Whilst I was writing that publication, in 1807 and 1808, Mr Hobhouse was desirous that I should express our mutual opinion of Pope, and of Mr Bowles's edition of his works. As I had completed my outline, and felt lazy, I requested that he would do so. He did it. His fourteen lines on Bowles's Pope are in the first edition of English Bards, and are quite as severe, and much more poetical, than my own, in the second. On reprinting the work, as I put my name to it, I omitted Mr Hobhouse's lines, by which the work gained less than Mr Bowles. I am grieved to say that, in reading over those lines, I repent of their having so far fallen short of what I meant to express upon the subject of his edition of Pope's works" (Life, pp 688, 689)] The lines supplied by Hobhouse are here subjoined —

"Stick to thy sonnets, man! — at least they sell
 Or take the only path that open lies
 For modern worthies who would hope to rise
 Fix on some well-known name, and, bit by bit,
 Pare off the merits of his worth and wit
 On each alike employ the critic's knife,
 And when a comment fails, prefix a life,
 Hint certain failings, faults before unknown,
 Review forgotten lies, and add your own,
 Let no disease, let no misfortune 'scape,
 And print, if luckily deformed, his shape
 Thus shall the world, quite undeceived at last,
 Cleave to their present wits, and quit their past,
 Bards once revered no more with favour view,
 But give their modern sonneteers their due,
 Thus with the dead may living merit cope,
 Thus Bowles may triumph o'er the shade of Pope."]

[Compare Poetry of the Anti-Jacobin—

"And Cottle, not he whom that Alfred made famous
 But Joseph of Bristol, the brother of Amos."

The identity of the brothers Cottle appears to have been a matter beneath the notice both of the authors of the Anti-Jacobin and of Byron. Amos Cottle, who died in 1800 (see Lamb's Letter to Coleridge of Oct. 9, 1800, Letters of C. Lamb, 1888, i 140), was the author of a Translation of the Edda of Sæmund, published in 1797. Joseph Cottle, inter alia, published Alfred in 1801, and The Fall of Cambria, 1807. An Expostulatory Epistle, in which Joseph avenges Amos and solemnly castigates the author of Don Juan, was issued in 1819 (see Lamb's Letter to Cottle, Nov. 5, 1819), and was reprinted in the Memoir of Amos Cottle, inserted in his brother's Early Recollections of Coleridge (London, 1837, i 119). The "unfortunate poetess" was, probably, Ann Yearsley, the Bristol milk-woman Wordsworth, too (see Recollections of the Table-Talk of S. Rogers, 1856, p. 235), dissuaded her from publishing her poems. Roughness and bitterness were not among Cottle's faults or foibles, and it is possible that Byron misconceived the purport of the correspondence.]

1. Mr Maurice hath manufactured the component parts of a ponderous quarto upon the beauties of "Richmond Hill" and the like—it also takes in a charming view of Turnham Green, Hammersmith, Brentford Old and New and the parts adjacent. [The Rev. Thomas Maurice (1754–1822) had this at least in common with Byron—that his History of Ancient and Modern Hindostan was severely attacked in the Edinburgh Review. He published a vindication of his work in 1805. He must have confined his dulness to his poems (Richmond Hill (1807), etc.) for his Mercers (1810) are amusing and, though otherwise blameless he left behind him the reputation of an "indiscriminate enjoyment" of literary and other society. Lady Anne Hamilton alludes to him in Epics of the Ten (1807), p. 165—

"Or warmed like Maurice by Museum fire,
 From Ganges dragged a huray-gurdy lyre."

He was assistant keeper of MSS. at the British Museum from 1799 till his death.]

[James Montgomery (1771-1854) was born in Ayrshire, but settled at Sheffield, where he edited a newspaper, the Iris, a radical print, which brought him into conflict with the authorities. His early poems were held up to ridicule in the Edinburgh Review by Jeffrey, in Jan 1807. It was probably the following passage which provoked Byron's note "When every day is bringing forth some new work from the pen of Scott, Campbell, Wordsworth, and Southey, it is natural to feel some disgust at the undistinguishing voracity which can swallow down these verses to a pillow." The Wanderer of Switzerland, which Byron said he preferred to the Lyrical Ballads, was published in 1806. The allusion in line 419 is to the first stanza of The Lyre—

"Where the roving rill meand'ring
 Down the green, retiring vale,
 Poor, forlorn Alceus wandered,
 Pale with thoughts—serenely pale."

He is remembered chiefly as the writer of some admirable hymns (Vide ante, p 107, "Answer to a Beautiful Poem," and note))

2 Mr Brougham, in No XXV of the Edinburgh Review, throughout the article concerning Don Pedro de Cevallos, has displayed more politics than policy, many of the worthy burgesses of Edinburgh being so incensed at the infamous principles it evinces, as to have withdrawn their subscriptions —[Here followed, in the First Edition "The name of this personage is pronounced Broom in the south, but the truly northern and musical pronunciation is BROUGH-AM, in two syllables," but for this, Byron substituted in the Second Edition "It seems that Mr Brougham is not a Pict, as I supposed, but a Borderer, and his name is pronounced Broom, from Trent to Tay —so be it."]

The title of the work was "Exposition of the Practices and Machinations which led to the usurpation of the Crown of Spain, and the means adopted by the Emperor of the French to carry it into execution," by Don Pedro Cevallos. 1 I ought to apologise to the worthy Deities for introducing a new Goddess with short petticoats to their notice but, alas ! what was to be done ? I could not say Caledonia's Genius, it being well known there is no genius to be found from Clackmannan to Caithness, yet without supernatural agency, how was Jeffrey to be saved ? The national "Kelpies" are too unpoetical, and the "Brownies" and "gude neighbours" (spirits of a good disposition) refused to extricate him A Goddess, therefore, has been called for the purpose, and great ought to be the gratitude of Jeffrey, seeing it is the only communication he ever held, or is likely to hold, with anything heavenly

So great was the excitement on the occasion of his début, that the military were held in readiness to assist in keeping order. Having made a large fortune, he finally retired from the stage in 1824, and passed the last fifty years of his life in retirement, surviving his fame by more than half a century.]

<sup>2</sup> All these are favourite expressions of Mr Reynolds, and prominent in his comedies, living and defunct. [Frederick Reynolds (1764–1841) produced nearly one hundred plays, one of the most successful of which was The Caravan, or the Driver and his Dog. The text alludes to his endeavour to introduce the language of ordinary life on the stage. Compare The Children of Apollo, p 9—

1 Mr T. Sheridan, the new Manager of Drury Lane theatre, stripped the Tragedy of Bonduca [Caratach in the original MS] of the dialogue, and exhibited the scenes as the spectacle of Caractacus. Was this worthy of his sire? or of himself? [Thomas Sheridan (1775–1817), most famous as the son of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and father of Lady Dufferin, Mrs Norton, and the Duchess of Somerset, was author of several plays. His Bonduca was played at Covent Garden, May 3, 1808. The following answer to a real or fictitious correspondent, in the European Magazine for May, 1808, is an indication of contemporary opinion: "The Fishwoman's letter to the author of Caractacus on the art of gutting is inadmissible." For anecdotes of Thomas Sheridan, see Angelo's Reminiscences, 1828, II 170–175. See, too, Epics of the Ton, p 264.]

2 [George Colman, the younger (1762–1836), wrote numerous dramas, several of which, e.g. The Iron Chest (1796), John Bull (1803), The Heir-at-Law (1808), have been popular with more than one generation of playgoers. An amusing companion, and a favourite at Court, he was appointed Lieutenant of the Yeomen of the Guard, and examiner of plays by Royal favour, but his reckless mode of life kept him always in difficulties. John Bull is referred to in Hints from Horace, line 166.]

1 [Sheridan's translation of Pizarro, by Kotzebue, was first played at Drury Lane, 1799. Southey wrote of it, "It is impossible to sink below Pizarro. Kotzebue's play might have passed for the worst possible if Sheridan had not proved the possibility of making it worse" (Southey's Letters, i. 87). Gifford alludes to it in a note to The Maid as "the translation so maliciously attributed to Sheridan."]

2 [In all editions, previous to the fifth, it was "Kemble lives to tread." Byron used to say, that, of actors, Cooke was the most natural, Kemble the most supernatural, Kean the medium between the two, but that Mrs Siddons was worth them all put together. Such effect, however, had Kean's acting on his mind, that once, on seeing him play Sir Giles Overreach, he was seized with a fit.]

He was popular in Dublin, where he was known as “Little Cherry.” He was painted as Lazarillo in Jephson’s Two Strings to Your Bow. He wrote The Travellers (1806), Peter the Great (1807), and other plays.]

[Lumley St. George (afterwards Sir Lumley) Skeffington (1768–1850) Besides the plays mentioned in the note, he wrote The Maid of Honour (1803) and The Mysterious Bride (1808). Amatory Verses, by Tom Shuffleton of the Middle Temple (1815), are attributed to his pen. They are prefaced by a dedicatory letter to Byron, which includes a coarse but clever skit in the style of English Bards. “Great Skeffington” was a great dandy. According to Capt. Gronow (Reminiscences, i 63), “he used to paint his face so that he looked like a French toy, he dressed à la Robespierre, and practised all the follies, was remarkable for his politeness and courtly manners. You always knew of his approach by an avant courier of sweet smell.” His play The Sleeping Beauty had a considerable vogue.]

3 [Thomas John Dibdin (1771–1841), natural son of Charles Dibdin the elder, made his first appearance on the stage at the age of four, playing Cupid to Mrs Siddons’ Venus at the Shakespearean Jubilee in 1775. One of his best known pieces is The Jew and the Doctor (1798). His pantomime, Mother Goose, in which Grimaldi took a part, was played at Covent Garden in 1807, and is said to have brought the management £20,000.]

Angelica Catalani (circ. 1785-1849), a famous soprano, Italian by birth and training, made her début at Venice in 1795. She remained in England for eight years (1806-14). Her first appearance in England was at the King's Theatre, in Portogallo's Scmuranide, in 1806. Her large salary was one of the causes which provoked the O. P. (Old Prices) Riots in December, 1809, at Covent Garden. Fried says of his Ball Room Belle—

She made the Catalani jealous”]

1 [Moore says that the following twenty lines were struck off one night after Lord Byron's return from the Opera, and sent the next morning to the printer. The date of the letter to Dallas, with which the lines were enclosed, suggests that the representation which provoked the outburst was that of I Villegiatori Rezzani, at the King's Theatre, February 21, 1809. The first piece, in which Naldi and Catalani were the principal singers, was followed by d'Egville's musical extravaganza, Don Quichotte, ou les Noces de Gamache. In the corps de ballet were Deshayes, for many years master of the ballet at the King's Theatre, Miss Gayton, who had played a Sylph at Drury Lane as early as 1806 (she was married, March 18, 1809, to the Rev. William Murray, brother of Sir James Pulteney, Bart.—Morning Chronicle, December 30, 1810), and Mademoiselle Angiolini, “elegant of figure, petite, but finely formed, with the manner of Vestris.” Mademoiselle Presle does not seem to have taken part in Don Quichotte, but she was well known as première danseuse in La Belle Laitière, La Fête Clémense, and other ballets.]

2 I knew the late Lord Falkland well. On Sunday night
 I beheld him presiding at his own table, in all the honest pride of hospitality; on Wednesday morning, at three o'clock,
 I saw stretched before me all that remained of courage, feeling, and a host of passions. He was a gallant and successful officer: his faults were the faults of a sailor—as such, Britons will forgive them. ["His behaviour on the field such a moment as the surgeon to the body, though both may be useful if taken in time. Some hireling in the papers forged a tale about an agonized voice, &c. On mentioning the circumstance to Mr. Hearnside, he exclaimed, 'Good God! what absurdity to talk in this manner of one who died like a Lion!—he did more.'—MS] He died like a brave man

In 1814 he consulted Rogers on the chance of conciliating Carlisle, and in Childe Harold, iii 29, he laments the loss of the "young and gallant Howard" (Carlisle's youngest son) at Waterloo, and admits that "he did his sire some wrong" But, according to Medwin (Conversations, 1824, p 362), who prints an excellent parody on Carlisle's lines addressed to Lady Holland in 1822, in which he urges her to decline the legacy of Napoleon's snuff-box, Byron made fun of his "noble relative" to the end of the chapter (vide post, p 370, note 2)]

1 [Lines 756-764, with variant 11, refer to the Della Cruscan school, attacked by Gifford in The Baviad and The Maviad. Robert Merry (1755-1798), together with Mrs Piozzi, Bertie Greatheed, William Parsons, and some Italian friends, formed a literary society called the Ostiosi at Florence, where they published The Arno Miscellany (1784) and The Florence Miscellany (1785), consisting of verses in which the authors "say kind things of each other" (Preface to The Florence Miscellany, by Mrs Piozzi). In 1787 Merry, who had become a member of the Della Cruscan Academy at Florence, returned to London, and wrote in the World (then edited by Captain Topham) a sonnet on "Love," under the signature of "Della Crusca." He was answered by Mrs. Hannah Cowley, née Parkhouse (1743-1809), famous as the authoress of The Belle's Stratagem (acted at Covent Garden in 1782), in a sonnet called "The Pen," signed "Anna Matilda." The poetical correspondence which followed was published in The British Album (1789, 2 vols.) by John Bell. Other writers connected with the Della Cruscan school were "Perdita" Robinson, née Darby (1758-1800), who published The Mistletoe (1800) under the pseudonym "Laura Maria," and to whom Merry addressed a poem quoted by Gifford in The Baviad (note to line 284), Charlotte Dacre, who married Byrne, Robinson's successor as editor of the Morning Post, wrote under the pseudonym of "Rosa Matilda," and published poems (Hours of Solitude, 1805) and numerous novels (Confessions of the Nun of St Omer's, 1805, Zofloya, The Libertine, etc), and "Hafiz" (Robert Stott, of the Morning Post). Of these writers, "Della Crusca" Merry, and "Laura Maria" Robinson, were dead, "Anna Matilda" Cowley, "Hafiz" Stott, and "Rosa Matilda" Dacre were still living. John Bell (1745-1831), the publisher of The British Album, was also one of the proprietors of the Morning Post, the Oracle, and the World, in all of which the Della Cruscans wrote. His "Owls and Nightingales" are explained by a reference to The Baviad (l. 284), where Gifford pretends to mistake the nightingale, to which Merry ("Arno") addressed some lines, for an owl. "On looking again, I find the owl to be a nightingale!—N'importe"]

[Joseph Blacket (1786-1810), said by Southey (Letters, 1 172) to possess "force and rapidity," and to be endowed with "more powers than Robert Bloomfield, and an intellect of higher pitch," was the son of a labourer, and by trade a cobbler. He was brought into notice by S. J. Pratt (who published Blacket's Remains in 1811), and was befriended by the Milbanke family. Miss Milbanke, afterwards Lady Byron, wrote (Sept. 2, 1809), "Seaham is at present the residence of a poet, by name Joseph Blacket, one of the Burns-like and Dermody kind, whose genius is his sole possession. I was yesterday in his company for the first time, and was much pleased with his manners and conversation. He is extremely diffident, his deportment is mild, and his countenance animated melancholy and of a satirical turn. His poems certainly display a superior genius and an enlarged mind." Blacket died on the Seaham estate in Sept., 1810, at the age of twenty-three. (See Byron's letter to Dallas, June 28, 1811, his Epitaph for Joseph Blackett, and Hints from Horace, l. 734.)]

His scorn was, in part, provoked by indignities offered to Pope and Dryden, and, in part, assumed because one Lake poet called up the rest, and it was good sport to flout and jibe at the "Fraternity." That the day would come when the message of Wordsworth would reach his ears and awaken his enthusiasm, he could not, of course, foresee (see Childe Harold, canto iii stanzas 72, et seqq.)]

He published, in 1796, a folio edition of his Poems on the Death of Priscilla Farmer, in which a sonnet by Coleridge and a poem of Lamb's were included. Lamb and Lloyd contributed several pieces to the second edition of Coleridge's Poems, published in 1797, and in 1798 they brought out a joint volume of their own composition, named Poems in Blank Verse. Edmund Oliver, a novel, appeared also in 1798. An estrangement between Coleridge and Lloyd resulted in a quarrel with Lamb, and a drawing together of Lamb, Lloyd, and Southey. But Byron probably had in his mind nothing more than the lines in the Anti-Jacobin, where Lamb and

2. It may be asked, why I have censured the Earl of CARLISLE, my guardian and relative to whom I dedicated a volume of puerile poems a few years ago?—The guardianship was nominal, at least as far as I have been able to discover ; the relationship I cannot help and am very sorry for it ; but as his Lordship seemed to forget it on a very essential occasion to me I shall not burden my memory with the recollection I do not think that personal differences sanction the unjust condemnation of a brother scribbler, but I see no reason why they should act as a preventive, when the author, noble or ignoble, has, for a series of years beguiled a “discerning public” (as the advertisements have it) with divers reams of most orthodox, imperial nonsense. Besides. I do not step aside to vituperate the earl no—his works come fairly in review with those of other Patrician Literati. If, before I escaped from my teens I said anything in favour of his Lordship’s paper books it was in the way of grateful dedication, and more from the advice of others than my own judgment, and I seize the first opportunity of pronouncing my sincere recantation. I have heard that some persons conceive me to be under obligations to Lord CARLISLE if so I shall be most particularly happy to learn what they are, and when conferred, that they may be duly appreciated and publicly acknowledged. What I have humbly advanced as an opinion on his printed things, I am prepared to support, if necessary, by quotations from Elegies, Eulogies, Odes, Episodes and certain facetious and dainty tragedies bearing his name and mark —

 Scotland ! still proudly claim thy native Bard,
 And be thy praise his first, his best reward !
 Yet not with thee alone his name should live,
 But own the vast renown a world can give ,
 Be known, perchance, when Albion is no more,
 And tell the tale of what she was before ,
 To future times her faded fame recall,
 And save her glory, though his country fall

Yet what avails the sanguine Poet's hope,
 To conquer ages, and with time to cope ? 950

1 The Games of Hoyle, well known to the votaries of Whist, Chess, etc., are not to be superseded by the vagaries of his poetical namesake ["illustrious Synonyme" in MS and British Bards], whose poem comprised, as expressly stated in the advertisement, all the "Plagues of Egypt."

3 This person, who has lately betrayed the most rabid symptoms of confirmed authorship, is writer of a poem denominated The Art of Pleasing, as "Lucus a non lucendo," containing little pleasantry, and less poetry. He also acts as ["lies as" in MS] monthly stipendiary and collector of calumnies for the Satirist. If this unfortunate young man would exchange the magazines for the mathematics, and endeavour to take a decent degree in his university, it might eventually prove more serviceable than his present salary.

Note—An unfortunate young person of Emanuel College, Cambridge, ycleped Hewson Clarke, has lately manifested the most rabid symptoms of confirmed Authorship. His Disorder commenced some years ago, and the Newcastle Herald teemed with his precocious essays, to the great edification of the Burgesses of Newcastle, Morpeth, and the parts adjacent

A would-be satirist, a hired Buffoon,

even unto Berwick upon Tweed These have since been abundantly scurrilous upon the [town] of Newcastle, his native spot, Mr Mathias and Anacreon Moore What these men had done to offend Mr Hewson Clarke is not known, but surely the town in whose markets he had sold meat, and in whose weekly journal he had written prose deserved better treatment. Mr H C should recollect the proverb "tis a villainous bird that defiles his own nest." He now writes in the Satirist We recommend the young man to abandon the magazines for mathematics, and to believe that a high degree at Cambridge will be more advantageous, as well as profitable in the end, than his present precarious gleanings

[Hewson Clarke (1787-circ 1832) was entered at Emmanuel Coll Camb circ 1806 (see Postscript) He had to leave the University without taking a degree, and migrated to London, where he devoted his not inconsiderable talents to contributions to the Satirist, the Scourge, etc He also wrote An Impartial History of the Naval, etc., Events of Europe from the French Revolution to the Conclusion of a General Peace (1815), and a continuation of Hume's History of England, 2 vols (1832)

The Satirist, a monthly magazine illustrated with coloured cartoons, was issued 1808-1814. Hours of Idleness was reviewed Jan 1808 (i 77-81) "The Diary of a Cantab" (June, 1808, ii 368) contains some verses of "Lord B—n to his Bear To the tune of Lachin y gair" The last verse runs thus —

"But when with the ardour of Love I am burning,
I feel for thy torments, I feel for thy care,
And weep for thy bondage, so truly discerning
What's felt by a Lord, may be felt by a Bear"

In August, 1808 (iii 78-86), there is a critique on Poems Original and Translated, in which the bear plays many parts The writer "is without his bear and is himself muzzled," etc Towards the close of the article a solemn sentence is passed on the author for his disregard of the advice of parents, tutors, friends, "but," adds the reviewer, "in the paltry volume before us we think we observe some proof that the still small voice of conscience will be heard in the cool of the day Even now the gay, the gallant, the accomplished bear-leader is not happy," etc Hence the castigation of "the sizar of Emmanuel College."]

Fresh from the scenes, he speaks with authority. “With Homer in his pocket and Gell on his sumpter-mule, the Odysseus tourist may now make a very classical and delightful excursion.” The epithet in the original MS. was “coxcomb,” but becoming acquainted with Gell while the satire was in the press, Byron changed it to “classic.” In the fifth edition he altered it to “rapid,” and appended this note—“‘Rapid,’ indeed! ## POSTSCRIPT TO THE SECOND EDITION.

I HAVE been informed, since the present edition went to the press that my trusty and well-beloved cousins, the Edinburgh Reviewers, are preparing a most vehement critique on my poor, gentle, unresisting Muse, whom they have already so be-deviled with their ungodly ribaldry,

“Tantene animis coelestibus Ire!”

I suppose I must say of JEFFREY as SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK saith. “an I had known he was so cunning of fence, I had seen him damned ere I had fought him.” What a pity it is that I shall be beyond the Bosphorus before the next number has passed the Tweed! But I yet hope to light my pipe with it in Persia!<sup>1</sup>

My Northern friends have accused me, with justice, of personality towards their great literary Anthropophagus JEFFREY, but what else was to be done with him and his dirty pack, who feed by ‘lying and slandering’ and slake their thirst by ‘evil speaking’? I have adduced facts already well known, and of JEFFREY’s mind I have stated my free opinion, nor has he thence sustained any injury—what scavenger was ever soiled by being pelted with mud? It may be said that I quit England because I have censured there ‘persons of honour and wit about town,’ but I am coming back again, and their vengeance will keep hot till my return. Those who know me can testify that my motives for leaving England are very different from fears, literary or personal those who do not, may one day be convinced Since the publication of this thing, my name has not been concealed, I have been mostly in London, ready to answer for my transgressions, and in daily expectation of sundry cartels, but, alas! "the age of chivalry is over," or, in the vulgar tongue, there is no spirit now-a-days

There is a youth ycleped Hewson Clarke (subaudi esquire), a sizer of Emanuel College, and, I believe, a denizen of Berwick-upon-Tweed, whom I have introduced in these pages to much better company than he has been accustomed to meet, he is, notwithstanding, a very sad dog, and for no reason that I can discover, except a personal quarrel with a bear, kept by me at Cambridge to sit for a fellowship, and whom the jealousy of his Trinity contemporaries prevented from success, has been abusing me, and, what is worse, the defenceless innocent above mentioned, in the Satirist for one year and some months. I am utterly unconscious of having given him any provocation, indeed, I am guiltless of having heard his name, till coupled with the Satirist. He has therefore no reason to complain, and I dare say that, like Sir Fretful Plagiary, he is rather pleased than otherwise. I have now mentioned all who have done me the honour to notice me and mine, that is, my bear and my book, except the editor of the Satirist, who, it seems, is a gentleman—God wot! I wish he could impart a little of his gentility to his subordinate scribblers. I hear that Mr JERNINGHAM<sup>1</sup> is about to take up the cudgels for his Mæcenæus, Lord Carlisle.

1 [Edward Jerningham (1727-1812), third son of Sir George Jerningham, Bart, was an indefatigable versifier. Between the publication of his first poem, The Nunnery, in 1766, and his last, The Old Bard's Farewell, in 1812, he sent to the press no less than thirty separate compositions. As a contributor to the British Album, Gifford handled him roughly in the Bewick (lines 21, 22), and Mathias, in a note to Pursuits of Literature, brackets him with Payne Knight as "eccein du commun et poëte vulgaire." He was a dandy with a literary turn, who throughout a long life knew every one who was worth knowing. Some of his letters have recently been published (see Jerningham Letters, two vols., 1896).]

I hope not he was one of the few, who, in the very short intercourse I had with him, treated me with kindness when a boy, and whatever he may say or do, "pour on, I will endure" I have nothing further to add, save a general note of thanksgiving to readers, purchasers, and publishers, and, in the words of Scott, I wish

"To all and each a fair good night,
And rosy dreams and slumbers light"

INTRODUCTION TO HINTS FROM HORACE

---

THREE MSS of Hints from Horace are extant, two in the possession of Lord Lovelace (MSS L. a and b), and a third in the possession of Mr Murray (MS M)

Proofs of lines 173-272 and 1-272 (Proofs a, b), are among the Egerton MSS in the British Museum. They were purchased from the Rev Alexander Dallas, January 12, 1867, and are, doubtless, fragments of the proofs set up in type for Cawthorn in 1811. They are in "book-form," and show that the volume was intended to be uniform with the Fifth Edition of English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, of 1811. The text corresponds closely but not exactly with that adopted by Murray in 1831, and does not embody the variants of the several MSS. It is probable that complete proofs were in Moore's possession at the time when he included the selections from the Hints in his Letters and Journals, pp 263-269, and that the text of the entire poem as published in 1831 was derived from this source. Selections, numbering in all 156 lines, had already appeared in Recollections of the Life of Lord Byron, by R. C. Dallas, 1824, pp 104-113. Byron, estimating the merit by the difficulty of the performance, rated the Hints from Horace extravagantly high. He only forbore to publish them after the success of Childe Harold, because he felt, as he states, that he should be "heaping coals of fire upon his head" if he were in his hour of triumph to put forth a sequel to a lampoon provoked by failure. Nine years afterwards, when he resolved to print the work with some omissions, he gravely maintained that it excelled the productions of his mature genius "As far," he said, "as versification goes, it is good, and on looking back at what I wrote about that period, I am astonished to see how little I have trained on I wrote better then than now, but that comes of my having fallen into the atrocious bad taste of the times" [September 23, 1820] The opinion of J C Hobhouse that the Hints would require "a good deal of slashing" to adapt them to the passing hour, and other considerations, again led Byron to suspend the publication. Authors are frequently bad judges of their own works, but of all the literary hallucinations upon record there are none which exceed the mistaken preferences of Lord Byron. Shortly after the appearance of The Corsair he fancied that English Bards was still his masterpiece, when all his greatest works had been produced, he contended that his translation from Pulci was his "grand performance,—the best thing he ever did in his life," and throughout the whole of his literary career he regarded these Hints from Horace with a special and unchanging fondness.

1 In an English newspaper, which finds its way abroad wherever there are Englishmen, I read an account of this dirty daubers caricature of Mr H—— as a "beast," and the consequent action, etc. The circumstance is, probably, too well known to require further comment. [Thomas Hope (1770–1831) was celebrated for his collections of pictures, sculpture, and bric-à-brac. He was the author of Anastasis, or Memoirs of a Greek, etc., which was attributed to Byron, and, according to Lady Blessington, excited his envy. "Low Dubost" was a French painter, who, in revenge for some fancied injustice, caricatured Hope and his wife as Beauty and the Beast. An exhibition of the sketch is said to have brought in from twenty to thirty pounds a week. A brother of Mrs Hope (Louisa Beresford, daughter of Lord Decies, Archbishop of Tuam) mutilated the picture, and, an action having been brought, was ordered to pay a nominal sum of five pounds. Dubost's academy portrait of Mrs Hope did not please Peter Pindar.

"In Mistress Hope, Monsieur Dubost!
 Thy Genius yieldeth up the Ghost."

At times Melpomene forgets to groan,
 And brisk Thalia takes a serious tone , 130
 Nor unregarded will the act pass by
 Where angry Townly<sup>1</sup> "lifts his voice on high"
 Again, our Shakespeare limits verse to Kings,
 When common prose will serve for common things ,
 And lively Hal resigns heroic ire,<sup>2</sup>
 To "hollaing Hotspur"<sup>2</sup> and his sceptred sire<sup>3</sup>.

'Tis not enough, ye Bards, with all your art,
 To polish poems, they must touch the heart
 Where'er the scene be laid, whate'er the song,
 Still let it bear the hearer's soul along , 140
 Command your audience or to smile or weep,
 Whiche'er may please you—anything but sleep
 The Poet claims our tears, but, by his leave,
 Before I shed them, let me see him grieve

If banished Romeo feigned nor sigh nor tear,
 Lulled by his languor, I could sleep or sneer<sup>4</sup>

 Make it appear as if it might have been

If some Drawcansir<sup>1</sup> you aspire to draw,
 Present him raving, and above all law
 If female furies in your scheme are planned,
 Macbeth's fierce dame is ready to your hand ,

 Constance, King Richard, Hamlet, and the Devil !
 But if a new design you dare essay,
 And freely wander from the beaten way, 180

The Rehearsal, by George Villiers, second Duke of Buck-

 are said to have shared the authorship So popular was the play that “Drawcansir” passed into a synonyme for a

And yet, perchance, 'tis wiser to prefer
 A hackneyed plot, than choose a new, and err,
 Yet copy not too closely, but record,

 But only follow where he merits praise 190 of Mr D prevents Mr G from saying any more on the matter. A better poet than Boileau, and at least as good a scholar as Mr de Sévigné, has said,

“A little learning is a dangerous thing”

And by the above extract, it appears that a good deal may be rendered as useless to the Proprietors [Byron chose the words in question, Difficile, etc., as a motto for the first five cantos of Don Juan]

I About two years ago a young man named Townsend was announced by Mr Cumberland, in a review (since deceased) [the London Review], as being engaged in an epic poem to be entitled “Armageddon.” The plan and specimen promise much, but I hope neither to offend Mr Townsend, nor his friends, by recommending to his attention the lines of Horace to which these rhymes allude. If Mr Townsend succeeds in his undertaking, as there is reason to hope, how much will the world be indebted to Mr Cumberland for bringing him before the public ! But, till that eventful day arrives, it may be doubted whether the premature display of his plan (sublime as the ideas confessedly are) has not,—by raising expectation too high, or diminishing curiosity, by developing his argument,—rather incurred the hazard of injuring Mr Townsend’s future prospects. Mr Cumberland (whose talents I shall not depreciate by the humble tribute of my praise) and Mr Townsend must not suppose me actuated by unworthy motives in this suggestion. I wish the author all the success he can wish himself, and shall be truly happy to see epic poetry weighed up from the bathos where it lies sunken with Southey, Cottle, Cowley (Mrs or Abraham), Ogilvy, Wilkie,

Ere your first score of cantos Time unrolls,<sup>1</sup>
 Beware—for God's sake, don't begin like Bowles !
 "Awake a louder and a loftier strain,"<sup>1</sup>—
 And pray, what follows from his boiling brain ?—
 He sinks to Southey's level in a trice,
 Whose Epic Mountains never fail in mice !
 Not so of yore awoke your mighty Sire
 The tempered warblings of his master-lyre , 200
 Soft as the gentler breathing of the lute,
 "Of Man's first disobedience and the fruit"
 He speaks, but, as his subject swells along,

I trust that Mr Townsend's share will be from envy, he will soon know mankind well enough not to attribute this expression to malice [This note was written [at Athens] before the author was apprised of Mr Cumberland's death [in May, 1811] —MS (See Byron's letter to Dallas, August 27, 1811) The Rev George Townsend (1788–1857) published Poems in 1810, and eight books of his Armageddon in 1815 They met with the fate which Byron had predicted In later life he compiled numerous works of scriptural exegesis He was a Canon of Durham from 1825 till his death.]

used to fling away Virgil in his ecstasy of admiration and say, "the book had a devil" Now such a character as I am copying would probably fling it away also, but rather wish that "the devil had the book," not from dislike to the poet, but a well-founded horror of hexameters. Is it an exculpation? I think not. I never yet heard a bawd praised for chastity, because she herself did not commit fornication.

[Robert, second Earl Grosvenor (1767-1845) was created Marquis of Westminster in 1831. Like his father, Gifford's patron, the first Earl Grosvenor, he was a breeder of racehorses, and a patron of the turf. As Lord Belgrave, he brought forward a motion for the suppression of Sunday newspapers, June 11, 1799 denouncing them in a violent speech. The motion was lost, but many years after, in a speech delivered in the House of Lords, January 2, 1807, he returned to the charge. (See Parl Hist., 34, 1006, 1010; and Parl Deb., 8, 286) (For a skit on Lord Belgrave's sabbatarian views, see Peter Pindar, Wicks (1812), iv. 519.)]

His solo entertainments, in The Dish of Tea An Auction of Pindars, 1747-8 (see his comedy Taste) were the precursors of Mathews at Home, and a long line of successors. His farces and curtain-pieces were often "spiced-up" with more or less malicious character-sketches of living persons. Among his better known pieces are The Mirror (1760), ridiculing Whitefield and the Methodists, and The Mayor of Garratt (1763), in which he played the part of Sturgeon (Byron used this piece, for an illustration in his speech on the Frame-workers Bill, February 27, 1812) The Liar, first played at Covent

1 [Henry Carey, poet and musician (d. 1743), a natural son of George Savile, Marquis of Halifax, was the author of Chrononhotonthologos, “the most tragical tragedy ever yet tragedised by any company of tragedians,” which was first played at the Haymarket, February 22, 1734. The well-known lines, “Go, call a coach, and let a coach be called,” etc., which Scott prefixed to the first chapter of The Artiquary, are from the last scene, in which Bombardimon fights with and kills the King Chrononhotonthologos. But his one achievement was Sally in our Alley, of which he wrote both the words and the music. The authorship of “God Save the King” has been attributed to him, probably under a misapprehension ]

And smile at folly, if we can't at wit
 Yes, Friend ! for thee I'll quit my cynic cell,
 And bear Swift's motto, "Vive la bagatelle !"
 Which charmed our days in each Ægean clime,

<sup>1</sup> Under Plato's pillow a volume of the Mimes of Sophron was found the day he died.—Vide Barthélemy, De Pauw or Diogenes Laërtius, [Lib. iii. p. 168—Chojet 1595] if agreeable. De Pauw calls it a jest-book. Cumberland, in his Observer, terms it moral, like the sayings of Publius Syrus.

<sup>2</sup> [In 1737 the manager of Goodman's Fields Theatre having brought Sir Robert Walpole a farce called The Golden Rump, the minister detained the copy. He then made extracts of the most offensive passages read them to the house, and brought in a bill to limit the number of playhouses and to subject all dramatic writings to the inspection of the Lord Chamberlain. Horace Walpole ascribed The Golden Rump to Fielding and said that he had found an imperfect copy of the play among his father's papers. But this has been questioned (See A Book of the Play, by Dutton Cook (1881), p. 27)]

 He whom our plays dispose to Good or Ill

1 His speech on the Licensing Act [in which he opposed the Bill], is reckoned one of his most eloquent efforts

[The following sentences have been extracted from the speech which was delivered —

"The bill is not only an encroachment upon liberty, it is likewise an encroachment on property Wit, my lords, is a sort of property, it is the property of those who have it, and too often the only property they have to depend on.

"Those gentlemen who have any such property are all, I hope, our friends, do not let us subject them to any unnecessary or arbitrary restraint

"The stage and the press, my lord, are two of our out-sentries, if we remove them, if we hoodwink them, if we throw them into fetters, the enemy may surprise us Therefore I must now look upon the bill before us as a step for introducing arbitrary power into this kingdom"

Lord Chesterfield's sentiments with regard to laughter are contained in an apophthegm, repeated more than once in his correspondence "The vulgar laugh aloud, but never smile, on the contrary, people of fashion often smile, but seldom or never laugh aloud"—Chesterfield's Letters to his Godson, Oxford, 1890, p 27 ]

2 Mr Simeon is the very bully of beliefs, and castigator of "good works." He is ably supported by John Stuckles, a labourer in the same vineyard—but I say no more, for, according to Johnny in full congregation, "No hopes for them as laughs"—[The Rev Charles Simeon (1758-1836) was the leader of the evangelical movement in Cambridge. The reference may be to the rigour with which he repelled a charge brought against him by Dr Edwards, the Master of Sidney Sussex, that a sermon which he had preached in November, 1809, savoured of antinomianism. It may be noted that a friend (the Rev W Farish), to whom he submitted the MS of a rejoinder to Pearson's Cautions, etc, advised him to print it, "especially if you should rather keep down a lash or two which might irritate." Simeon was naturally irascible, and, in reply to a friend who had mildly reproved him for some display of temper, signed himself, in humorous penitence, "Charles proud and irritable." (See Memoirs of the Life of the Rev Mr Simeon, by Rev W Carus (1847), pp 195, 282, etc.)]

That these gentlemen are in some cases kinder,—the one to countrymen, and the other from his odd propensity to prefer evil to good,—than the 'gods, men, and columns' of Horace, may be seen by a reference to the review of Campbell's Gertrude of Wyoming, and in No. 31 of the Edinburgh Review (given to me the other day by the captain of an English frigate off Salamis), there is a similar concession to the mediocrity of Jamie Graham's British Georgics. It is fortunate for Campbell, that his fame neither depends on his last poem, nor the puff of the Edinburgh Review. And hark'ye, Southey !<sup>1</sup> pray—but don't be vexed—
Burn all your last three works—and half the next

1 Mr Southey has lately tied another canister to his tail in The Curse of Kehama, maugre the neglect of Madoc, etc., and has in one instance had a wonderful effect. A literary friend of mine, walking out one lovely evening last summer, on the eleventh bridge of the Paddington canal, was alarmed by the cry of "one in jeopardy" he rushed along, collected a body of Irish haymakers (supping on butter-milk in an adjacent paddock), procured three rakes, one eel-spear and a landing net, and at last (horresco referens) pulled out—his own publisher. The unfortunate man was gone for ever, and so was a large quarto wherewith he had taken the leap, which proved, on inquiry, to have been Mr Southey's last work. Its "alacrity of sinking" was so great, that it has never since been heard of, though some maintain that it is at this moment concealed at Alderman Birch's pastry premises, Cornhill. Be this as it may, the coroner's inquest brought in a verdict of "Felo de bibliopoliâ" against a "quarto unknown," and circumstantial evidence being since strong against The Curse of Kehama (of which the above words are an exact description), it will be tried by its peers next session, in Grub-street—Arthur, Alfred, Davids, Richard Cœur de Lion, Exodus, Exodiad, Epigoniad, Calvary, Fall of Cambria, Siege of Acre, Don Roderick, and Tom Thumb the Great, are the names of the twelve jurors. The judges are Pye, Bowles, and the bell-man of St. Sepulchre's.

The same advocates, pro and con, will be employed as are now engaged in Sir F. Burdett's celebrated cause in the Scotch courts. The public anxiously await the result, and all live publishers will be subpoenaed as witnesses.—But Mr Southey has published The Curse of Kehama,—an inviting title to quibblers. By the bye, it is a good deal beneath Scott and Campbell, and not much above Southey, to allow the booby Ballantyne to entitle them, in the Edinburgh Annual Register (of which, by the bye, Southey is editor) "the grand poetical triumvirate of the day." But, on second thoughts, it can be no great degree of praise to be the one-eyed leaders of the blind, though they might as well keep to themselves "Scott's thirty thousand copies sold," which must sadly discomfort poor Southey's unsaleables. Poor Southey, it should seem, is the "Lepidus" of this poetical triumvirate. I am only surprised to see him in such good company.

But wonder how the devil he came there."

The Courier of July 16, 1811, reports in full the first stage of the case Sir F Burdett v William Scott (vide supra), which was brought before Lord Meadowbank as ordinary in the outer court. * This Latin has sorely puzzled the University of Edinburgh. Ballantyne said it meant the "Bridge of Berwick," but Southey claimed it as half English, Scott swore it was the "Brig o' Stirling" he had just passed two King James's and a dozen Douglasses over it. At last it was decided by Jeffrey, that it meant nothing more nor less than the "counter of Archy Constable's shop" infant. Jeffrey denied the existence of any such claim, and maintained that whatever was scandalous or calumnious in the defence was absolutely untrue. The case, which was not included in the Scottish Law Reports, was probably settled out of court. Evidently the judge held that on technical grounds an action did not lie. Burdett's enemies were not slow in turning the scandal to account. (See a contemporary pamphlet, Adultery and Patriotism, London, 1811.)]

1 Voltaire's Pucelle is not quite so immaculate as Mr Southey's Joan of Arc, and yet I am afraid the Frenchman has both more truth and poetry too on his side—(they rarely go together)—than our patriotic minstrel, whose first essay was in praise of a fanatical French strumpet, whose title of witch would be correct with the change of the first letter

If this be doubted, I shall buy a portmanteau to quote from [Sir James Bland Burges (1752-1824), who assumed, in 1821, the name of Lamb, married, as his first wife, the Hon Elizabeth Noel, daughter of Lord Wentworth, and younger sister of Byron's mother-in-law, Lady Milbanke. He was called to the bar in 1777, and in the same year was appointed a Commissioner in Bankruptcy. In 1787 he was returned M P for the borough of Helleston, and from 1789 to 1795 held office as Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs. In 1795, at the instance of his chief, Lord Grenville, he vacated his post, and by way of compensation was created a baronet with a sinecure post as Knight-Marshal of the Royal Household. Thenceforth he devoted himself to literature. In 1796 he wrote the Birth and Triumph of Love, by way of letter-press to some elegant designs of the Princess Elizabeth (For Richard the First and the Exodiad, see note, p 436) His plays, Riches and Tricks for Travellers, appeared in 1810, and there were other works. many of the industrious poor Nathaniel Bloomfield and his brother Bobby have set all Somersetshire singing, nor has the malady confined itself to one county. Pratt too (who once was wiser) has caught the contagion of patronage, and decoyed a poor fellow named Blackett into poetry, but he died during the operation, leaving one child and two volumes of "Remains" utterly destitute. The girl, if she don't take a poetical twist, and come forth as a shoemaking Sappho, may do well, but the "tragedies" are as rickety as if they had been the offspring of an Earl or a Seatonian prize poet. The patrons of this poor lad are certainly answerable for his end, and it ought to be an indictable offence. But this is the least they have done for, by a refinement of barbarity, they have made the (late) man posthumously ridiculous, by printing what he would have had sense enough never to print himself. Certes these rakers of "Remains" come under the statute against "resurrection men." What does it signify whether a poor dear dead dunce is to be stuck up in Surgeons' or in Stationers' Hall? Is it so bad to unearth his bones as his blunders? Is it not better to gibbet his body on a heath, than his soul in an octavo? "We know what we are, but we know not what we may be," and it is to be hoped we never shall know, if a man who has passed through life with a sort of éclat is to find himself a mountebank on the other side of Styx, and made, like poor Joe Blackett, the laughing-stock of purgatory. The plea of publication is to provide for the child, now, might not some of this Sutor ultra Crepidant's friends and seducers have done a decent action without inveigling Pratt into biography? And then his inscription split into so many modicums!—"To the Duchess of Somuch, the Right Hon. So-and-So, and Mrs and Miss Somebody, these volumes are," etc. etc.—why, this is doling out the "soft milk of dedication" in gills,—there is but a quart, and he divides it among a dozen. Why, Pratt, hadst thou not a puff left? Dost thou think six families of distinction can share this in quiet? There is a child, a book, and a dedication—send the girl to her grace, the volumes to the grocer, and the dedication to the devil.

NOTE I — In The Malediction of Minerva (New Monthly Magazine, vol iii p 240) additional footnotes are appended (1) to line 106, recording the obliteration of Lord Elgin's name, "which had been inscribed on a pillar of one of the principal temples," while that of Lady Elgin had been left untouched, and (2) to line 196, giving quotations from pp 158, 269, 419 of Eustace's Classical Tour in Italy. After line 130, which reads, "And well I know within that murky land" (i.e. Caledonia), the following apology for a hiatus was inserted "Here follows in the original certain lines which the editor has exercised his discretion by suppressing, inasmuch as they comprise national reflections which the bard's justifiable indignation has made him pour forth against a people which, if not universally of an amiable, is generally of a respectable character, and deserves not in this case to be censured en masse for the faults of an individual"

NOTE II — The text of The Curse of Minerva is based on that of the quarto printed by T Davison in 1813. With the exception of the variants, as noted, the text corresponds with the MS in the possession of Lord Stanhope. Doubtless it represents Byron's final revision. The text of an edition of The Curse, etc., Philadelphia, 1815, 8vo [printed by De Silver and Co], was followed by Galignani (third edit, 1818, etc). The same text is followed, but not invariably, in the selections printed by Hone in 1816 (111 lines), Wilson, 1818 (112 lines), and Knight and Lacy, 1824 (111 lines). It exhibits the following variants from the quarto of 1813 —

INTRODUCTION TO THE CURSE OF MINERVA

---

THE Curse of Minerva, which was written at Athens, and is dated March 17, 1811, remained unpublished, as a whole, in this country, during Byron's life-time. The arrangement which had been made with Cawthorn, to bring out a fifth edition of English Bards, included the issue of a separate volume, containing Hints from Horace and The Curse of Minerva and, as Moore intimates, it was the withdrawal of the latter, in deference to the wishes of Lord Elgin or his connections, which led to the suppression of the other satires.

The quarto edition of The Curse of Minerva, printed by T. Davison in 1812, was probably set up at the same time as Murray's quarto edition of Childe Harold, and reserved for private circulation. With or without Byron's consent, the poem as a whole was published in Philadelphia by De Silver and Co., 1815, 8vo (for variants, see p. 453, note). In a letter to Murray, March 6, 1816, he says that he "disowns" The Curse, etc., "as stolen and published in a miserable and villainous copy in the magazine." The reference is to The Malediction of Minerva, or The Athenian Marble-Market, which appeared in the New Monthly Magazine for April, 1818, vol. III, 240. It numbers 111 lines, and is signed "Steropes" (The Lightning, a Cyclops). The text of the magazine, with the same additional footnotes, but under the title of The Curse, etc., was republished in the eighth edition of Poems on His Domestic Circumstances, W. Hone, London, 1816, 8vo, and, thenceforth, in other piratical issues. Whatever may have been his feelings or intentions in 1812, four years later Byron was well aware that The Curse of Minerva would not increase his reputation as a poet, while the object of his satire—the exposure and denunciation of Lord Elgin—had been accomplished by the scathing stanzas (canto 11 10-15), with their accompanying note, in Childe Harold. “Disown” it as he might, his words were past recall, and both indictments stand in his name.

Byron was prejudiced against Elgin before he started on his tour. He had, perhaps, glanced at the splendid folio, Specimens of Ancient Sculpture, which was issued by the Dilettanti Society in 1809. Payne Knight wrote the preface, in which he maintains that the friezes and metopes of the Parthenon were not the actual work of Phidias, “but architectural studies . . . probably by workmen scarcely ranked among artists.” So judged the leader of the cognoscenti, and, in accordance with his views, Elgin and Aberdeen are held up to ridicule in English Bards (second edition, October, 1809, l. 1007, and note) as credulous and extravagant collectors of “maimed antiques.” It was, however, not till the first visit to Athens (December, 1809—March, 1810), when he saw with his own eyes the “ravages of barbarous and antiquarian despoilers” (Lord Broughton’s Travels in Albania, 1858, i. 259), that contempt gave way to indignation, and his wrath found vent in the pages of Childe Harold.

Byron cared as little for ancient buildings as he did for the authorities, or for patriotic enterprise, but he was stirred to the quick by the marks of fresh and, as he was led to believe, wanton injury to “Athena’s poor remains.” The southern side of the half-wrecked Parthenon had been deprived of its remaining metopes, which had suffered far less from the weather than the other sides which are still in the building, all that remained of the frieze had been stripped from the three sides of the cella, and the eastern pediment had been despoiled of its diminished and mutilated, but still splendid, group of figures, and, though five or six years had gone by, the blank spaces between the triglyphs must have revealed their recent exposure to the light, and the shattered edges of the cornice, which here and there had been raised and demolished to permit the dislodgment of the metopes, must have caught the eye as they sparkled in the sun. Nor had the removal and deportation of friezes and statues come to an end. The firman which Dr Hunt, the chaplain to the embassy, had obtained in 1801, which empowered Elgin and his agents to take away qualche pezzi di pietra, still ran, and Don Tita Lusieri, the Italian artist, who remained in Elgin's service, was still, like the canes venatici (Americané, "smell-dogs") employed by Verres in Sicily (see Childe Harold, canto ii st. 12, note), finding fresh relics, and still bewailing to sympathetic travellers the hard fate which compelled him to despoil the temples malgré lui. The feelings of the inhabitants themselves were not much in question, but their opinions were quoted for and against the removal of the marbles. Elgin's secretary and prime agent, W. R. Hamilton, testifies, from personal knowledge, that, "so far from exciting any unpleasant sensations, the people seemed to feel it as the means of bringing foreigners into the country, and of having money spent there" (Memoir on the Earl of Elgin's Pursuits in Greece, 1811). On the other hand, the traveller, Edward Daniel Clarke, with whom Byron corresponded (see Childe Harold, canto ii st. 12, note), speaks of the attachment of the Turks to the Parthenon, and their religious veneration for the building as a mosque, and tells a pathetic story of the grief of the Disdar when "a metope was lowered, and the adjacent masonry scattered its white fragments with thundering noise among the ruins" (Travels in Various Countries, part ii sect ii p. 483).

Other travellers of less authority than Clarke—Dodwell, for instance, who visited the Parthenon before it had been dismantled, and, afterwards, was present at the removal of metopes, and Hughes, who came after Byron (autumn, 1813)—make use of such phrases as "shattered desolation," "wanton devastation and avidity of plunder." Even Michaelis, the great archæologist, who denounces The Curse of Minerva as a "libellous poem," and affirms "that only blind passion could doubt that Lord Elgin's act was an act of preservation," admits that "the removal of several metopes and of the statue from the Erechtheion had severely injured the surrounding architecture" (Ancient Marbles in Great Britain, by A. Michaelis, translated by C. A. M. Fennell, 1882, p. 135). Highly coloured and

Byron was, perhaps the first poet to give it a name in song.]

Long had I mused, and treasured every trace
 The wreck of Greece recorded of her race,
 When, lo ! a giant-form before me strode,
 And Pallas hailed me in her own Abode !

Yes, 'twas Minerva's self , but, ah ! how changed,
 Since o'er the Dardan field in arms she ranged !
 Not such as erst, by her divine command,
 Her form appeared from Phidias' plastic hand
 Gone were the terrors of her awful brow,
 Her idle Ægis bore no Gorgon now , 80
 Her helm was dented, and the broken lance
 Seemed weak and shaftless e'en to mortal glance ,
 The Olive Branch, which still she deigned to clasp,
 Shrank from her touch, and withered in her grasp ,
 And, ah ! though still the brightest of the sky,
 Celestial tears bedimmed her large blue eye ,
 Round the rent casque her owlet circled slow,
 And mourned his mistress with a shriek of woe !

“ Mortal ! ”—'twas thus she spake—“ that blush of

1 This is spoken of the city in general, and not of the Acropolis in particular. The temple of Jupiter Olympius, by some supposed the Pantheon, was finished by Hadrian, sixteen columns are standing, of the most beautiful marble and architecture.

2 [The following lines, of which the first two were written on the original MS, are in Byron's handwriting —

"Aspice quos Scoto Pallas concedit honores,
 Subter stat nomen, facta superque vide
 Scote miser! quamvis nocuisti Palladis ædi,
 Infandum facinus vindicat ipsa Venus
 Pygmalion statuum pro sponsâ arsisse refertur,
 Tu statuum rapias, Scote, sed uxor abest."

Compare Horace in London, by the authors of Rejected Addresses (James and Horace Smith), London, 1813, ode xv, "The Parthenon," "Pastor quum traheret per freta navibus"

"And Hymen shall thy nuptial hopes consume,
 Unless, like fond Pygmalion, thou canst wed
 Statues thy hand could never give to bloom
 In wifeless wedlock shall thy life be led,
 No marriage joys to bless thy solitary bed"

For Elgin's fame thus grateful Pallas pleads,
 Below, his name—above, behold his deeds <sup>1</sup>

 The last poor brute securely gnaws the bone
 Yet still the Gods are just, and crimes are crossed
 See here what Elgin won, and what he lost !
 Another name with his pollutes my shrine
 Behold where Dian's beams disdain to shine ! 120

The citadel was given up to the English, and the Danes surrendered their fleet, with all the naval stores, and their arsenals and dockyards. The expedition was “promptly and secretly equipped” by the British Government “with an activity and celerity,” says Koch (Hist of Europe, p 214), “such as they had never displayed in sending aid to their allies,” with a view to anticipate the seizure and appropriation of the Danish fleet by Napoleon and Alexander (Green’s Hist English People (1875), p 799)]

But here, as in lines 245–258 (vide infra, p 470, note 1), Byron is taking toll of a note to Epics of the Ton, pp 246, 247, which enlarges on the mutiny of native soldiers which took place at Vellore in 1806, where several “European officers and a considerable portion of the 69th Regiment were massacred,” in consequence of “an injudicious order with respect to the dress of the Sepoys.”—Gleig’s History of the British Empire in India (1835), iii 233, note.]

1 [The victory of “bright Barossa,” March 5, 1811, was achieved by the sudden determination—“an inspiration rather than a resolution,” says Napier—of the British commander, General Graham (Thomas, Lord Lynedoch, 1750-1843), to counter-march his troops, and force the eminence known as the Cerro de Puerco, or hill of Barosa, which had fallen into the hands of the French under Ruffin. Graham was at this time second in command to the Spanish Captain-general, La Peña, and at his orders, but under the impression that the hill would be guarded by the Spanish troops, was making his way to a neighbouring height. Meantime La Peña had withdrawn the corps of battle to a distance, and left the hill covered with baggage and imperfectly protected. Graham recaptured Barosa, and repulsed the French with heavy loss, in an hour and a half. Napier affirms that La Peña “looked idly on, neither sending his cavalry nor his horse artillery to the assistance of his ally,” and testifies “that no stroke in aid of the British was struck by a Spanish sabre that day.”

“Famine” may have raised the devil in the English troops, but it prevented them from following up the victory. A further charge against the Spaniards was that, after Barosa had been won, the English were left for hours without food, and, as they had marched through the night before they came into action, they could only look on while the French made good their retreat.

[In February, 1811, a select committee of the House of Commons “on commercial credit” recommended an advance of £6,000,000 to manufacturers who were suffering from over-speculation. “Did they not know,” asked Lord Grenville, in the House of Lords, March 21, “that they were adding to the mass of paper at this moment in existence a sum of £6,000,000, as if there was not paper enough already in the country, in order to protect their commerce and manufactures from destruction ?” Nevertheless, the measure passed. The year before (February 19, 1810), a committee which had sat under the presidency of Francis Horner, to inquire into the cause of the high price of gold bullion (gold was worth £4 10s an ounce), returned (June 10) a report urging the resumption of cash payment at the end of two years

It has been suggested to the editor that the asterisks in line 251 (which are not filled up in Lord Stanhope's MS of The Curse of Minerva) stand for "Horner," and that Byron, writing at Athens in March, 1811, was under the impression that Perceval would adopt sound views on the currency question, and was not aware that he was strongly anti-bullionist. On that supposition the two premiers are Portland and Perceval, Horner is the Mentor, and Perceval (line 257) the "patrician clod." To what extent Byron was au courant with home politics when he wrote the lines, it is impossible to say, and without such knowledge some doubt must rest on any interpretation of the passage. But of its genesis there is no doubt. Lady Ann Hamilton, in her estimate of Lord Henry Petty, in Epics of the Ton (p. 139), has something to say on budget "figures"—

"Those imps which make the senses reel, and zounds!
 Mistake a cypher for a thousand pounds," and her note-writer comments thus: "It somewhat hurts the feelings to see a minister stand up in his place, and after a very pretty exordium to the budget, take up a bundle of papers from the table, gaze at the incomprehensible calculations before him, stammer out a few confused numbers, and then, with a rueful face, look over his shoulder to V—ns—rt for assistance. How often have I grieved to see unhappv A—d—g—n in this lamentable predicament!" Again, on Thellusson being raised to the peerage as Lord Rendlesham, she asks—

"Say, shall we bend to titles thus bestowed,
 And like the Egyptians, hail the calf a god?
 With torrs, rsps, onions, ornament the shrine,
 And reptiles own and pot-herbs things divine?"

It is evident that Byron, uninspired by Pallas, turned to the Epics of the Ton for "copy," but whether he left a blank on purpose because "Vansittart" (to whom Perceval did turn) would not scan, or, misled by old newspapers, would have written "Horner," must remain a mystery.]

INTRODUCTION TO THE WALTZ

---

BYRON spent the autumn of 1812 "by the waters of Cheltenham," and, besides writing to order his Song of Drury Lane (the address spoken at the opening of the theatre, Oct. 10, 1812), he put in hand a Satire on Waltzing. It was published anonymously in the following spring, but, possibly, because it was somewhat coolly received, he told Murray (April 21, 1813) "to contradict the report that he was the author of a certain malicious publication on waltzing." In his memoranda "chiefly with reference to my Byron," Moore notes "Byron's hatred of waltzing," and records a passage of arms between "the lame boy" and Mary Chaworth, which arose from her "dancing with some person who was unknown to her." Then, and always, he must have experienced the bitter sense of exclusion from active amusements, but it is a hasty assumption that Byron only denounced waltzing because he was unable to waltz himself. To modern sentiment, on the moral side, waltzing is unassailable, but the first impressions of spectators, to whom it was a novelty, were distinctly unfavourable.

In a letter from Germany (May 17, 1799) Coleridge describes a dance round the maypole at Rubeland. "The dances were reels and the waltzes, but chiefly the latter, this dance is in the higher circles sufficiently voluptuous, but here the motions of it were far more faithful interpreters of the passions." A year later, H. C. Robinson, writing from Frankfort in 1800 (Diary and Letters, i. 76), says, "The dancing is unlike anything you ever saw. You must have heard of it under the name of waltzing, that is rolling and turning, though the rolling is not horizontal but perpendicular. Yet Werther, after describing his first waltz with Charlotte, says, and I say so too, 'I felt that if I were married, my wife should waltz (or roll) with no one but myself.' Ten years later, Gillray publishes a caricature of the waltz, as a French dance, which he styles, "Le bon Genre." It is not a pretty picture. By degrees, however, and with some reluctance, society yielded to the fascinations of the stranger. "My cousin Hartington," writes Lady Caroline Lamb, in 1812 (Memoirs of Viscount Melbourne, by W. T. M'Cullagh Torrens, i 105), "wanted to have waltzes and quadrilles, and at Devonshire House it could not be allowed, so we had them in the great drawing-room at Whitehall. All the bon ton assembled there continually. There was nothing so fashionable."

"No event," says Thomas Raikes (Personal Reminiscences, p 284), ever produced so great a sensation in English society as the introduction of the German waltz. Old and young returned to school, and the mornings were now absorbed at home in practising the figures of a French quadrille or whirling a chair round the room to learn the step and measure of the German waltz. The anti-waltzing party took the alarm, cried it down, mothers forbid it, and every ball-room became a scene of feud and contention. The foreigners were not idle in forming their élèves, Baron Tripp, Neumann, St. Aldegonde, etc., persevered in spite of all prejudices which were marshalled against them. It was not, however, till Byron's "malicious publication" had been issued and forgotten that the new dance received full recognition. "When," Raikes concludes, "the Emperor Alexander was seen waltzing round the room at Almack's with his tight uniform and numerous decorations," or [Gronow, Recollections, 1860, pp 32, 33] "Lord Palmerston might have been seen describing an infinite number of circles with Madame de Lieven," insular prejudices gave way, and waltzing became general.

TO THE PUBLISHER

SIR,

I am a country Gentleman of a midland county. I might have been a Parliament-man for a certain borough, having had the offer of as many votes as General T at the general election in 1812<sup>1</sup> But I was all for domestic happiness, as, fifteen years ago, on a visit to London, I married a middle-aged Maid of Honour We lived happily at Hornem Hall till last Season, when my wife and I were invited by the Countess of Waltzaway (a distant relation of my Spouse) to pass the winter in town Thinking no harm, and our Girls being come to a marriageable (or, as they call it, marketable) age, and having besides a Chancery suit inveterately entailed upon the family estate, we came up in our old chariot,—of which, by the bye, my wife grew so ashamed in less than a week, that I was obliged to buy a second-hand barouche, of which I might mount the box, Mrs H says, if I could drive, but never see the inside—that place being reserved for the Honourable Augustus Tiptoe, her partner-general and Opera-knight. Hearing great praises of Mrs. H's dancing (she was famous for birthnight minuets in the latter end of the last century), I unbooted, and went to a ball at the Countess's, expecting to see a country dance, or, at most, Cotillons, reels, and all the old paces to the newest tunes. But, judge of my surprise, on arriving, to see poor dear Mrs. Hornem with her arms half round the loins of a huge hussar-looking gentleman I never set eyes on before, and his, to say truth, rather more than half round her waist, turning round, and round, to a d—d see-saw up-and-down sort of tune, that reminded me of the "Black Joke," only more "affettuoso,"<sup>1</sup> till it made me quite giddy with wondering they were not so. By and by they stopped a bit, and I thought they would sit or fall down.—but no, with Mrs. H's hand on his shoulder, "Quam familiariter"<sup>2</sup> (as Terence said, when I was at school,) they walked about a minute, and then at it again, like two cock-chafers spitted on the same bodkin. I asked what all this meant, when, with a loud laugh, a child no older than our Wilhelmina (a name I never heard but in the Vicar of Wakefield, though her mother

<sup>1</sup> State of the poll (last day) 5 [General Tarleton (1754-1833) contested Liverpool in October, 1812 For three days the poll stood at five, and on the last day, eleven Canning and Gascoigne were the successful candidates.]

My Latin is all forgotten, if a man can be said to have forgotten what he never remembered, but I bought my title-page motto of a Catholic priest for a three-shilling bank token, after much haggling for the even sixpence. would call her after the Princess of Swappenbach,) said, "L—d! Mr Hornem, can't you see they're valtzing?" or waltzing (I forget which), and then up she got, and her mother and sister, and away they went, and round-abouted it till supper-time. Now that I know what it is, I like it of all things, and so does Mrs H (though I have broken my shins, and four times overturned Mrs Hornem's maid, in practising the preliminary steps in a morning). Indeed, so much do I like it, that having a turn for rhyme, tastily displayed in some election ballads, and songs in honour of all the victories (but till lately I have had little practice in that way), I sat down, and with the aid of William Fitzgerald, Esq., and a few hints from Dr Busby, (whose recitations I attend, and am monstrous fond of Master Busby's manner of delivering his father's late successful "Drury Lane Address,")<sup>1</sup> I composed the following hymn, wherewithal to make my sentiments known to the Public, whom, nevertheless, I heartily despise, as well as the critics

I am, Sir, yours, etc., etc.

Yet this stupid misnomer, although it shows the near connection between superstition and impiety, so far has its use, that it proves there can be little to dread from those Catholics (inquisitorial Catholics too) who can confer such an appellation on a Protestant. On his marriage he added his wife's double surname to his own, and, thereby, gave the wits their chance. In Rejected Addresses Fitzgerald is made to exclaim—

“Bless every man possess'd of aught to give,
 Long may Long-Tilney-Wellesley-Long-Pole live”

The principals in the duel to which Byron alludes were Wellesley-Pole and Lord Kilworth. The occasion of the quarrel was a misconception of some expression of Pole's at an assembly at Lady Hawarden's (August 6, 1811). A meeting took place on Wimbledon Common (August 9), at which the seconds intervened, and everything was “amicably adjusted.” Some days later a letter appeared in the Morning Post (August 14, 1811), signed “Kilworth,” to the effect that an apology had been offered and accepted. This led to a second meeting on Hounslow Heath (August 15) when shots were exchanged. Again the seconds intervened, and, after more explanations, matters were finally arranged. A jeu d'esprit which appeared in the Morning Chronicle (August 16, 1811) connects the “mortal fracas” with Pole's prowess in waltzing at a fête at Winstead House, near Hackney, where, when the heiress had been wooed and won, his guests used to dine at midnight after the opera.

details omitted in the various * despatches of our eloquent ambassador, he did not state (being too much occupied with the exploits of Colonel C——, in swimming rivers frozen, and galloping over roads impassable,) that one entire province perished by famine in the most melancholy manner, as follows—In General Rostopchin's consummate conflagration, the consumption of tallow and train oil was so great, that the market was inadequate to the demand and thus one hundred and thirty-three thousand persons were starved to death, by being reduced to wholesome diet! the lamp-lighters of London have since subscribed a pint (of oil) a piece, and the tallow-chandlers have unanimously voted a quantity of best moulds (four to the pound), to the relief of the surviving Scythians,—the scarcity will soon, by such exertions, and a proper attention to the quality rather than the quantity of provision, be totally alleviated. It is said, in return, that the untouched Ukraine has subscribed sixty thousand beeves for a day's meal to our suffering manufacturers.

[Hamburg fell to Napoleon's forces in 1810, and thenceforward the mails from the north of Europe were despatched from Anhalt, or Gothenberg, or Heligoland. In 1811 an attempt to enforce the conscription resulted in the emigration of numbers of young men of suitable age for military service. The unfortunate city was deprived of mails and miles at the same time. Heligoland, which was taken by the British in 1807, and turned into a depôt for the importation of smuggled goods to French territory, afforded a meeting-place for British and continental traders. Mails from Heligoland detailed rumours of what was taking place at the centres of war, but the newspapers occasionally threw doubts on the information obtained from this source. Lord Cathcart's despatch, dated November 23, appeared in the Gazette December 16 1812. The paragraph which appealed to Byron's sense of humour is as follows: "The expedition of Colonel Chernichef (sic) [the Czar's aide-de-camp] was a continued and extraordinary exertion, he having marched seven hundred wags (sic) in five days, and worn several pairs"]

1 It cannot be complained now, as in the Lady Baussière's time, of the "Sieur de la Croix," that there be "no whiskers," but how far these are indications of valour in the field, or elsewhere, may still be questionable. Much may be, and hath been,* avouched on both sides. In the olden time philosophers had whiskers, and soldiers none—Scipio himself was shaven—Hannibal thought his one eye handsome enough without a beard, but Adrian, the emperor, wore a beard (having warts on his chin, which neither the Empress Sabina nor even the courtiers could abide)—Turenne had whiskers, Marlborough none—Buonaparte is unwhiskered, the Regent whiskered, "ergat" greatness of mind and whiskers may or may not go together, but certainly the different occurrences, since the growth of the last mentioned, go further in behalf of whiskers than the anathema of Anselm did against long hair in the reign of Henry I—Formerly, red was a favourite colour. See Lodowick Barrey's comedy of Ran Alley 1661, Act I Scene 1.

"Taffeta Now for a wager—What coloured beard comes next by the window?

"Adriana. A black man's, I think.

"Taffeta I think not so. I think a red, for that is most in fashion."

There is "nothing new under the sun" but red, then a favourite, has now subsided into a favourite's colour. [This is, doubtless, an allusion to Lord Yarmouth, whose fiery whiskers gained him the nickname of "Red Herrings"]

* The paragraph "Much may be" down to "reign of Henry I" was added in Revise 1, and the remainder of the note in Revise 2.

 And turns—if nothing else—at least our heads,
 With thee even clumsy cits attempt to bounce,
 And cockney's practise what they can't pronounce
 Gods ! how the glorious theme my strain exalts,
 And Rhyme finds partner Rhyme in praise of "Waltz !"

1 [Madame Genlis (Stephanie Félicité Ducrest, Marquise de Sillery), commenting on the waltz, writes, "As a foreigner, I shall not take the liberty to censure this kind of dance, but this I can say, that it appears intolerable to German writers of superior merits who are not accused of severity of manners," and by way of example instances M. Jacobi, who affirms that "Werther (Sorrows of Werther, Letter ix.), the lover of Charlotte, swears that, were he to perish for it, never should a girl for whom he entertained any affection, and on whom he had honourable views, dance the waltz with any other man besides himself"—Selections from the Works of Madame de Genlis (1806), p. 65]

Compare, too, "Faulkland" on country-dances in The Rivals, act ii sc. 1, "Country-dances ! jigs and reels ! A minuet I could have forgiven      Zounds ! had she made one in a cotillon—I believe I could have forgiven even that—but to be monkey-led for a night ! to run the gauntlet through a string of amorous palming puppies      Oh, Jack, there never can be but one man in the world whom a truly modest and delicate woman ought to pair with in a country dance, and even then the rest of the couples should be her great-uncles and aunts !"]

Blest was the time Waltz chose for her debut! 161
 The Court, the Regent, like herself were new,<sup>1</sup>

1 An anachronism—Waltz and the battle of Austerlitz are before said to have opened the ball together, the bard means (if he means anything), Waltz was not so much in vogue till the Regent attained the acmé of his popularity. Waltz, the comet, whiskers, and the new government, illuminated heaven and earth, in all their glory, much about the same time of these the comet only has disappeared, the other three continue to astonish us still—Printer's Devil

[As the Printer's Devil intimates, the various novelties of the age of "Waltz" are somewhat loosely enumerated. The Comet, which signalized 1811, the year of the restricted Regency, had disappeared before the Prince and his satellites burst into full blaze in 1812. It was (see Historical Record of the Life Guards, 1835, p. 177) in 1812 that the Prince Regent commanded the following alterations to be made in the equipments of the regiment of Life Guards: "Cocked hats with feathers to be discontinued, and brass helmets with black horsehair crests substituted. Long coats, trimmed with gold lace across the front. Shirts and cuffs to be replaced by short corsees," etc., etc. In the same branch of the service, whiskers were already in vogue. The "new laws" were those embodied in the "Frame-work Bill," which Byron denounced in his speech in the House of Lords, Feb. 27, 1812. Formerly the breaking of frames had been treated "as a minor felony, punishable by transportation for fourteen years," and the object of the bill was to make such offences capital. The bill passed into law on March 5, and as a result we read (Annual Register, 1812, pp. 38, 39) that on May 24 a special commission for the rioters of Cheshire was opened by Judge Dallas at Chester. "His lordship passed the awful sentence of death upon sixteen, and in a most impressioned address, held out not the smallest hope of mercy." Of these five only were hanged.

Owing to the scarcity of silver coinage, the Bank of England was empowered to issue bank-tokens for various sums (Mr. Hornem bought his motto for The Waltz with a three-shilling bank-token, see note to Preface) which came into circulation on July 9, 1811. The "new ninepences" which were said to be forthcoming never passed into circulation at all. A single "pattern" coin (on the obverse, Bank Token, Ninepence, 1812) is preserved in the British Museum (see privately printed Catalogue, by W. Boyne

1 The gentle, or ferocious, reader may fill up the blank as he pleases—there are several dissyllabic names at his service (being already in the Regent's) it would not be fair to back any peculiar initial against the alphabet, as every month will add to the list now entered for the sweep-stakes, —a distinguished consonant is said to be the favourite, much against the wishes of the knowing ones—[Revise] [In the Revise the line, which is not in the MS, ran, "So saith the Muse, my M—— what say you?" The name intended to be supplied is "Moira."

On Perceval's death (May 11, 1812), Lord Liverpool became Prime Minister, but was unable to carry on the government. Accordingly the Prince Regent desired the Marquis Wellesley and Canning to approach Lords Grey and Grenville with regard to the formation of a coalition ministry. They were unsuccessful, and as a next step Lord Moira (Francis Rawdon, first Marquis of Hastings, 1754–1826) was empowered to make overtures in the same quarter. The Whig Lords stipulated that the regulation of the Household should rest with ministers, and to this Moira would not consent, possibly because the Prince's favourite, Lord Yar-mouth, was Vice-Chamberlain. Negotiations were again broken off, and on June 9 Liverpool began his long term of office as Prime Minister. "I sate," writes Byron, "in the debate or rather discussion in the House of Lords on that question (the second negotiation) immediately behind Moira, who, while Grey was speaking, turned round to me repeatedly, and asked me whether I agreed with him. It was an awkward question to me, who had not heard both sides. Moira kept repeating to me, 'It is not so, it is so and so,' etc (Letter to W. Binkes (undated), Life, p. 162). Hence the question, "My Moira, what say you?"
